The victim checked with his bank and was informed that it would take a day for the check to clear. The next day the victim sent his $1,000.00 via Western Union to the suspect. The victim checked with his bank later and learned that the buyer's check was bogus. He is now out $1,000.00 on his attempt to make $50.00 on a book sale. In this case, anyone who receives a check for more than the negotiated deal should consider this a scam. Anyone trading with someone should not forward the item until at least five days in order to validate the check.

Bring the Gym Home

Creating a gym in your home may be easier than you think. No longer are large, expensive pieces of equipment the only option in bringing the gym home. With the purchase of a jump rope, resistance bands/tubing, a medicine ball and stability ball, you can create a fully functional gym in your house. These items are inexpensive, take up minimal space and can be used to perform hundreds of exercises.

The following are sample exercises using a jump rope, resistance band, medicine ball and stability ball:

- Jump rope: Great for cardiovascular training.
- Resistance band: Bicep curls (works front of arms). Hold handles and place bands under your feet. With your palms facing forward, bend your elbows bringing your palms toward your armpits. Lower, then repeat.
- Medicine ball: Overhead tricep extension (works back of arms). With feet staggered and shoulder-width apart and ball grasped between hands, extend your arms directly overhead, close to your ears. Lower the ball by bending your arms directly behind your head until your arms are at a 90-degree angle. Extend your arms, and then repeat.
- Stability ball: Wall squats (works legs and glutes). Find a sturdy empty wall and place the ball against it. Place your middle to lower back against the ball. Walk your feet slightly forward, still keeping the ball behind you. Lower yourself slowly toward the ground no lower than 90 degrees. Press through your heels and straighten your legs* to stand back up. Repeat.

Complete one to three sets, 10-15 repetitions of each of these exercises. Remember to breathe and support your abdominals and back through each repetition.

Be sure to talk with your physician or fitness professional about developing a fitness program that can be done at home. He or she can instruct you on what weight and size equipment can best aid you in reaching your fitness goals. The purchase of fitness equipment alone will not make you fit, so it is extremely important to receive proper instruction of how and when to use the equipment you have selected. Do not invest in any equipment until you have a plan to utilize it.

Slowly grow your collection of fitness equipment. Purchase one piece of equipment and incorporate it into your fitness plan, then add another. As with large fitness equipment, if you just don't put it to use, it will collect dust.

Fitness equipment can be found at most sporting-goods stores. Two companies that I recommend are Spriproducts, Inc. (1-800-222-7774, www.spriproducts.com) and Perform Better (1-888-556-7464, www.performbetter.com). Both companies carry a large assortment of high-quality fitness equipment.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

Time-Saving Fixes For Hectic Mornings

(ARA) - From taking the kids to school to packing your husband's bag for his overnight business trip, women often find that they don't have enough time to take care of their own beauty and health needs. With so many things on their plate, it can be easy to let personal hygiene and fashion fall by the wayside. However, despite a jam-packed schedule, there are plenty of time-saving fixes that busy moms and women can incorporate to indulge themselves, while still getting the kids to school on time.

* Plan Ahead: Set up tomorrow's breakfast and bagged lunch before going to sleep tonight. Setting out fruit and cereal or packing up leftovers can be done easily following dinner cleanup. Evening preparations will give you a few extra minutes in the morning to actually sit down and enjoy a healthy start to your day, rather than eating in a rush over the counter.

* Wardrobe Ready: One of the most common reasons for being rushed in the mornings is figuring out what to wear to work. Stop standing aimlessly in the closet for 20 minutes by taking time on Sunday to pick out your outfits for the rest of the week. This will give you time to indulge your fashionista on Sunday rather than rushing your choices in the mornings. Also, buy a fabric steamer instead of an iron for quick and easy wrinkle relief. It releases wrinkles faster, and is actually one of the safest, gentlest ways to remove wrinkles from your clothes.

* Get Pick-y: You don't have to neglect your oral care regimen when you're in a hurry. New Oral-B Advantage Floss Picks (Oral-B FlossPicks.com) are designed with an easy-to-grip handle and TextureSlide fiber so you can incorporate daily flossing easily and comfortably. If you're crunched for time during the morning rush, toss a couple of Picks in your purse for on-the-go oral care. If you want a great minty taste following your morning coffee, try the Cool Mint flavor.

* Double-Duty: Being busy isn't an excuse for not looking presentable. Two-in-one beauty products that simplify morning routines will save time and space in the medicine cabinet or shower. Shampoo-plus-conditioner combinations and daily facial moisturizer with SPF will streamline the time between waking and work.

* Accessorize: Even the most basic of outfits can look dressier when you accessorize the right way. If you don't have time to pull together a fabulous outfit, throw on some fancy earrings or a nice belt and instantly dress your outfit. The small details can make it look like you took the time to dress up in the morning.

Saving a couple of minutes here and there definitely adds up! Incorporating time-saving fixes into daily routines allows for added "me" time, alleviating stress and boosting self confidence.

Simple Lifestyle Changes Can Boost Your Memory

(ARA) - Do you ever find yourself at the grocery store struggling to remember what you came for? Are you forgetting birthdays and lunch dates? If these situations sound familiar to you, you're not alone. Forgetfulness is one of the most common complaints of those in middle age and beyond.

Memory loss and Alzheimer's disease rank high on the list of senior fears. Alzheimer's was the No. 1 fear of aging, according to research conducted by Bankers Life and Casualty Company, a national life and health insurer that focuses on serving the retirement needs of the middle market. Similarly, a national poll by Research!America and PARADE magazine showed that adults were more than twice as likely to fear losing their mental capacity as their physical ability.

The good news is according to researchers at John Hopkins, most memory loss has nothing to do with Alzheimer's disease. Nearly all of us, they say, take more time to learn and recall information as we age.

There are simple things that you can do in your everyday life to increase your ability to retain information and exercise your brain.

Engage your brain.

Mentally stimulating activities strengthen brain cells and the connection between them. You can keep those cells in shape by giving them a workout. Instead of passively watching TV, try something that engages your brain: reading, writing, taking a class, doing a crossword puzzle or even learning a new game to play with family members.

Stay in touch.

Loneliness is linked to depression, a risk factor for memory loss. Try to keep your social network strong by volunteering or simply helping a neighbor. Make a conscious effort to stay connected with friends and relatives by visiting with them or keeping in touch by phone or e-mail.

Eat healthy.

Maintaining a balanced diet, low in saturated fats is said to be better for cognitive functioning. In addition, the Alzheimer's Association notes growing evidence that a diet rich in dark vegetables and fruits -- which contain antioxidants -- may help protect brain cells.

Stay active.

Regular exercise can increase oxygen to the brain. It can also lower the risk for diseases that can lead to memory loss, such as diabetes and cardiovascular disease. Your doctor can help you develop an exercise regime that's best for you.

When to seek help.

"It's important to know the difference between normal forgetting and something more serious," says Scott Perry, president of Bankers Life and Casualty Company, who serves on the board of directors of his local Alzheimer's Association chapter.

Serious memory problems, according to the National Institute on Aging, are those that affect a person's ability to perform everyday activities. For example:

- * Asking the same questions over and over.
- * Becoming lost in familiar places.
- * Not being able to follow directions.
- * Getting very confused about time, people and places.
- * Losing interest in daily activities such as grooming and eating.

If you have concerns about your memory, talk to your doctor right away. For more topics of interest, visit www.bankers.com and click "Senior Resources."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustlin, D.M.D.

IS GUM DISEASE LINKED TO CANCER?

Gum disease may raise the risk of developing cancer. This finding is based on a long-running study in which male health professionals with a history of gum disease were found to have a 14 percent higher overall risk of developing cancer. After controlling for smoking and other risk factors, periodontal disease was found to be significantly associated with an increased risk of lung, kidney, pancreatic, and hematological (blood) cancers. This higher overall risk was even detected in men who had never smoked. Researchers point out that people with gum disease have inflammation in their blood, and inflammation has been linked with cancer. It is also possible that whatever causes the inflammation may also cause gum disease and cancer. Always feel free to discuss your dental concerns with us. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we practice modern dentistry. We provide the best care possible by evaluating your needs individually. We'll explain our findings and recommendations, and together we'll choose the best treatment plan. Our concern is your comfort and confidence - our goal is to help you preserve your natural teeth for a lifetime. Rest assured that you can trust the health of your teeth to our extensive experience and training. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Whether or not maintaining good oral hygiene can help prevent cancer, preventing and treating periodontal (gum) disease is a good end in itself.

Presidents Pull Out Win At W-H

By SEAN BRENNAN

A gusty call, a lucky bounce and some solid defense helped the Quincy Presidents pull out a 3-0 road victory over Whitman-Hanson High School last Friday night.

The victory pushed Quincy's record to 3-3 overall and 1-1 in the Patriot League.

Facing a dwindling first-half game clock that read twenty seconds, Quincy was looking at a fourth down and eight yards to go at the W-H 20-yard line with the score deadlocked at 0-0. Instead of gambling and going for the six points-the Presidents had previously been denied on a third down pass attempt into the end zone-head coach Bill Reardon sent his senior placekicker, Mark Gilbody, onto the field to attempt a 37-yard field goal.

Gilbody rewarded his coach's decision by booting the ball through the uprights (thanks to a generous bounce off the crossbar), giving the Presidents the 3-0 lead that they would not relinquish in the second half.

"On the third down play before Mark kicked the field goal we ran a fade route," said Reardon. "But Whitman-Hanson did a nice job of knocking the ball away from Anthony Raddatz in the end zone. Looking at fourth down, we decided to give him the chance to go out there and kick the ball.

"The kick hit the crossbar and bounced through. It ended up being the difference."

The successful kick helped to take the sting out of some of the earlier missed opportunities on offense that the Presidents squandered earlier in the half. Quincy, for the game, drove the ball inside the Panthers 30-yard line five times but could not convert. The Gilbody kick was the one and only time Quincy would put points on the board.

"We had our chances to score all game," added Reardon. "We got inside their 30-yard line five separate times and could not get points. But that kick was big and our defense held them down all game long."

Gilbody would later miss on a third quarter 24-yard field goal attempt.

On the defensive side of the ball, the Presidents were not lacking for stars or big plays. Quincy held the Panthers down all game; the defensive line and linebackers pressured the quarterback and shutdown the run and the defensive backfield took away any thought of a passing attack.

On the final offensive play of the game for the Panthers, who at the time were driving down the field for the go-ahead score, senior safety Adam Jean-Baptist broke up a pass with a monster hit and Quincy regained control of the ball and quarterback Lance Peterson took a knee, running out the clock.

"Our defense has been spectacular most of the season," said Reardon. "They played very well against Whitman-Hanson. It seems like every game we have someone new step up and make a big play. The play by Adam at the end of the game was critical. It helped to stop any thought they may have had of scoring late."

Reardon also noted the play of senior linebackers Sean Gray (INT) and Tim Lewis (sack) and senior defensive lineman EJ Louis (sack).

"The defense is improving each week and in this game we had several players step up at critical points and make stops or force turnovers. The unit seems to be feeding off each other as the season moves along."

With his team winning its second game this month by three points or less (Quincy beat Rockland 7-6 on Oct. 3), Reardon is starting to get a feel for where his team is at midway through the 2008 season. And what he sees is encouraging.

"There are two things I like about this team," he said. "These kids fight hard to the end of the game. Like the play by Adam illustrates, we are making plays at the end of games. Sometimes when you are used to losing (Quincy came into 2008 with two straight 3-7 campaigns) players just assume they can't pull it out. But these kids are making plays when it counts."

"Secondly, this team continues to get better every week. They may make a mistake but we have been good at moving forward and not letting it affect the game. It is good to see."

Quincy is scheduled to play on the road this Saturday against Silver Lake HS. Kickoff is at 2 p.m.

North Quincy Still Has Shot At 12th Postseason

By SEAN BRENNAN

Their backs are against the wall, but the North Quincy Red Raiders girls' soccer team still has some fight left in them as the season begins to wind down.

With five games remaining in the regular season, the Raiders, who currently hold a 5-8-2 record, need to win four out of these five games to reach their twelfth straight post-season. Not impossible, but definitely a challenge.

"We have those five games left and we need to win four of them to keep our streak of post-season appearances alive," said NQ head coach Paul Bregoli. "We struggled early in the year scoring goals and making things happen on the offensive side of the field, but recently we have started to show some toughness and we have started to attack and as a result we have picked up some wins. We have a challenge ahead of us but the opportunity is still out there."

The Raiders dropped a 7-2 decision to Patriot League foe Hanover High School on Oct. 14, but came back in force and scored an important 2-0 win over league opponent Randolph High School last Thursday.

Against Randolph, NQ senior captain Brittany Folkins scored on a corner kick six minutes into the game to give the Raiders the early 1-0 advantage. Two minutes after Folkins scored (her goal was the second of her varsity career and her second in two games) junior midfielder Dana Djerf doubled the score with a goal of her own. The 2-0 first half lead held up as the Raider defense and the goalkeeping of Siobhan Camell did not allow Randolph any quality scoring chances the rest of the way. The shutout was Camell's fourth of the fall.

"Brittany played great and the defense and goalkeeping was solid," said Bregoli. "We really needed a win and the girls played tough and with an edge and it showed. If we can continue to play that way the rest of the season then we should compete for that post season spot."

Also playing well against Randolph were sophomore Shannon Coleman and junior Jackie Kelley.

In the game against Hanover, the Raiders fell behind early, but even with Hanover pushing the attack, NQ never backed down.

Folkins got North Quincy on the board with her first varsity goal with the assist going to senior Lindsay Reilly.

"Hanover is good but my team came back and made some things happen," said

Bregoli. "They didn't give in and they played with an edge all game long. It was a tough loss but some good did come out of it."

Freshman Jonlyn Lydon scored the Raiders second goal of the game with an assist from Folkins. The goal was Lydon's first career varsity goal.

"All game long Folkins was a force up front and we played a strong game all around," added Bregoli. "We had some players step up and play well against a good team."

Bregoli singled out the play of Folkins, seniors Erin Collins and Lindsay Reilly and junior Kristen Peterson. He also spoke highly of the play of senior Jess Howlett in goal.

The Raiders played against Rockland High School on Tuesday and are scheduled to play against Middleboro High School today (Oct. 23), Pembroke High School Friday (Oct. 24) and next Monday against Somerville High School. A makeup game against Scituate High School will be played next week.

"We have to bear down and win games," said Bregoli. "The possibility is still out there for us to make a post season run. After struggling all year scoring goals, we have six in the last three games and hopefully we can carry that over during this final stretch."

North Quincy Looks To Rebound Against Hanover Raiders' Win Streak Snapped

By SEAN BRENNAN

The winning streak is over.

After a disappointing 23-14 loss to Patriot League opponent Rockland High School last Friday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium, the North Quincy Red Raiders will look to fix what went wrong and move forward to their game this Friday against Hanover High School.

North Quincy (4-2 overall, 1-1 in league play), which was riding a four-game winning streak, a streak that saw the defense allow just one offensive touchdown during that stretch, fell behind the Bulldogs 3-0 just minutes into the opening quarter.

Receiving the ball first, the Raiders turned the ball over on their third play from scrimmage and Rockland took advantage of this mistake by converting on a 30-yard field goal moments later. Trailing for the first time in over ten quarters, North Quincy followed the Rockland field goal by going three-and-out on its next possession, and was forced to punt the ball back to the Bulldogs.

Rockland chewed up six minutes of the game-clock; moving 65 yards down the field and scoring from 11 yards out on a fourth-and-one at the start of the second quarter for a 10-0 lead.

After more than a quarter and a half, the Raiders could get nothing going against Rockland's defense, but then a switch went on, and just like that, NQ took over the game with five minutes plus remaining in the first half. Junior quarterback Mike Stanton led his team on a long drive, using mostly a pass happy attack.

A 15-yard completion from Stanton to Patrick Watkins was followed with a 74-yard touchdown strike to Tim Stille that cut the Rockland lead to 10-7. Stille finished the game with five catches for 133 yards and a touchdown.

With the momentum shifting towards the Red Raider sideline, the NQ defense showed its mettle by forcing the Bulldogs into a three-and-out. The Raiders took the ball back with 2:15 left in the half and Stanton took his team 78 yards in 1:10. After a 41-yard pass from Stanton to Paul Reamer set the drive in motion, Stanton found Matt Jay on a 12-yard pass for his second touchdown of the game. The score at halftime was 14-10 North Quincy.

Even after this late first-half offensive barrage by the Raiders, the Bulldogs still had some bite left in them. Rockland took the opening kickoff of the second half and drove 62 yards; capping the impressive possession off with a 22-yard touchdown run. The 17-14 lead would hold up the rest of the way as North Quincy turned the ball over twice in the half.

The play that broke the back of the Raiders occurred late in the fourth quarter as they were trying to drive the length of the field for the go-ahead score. NQ held possession of the ball deep in their end of the field, and as Stanton dropped back to pass, the Bulldog defensive line forced a fumble that was recovered inside the five-yard line. On the following play, the Bulldogs scored a touchdown to run the score to 23-14.

Stanton (15-for-23, 273 yards, 2 TDs) was intercepted on the Raiders next possession and the winning streak was over.

North Quincy and Hanover High School will square off at 7 p.m. Friday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Raiders Defeat Randolph, Scituate To Run Record To 8-5-3

The North Quincy Red Raiders are a team that all comers should be wary of when the regular season shifts to the post-season.

NQ (8-5-3 overall, 7-4-3 in the Patriot League) has four games remaining (the team played Tuesday night against Rockland HS) on its regular season schedule, and if the last two games are any indication, these Raiders may be peaking at the perfect time.

North Quincy finished off a two-win week with a 3-1 victory over Patriot League foe Scituate High School over the weekend.

Last Thursday, NQ knocked off league opponent Randolph High School 9-1. The game had been knotted at 0-0 early in the first half, but within a ten-minute span, North's Shane Regan, a senior captain, blew the doors wide open.

Regan netted four goals in those ten minutes late in the half and the Raiders rolled to victory. Regan capped off his spectacular game with two more goals in the second half for a total of six. For the season, Regan has 14 goals and 19 assists in 15 games.

Forward Nick Carbone and defender Tim Gillis-on a penalty kick-both scored and senior captain Mike Prioli finished the game with three assists.

Ryan Louis was solid in goal, allowing just the one goal late in the game.

The Raiders are scheduled to play Middleboro High School today (Thursday) at 3:30 p.m. at Teal Field before closing the regular season with a home game on Saturday against Milton HS (3 p.m. Veterans Memorial Stadium) and a home game Monday against Somerville HS (3:45 p.m. Teal Field).

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A colleague might offer to open a door for you professionally. But before you walk through it, be sure this "favor" isn't attached to an obligation you might find difficult to discharge.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your creativity, your persistence and your reliability could lead to a major career shift. Be sure to use that other Taurean trait, your practicality, when discussing what the job offers.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A changing situation might require some adjustments you might not have been prepared to make. However, flexibility in this matter could be the best course to follow at this time.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You're in a period of fluctuating moods, which is not unusual for the Moon Child. Your emotions stabilize by the 26th. Meanwhile, try to hold off making major decisions until then.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) That keen sense of perception helps you hunt down those minute details that others overlook. And, of course, your Leonine ego will accept the expected praise with good grace.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Be careful not to be confrontational when raising a work-related issue. Better to make a request than a demand. And, of course, be prepared to back up your case with facts.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your ego might be hurt when a colleague turns down your offer to help. But accept it as a rejection of your offer, not of you. A friend from the past could re-emerge by week's end.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A flow of positive energy turns a work project you didn't want to do into something you actually love doing. Now, take that attitude into your social, intimate life — and enjoy what follows.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Working hard to meet your professional goals is fine. But don't neglect your private life, especially where it concerns your more cherished relationships.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) "Patience" remains the key word in dealing with an emotionally sensitive situation involving a close friend or family member. Help comes your way by week's end.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) With new information coming in, it's a good time to rethink some of your goals without taking suggestions from others, no matter how well-meaning they might be.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Making progress on your project is relatively easy in the early part of the week. A problem could arise midweek. But all goes swimmingly once it's resolved.

BORN THIS WEEK: Holding fast to your principles, no matter what, inspires others to follow your example.

DON MCCARTHY
Managing DirectorA THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"He had a lot of courage".
... It is a commendable compliment; a fine tribute at any time.
... before, during or after the final moment of life.

Today, perhaps more than at any other time, it takes a lot of courage to bear witness to our beliefs, to avoid compromise when conscience says we must. It takes courage at times to agree. And it takes courage to disagree when disagree we must.

I like this quote by Ralph Waldo Emerson, "Whatever you do, you need courage. Whatever course you decide upon, there is always someone to tell you - 'You are wrong.'" There are always difficulties arising which tempt you to believe that your critics are right. To map out a course of action and follow it to an end, requires some of the same courage which a soldier needs. Peace has its victories, but it takes brave men to win them."

TEAM HOFBRAU recently won its fourth consecutive Quincy Merchant League softball title with a come-from-behind victory over arch rival Malachy's.

Team Hofbrau Wins Fourth Straight Quincy Merchant Softball Title

Team Hofbrau tightened its grip on Quincy Merchant League softball, winning its fourth consecutive title with yet another dramatic come-from-behind victory, 8-7 over arch rival Malachy's.

Hoffy took the best-of-seven series 4-1. All of the games were played at Kincaide Field.

Malachy's started off strong with two runs in the top of the first off Hofbrau starter Steve Lannan. Hoffy quickly answered with a lead-off home run from centerfielder Nelly Feliciano. First baseman Jim Dennis and second baseman Ramon followed with singles and were later driven in by outfielder Steve Yocco's line drive to center.

After Lannan shut down Malachy's in the top of the second, Hoffy added another run in the bottom of the second frame when DH Keith McCray tripled to left and scored on a fielder's choice by outfielder Dave Brolin.

The powerful Malachy's lineup exploded for five runs in the top of the third inning to retake the lead at 7-3. Crafty pitching from Malachy's starter exposed a lack of discipline from the Hoffy batters as the three-time defending champs would only muster three hits over the next four innings. The side was retired in order in both the fifth and sixth innings, marking the first time all season that Hoffy had been held without a baserunner for two consecutive innings.

Hoffy ace Lannan was equal to the task, shutting down Big Green for the last four innings of the game.

Malachy's led 7-5 going into the bottom of the seventh. Hofbrau then saved its best comeback of the season for last. With one out, Brolin singled to right, bringing up the top of the lineup. Nelly reach on a fielder's choice. Dennis singled to center to put runners on the corners. Ramon then ripped a single to right center to score Nelly and make it 7-6. With two outs, runners on first and third and Hoffy slugger Scott "The Game" Logan coming to the plate, Malachy's played a hunch and intentionally walked Logan to load the bases for shortstop Bill Wysocki. Although Wysocki had been struggling at the plate earlier in the night, his longstanding penchant for delivering in the clutch came through as he drilled the second pitch he saw into the gap in left center scoring Dennis with the tying run and Ramon with the winning run.

The entire Hoffy team stormed the field in celebration before the QML Championship Trophy was brought over for photos. It was another true team victory as every Hoffy batter reached safely at least once and stellar defense from Nelly, Tom Fratolillo, Ramon and catcher Greg Harper kept Malachy's at bay long enough for the comeback.

Jim Dennis turned in the greatest performance by a player-manager in the modern era. Pete Rose, Joe Torre, Frank Robinson, Hank Bauer? None of them won championships as player-managers. JD faced a daunting task in taking over for the beloved Hall of Fame Coach Murphy. Dennis quickly got the team to gel and play as a cohesive unit that never quit. Faced with the usual contenders in Big Times and Malachy's, plus solid newcomer Paddy Barrys, Hoffy won in a variety of ways enroute to the winningest season in league history.

Hofbrau outfielder Glen Bosse was named series Most Valuable Player. Bosse posted an other-worldly .769 batting average in the series, making only 3 outs and taking a team high five walks. Bosse bolstered the offensive production with solid defense in the outfield as well as second base in the post-season.

Including the post season, Hoffy is now 85-7 over the last three seasons, a .924 winning percentage.

City Council Passes On Wind Power Discussion

While proponents of wind power chafed restlessly at the bit, the City Council Monday night passed up discussion and a possible vote on a zoning ordinance regulating the placement of such windmills.

The ordinance, proposed Aug. 9 by Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi and languishing in the Council's Ordinance Committee ever since, was on an early agenda but was taken off at the last minute.

The ordinance would ban wind facilities of more than 60 kilowatts capacity without a Special Zoning Permit from the Planning Board and lists the visual, safety and environmental impacts that must be considered.

Meanwhile, Sen. Michael Morrissey told proponents gathered for a panel discussion at the Quincy Historical Society that the future of wind power in Quincy depends on passage of the ordinance.

Maura O'Gara and Steve Perdios, members of the executive committee of the Quincy Environmental Network, sponsors of the meeting, said potential builders of wind mills are waiting until the ordinance is passed before proceeding.

O'Gara said several state and private entities that are interested in building windmills in Quincy, notably the MWRA and the owner of land in the old Fore River Shipyard.

Morrissey told the 80 people in attendance that one of the best ways to save energy and money was to build a facility at a location that has great need for electricity on site.

One such site is the MWRA facility on Nut Island with its high energy usage and its abundant wind.

P. J. Foley suggested that Quincy has as many as 23 good locations, including Quarry Hills and the Braintree Split. Morrissey named the Quincy Youth Arena area as a possibility.

Martha Broad of the Mass Technology Council said the MTC could, at some point, offer "actual financial support" for a windmill in Quincy and Massachusetts was one of two states that would receive federal funds to build a "cutting edge" wind mill blade facility.

IBEW Local 103's wind mill in Dorchester and the twin wind mills in the town of Hull were cited as enhancing the scenery around it.

Foley noted that real estate ads in Hull often touted the wind mills as an attraction.

"People who have one wind mill tend to want another one," said Larry Chretien of the Mass Energy Consumer Alliance.

Tips Offered Boomers On Talking To Aging Parents

How and when do you talk to your aging mom and dad about driving, dating and independence??

Jennifer Moran of Home Instead Senior Care will suggest some answers in a free program Wednesday, Oct. 22, at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40

Washington St.

Her program, "The 40/70 Rule: Conversation Starters for Boomers and Their Senior Loved Ones," will provide practical ways to talk to parents before an emergency or crisis arises.

The "40/70 Rule" means that if you are 40 and your parents are 70, it's time to start talking about certain senior topics. The difficulty lies in the apparent reversal of the usual child/adult roles.

rise" that Sept. 26. A letter from Mayor McIntyre welcomed us.

Reaction to that first issue was encouraging. But there were skeptics who read the "Sunrise" editorial and predicted "Sunset" would follow within six months.

And, there were times we thought they would prove right.

But fortunately there were those-readers, news sources and advertisers-who strongly believed in a community newspaper and also felt that having two newspapers in town was better than having just one.

Especially Remo and Pete who committed to a series of two-page centerfold ads that were like a gift from Heaven.

Readers who plunked down a dime for a copy encouraged us. Those who paid $3.50 in advance for a year's subscription by mail showed their faith in us despite the skeptics and their predictions of doom.

Many of you were among our supporters back then. And thanks to you, we hung in there and are still here today-40 years later.

It all started in a second floor corner office in the old Quincy Conservatory building at 7 Foster Street.

We moved a year later to another second floor office above the Kincaide furniture store in the Mutual Building on Hancock Street, later destroyed by fire.

We finally made it to the street floor in February 1975 at our present location in the former Quincy Savings Bank building. Charlie Pearce, president of the bank, made it financially possible for us to make that important move. We later purchased our unit and became a Quincy taxpayer.

We have seen many changes in Quincy's landscape these 40 years: the coming of the T, State Street South, Marina Bay, Crown Colony, new City Hall, additions to Quincy Medical Center and the Thomas Crane Library, the Quincy Center Plaza, Granite Links, Marriott Hotel, among them.

And have seen some landmarks disappear: Remick's, the Bargain Center, the Waldorf Restaurant, DiMarzio's roller skating rink, and, more recently, WJDA, the Registry of Motor Vehicles and Beechwood Life Center.

We have covered the administrations of seven mayors and now Tom Koch our eighth. Their accomplishments, goals and frustrations.

We saw Mayor Walter Hannon go home one election night the apparent winner only to have a recount say no, the real winner was Joseph LaRaia.

And those two more recent big mayoral upsets: William Phelan defeating six-term incumbent James Sheets by 17 votes in the closest mayoral election in the city's history. And six years later, Tom Koch upsetting Phelan.

We bid sad farewell to powerful and popular political figures as Amelio Della Chiesa, James McIntyre, Thomas Burgin, James Burke, Paul Harold, Clifford Marshall.

We have recorded Quincy's economic ups and downs. And have seen Quincy's face change in diversity with an Asian population of 23,000 representing 25 percent of the city's total population.

We have reported the closings of churches and the re-configuration of parishes and most recently the closing of Beth Israel Synagogue.

We have watched our young news carriers grow up; go off to college, into military service-some to war-and into successful business and professional careers.

Among those carriers were young girls who grow up like Gigi and graced our social pages as beautiful brides.

We have chronicled thousands of births, high school and college graduates, dean's lists, honor rolls, and sadly the deaths of civic, business, religious and sports leaders.

We have honored 25 recipients as The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year for outstanding community service. The award was established in 1985.

We cheered when Hank Conroy's Quincy Presidents went undefeated in 1970 to win the Greater Boston League Championship. And in 1992 when Ken McPhee's North Quincy Red Raiders won it all: undefeated season, the Old Colony League title and a last minute victory over Arlington in the Division 1B Super Bowl.

We are often asked, "What is your favorite issue?" And, we reply, as we have for 40 years: the first, because it was the beginning-the one that started it all.

Ranked right up there as we have also said is the Feb. 9, 1978 issue: The Blizzard of '78.

Quincy was virtually paralyzed by 27 inches of snow and winds that gusted to more than 90 miles per hour. And we managed, somehow, to get the paper out just one day late. The banner headlines over the Page 1 story and photos:

The Big Dig Goes On...And On...And On... Please No More!!

One nice side to that blizzard: it united the city, bringing people-neighbors and strangers-together to help one another get through it.

Through the years, The Sun has won a number of awards for editorials, features, supplements and photography from our newspaper peers and community service recognition from a number of Quincy organizations.

One of the awards was the National Newspaper Foundation's Blue Ribbon Award recognizing us as "an outstanding community newspaper."

That's what we wanted to be when that first issue came off the press in 1968. We hope we have been. And will continue to work at it.

It has been an interesting four decades as "Historic Quincy's Hometown Weekly Newspaper."

We have said it before and we would like to say it again: All of you-our readers, advertisers, news sources and carriers-are as much a part of The Quincy Sun as the staff.

Without you we would never have reached this 40th year milestone. Without you, those skeptics might have been right. We might not have made it past those crucial first six months.

With your help and encouragement, we look forward to "going on 50" with confidence and enthusiasm.

We are proud to carry the name Quincy in our banner. That's what we are all about: Quincy. The best city in the world.

As we begin our fifth decade we want to thank all of you for making it possible. You really did.

Thank you, Quincy.

Thank you, most sincerely.

THE QUINCY SUN sign went up at our third and present location in the old Quincy Savings Bank Building, 1372 Hancock St., Feb. 25, 1975.

Shipyard Booming

Delay in construction of the MBTA Red Line was averted when Mayor James McIntyre convinced officials to relocate the site of the North Quincy station 350 feet to spare 22 homes from demolition. It could have been a costly year and a half construction delay.

The General Dynamics Shipyard was booming with a workforce (as of Oct. 24) at 8,336 and 500 job openings still to be filled. There was even talk of the workforce soon reaching 10,000.

"The Granite," the 123-year-old hand-drawn fire tub and the city's first fire fighting apparatus was honored by the Boston Fire Department during Fire Prevention Week.

The Hong Kong Flu was expected to hit the city hard. There was a rush for vaccinations.

The USS Whale, the first nuclear submarine built in Massachusetts, was commissioned at the General Dynamics Shipyard.

Jordan Marsh announced plans for a distribution center — largest in the country in Squantum with completion scheduled for the early 1970s.

Quincy's Vietnam War Memorial was dedicated at Mount Wollaston Cemetery on Veterans Day with 27 names of those from Quincy who had given their lives inscribed on it.

Mayor McIntyre called for widening the span of the Fore River Bridge 300 feet so that General Dynamics could bid on contracts for super-sized ships and tankers.

Quincy was linked to the Natural Warning system or "Hot Line" to give the city a two-minute warning in case of a nuclear attack or disaster.

Deaths included Reuben A. Grossman, city leader and executive of the Grossman Company.

USS WHALE was commissioned at General Dynamics Shipyard Oct. 12, 1968 when the yard was booming with a workforce of over 8,000 and with 500 job openings to be filled.

The Names On The Memorial Would Reach 46

The Vietnam War: The Pain And The Agony

The agony and pain of it all were felt here as Quincy sons gave their lives in a little-known country so far away in a war that had become so controversial it was tearing the nation apart.

The names of 27 of those Quincy sons were inscribed on the Vietnam War Memorial unveiled and dedicated at Mount Wollaston Cemetery on Veterans Day in November 1968.

The 27 names: Brian P. Ahern, Richard C. Archer, Francis Builaert, James E. Casale, Ralph Caspole, James H. Cavicchi, Thomas Chiminello, Basil L. Ciriello, John P. Coughlin, Richard S. Davis, Jr., Robert J. Fay, John W. Granahan, Paul V. Grasso, Lawrence A. Grenham, William D. Hinchey, James J. Jenks, Jr., Stanley W. McCausland, Jr., James F. Murray, George A. Nash, Jr., David A. Pitts, Richard D. Slack, Jr., Alfred V. Schofield, James A. Stark, George W. Underwood, Richard J. Vasconcelos, James M. Walsh, Ralph J. Willard, Jr. Sadly, more names would be added before that war was over. Nineteen more. Bringing the total number of names on the memorial to 46.

The other 19: Michael J. Barry, Charles Bifulchi (MIA), James C. Daigle, Warren C. Deyermond, Christopher C. Donahue, George F. Fell, Jr., Peter J. Gerry, Leo F. Grady, James P. Hickey, Martin R. Keefe, Peter J. Landry, George R. Levesque, Gerald R. Peterson, Joseph M. Pignato, Lawrence E. Sirois, David O. Sullivan, Richard D. Walsh, Gary J. Webb, Raymond J. West.

In February 1969 at the height of the war, Mayor James R. McIntyre ordered the flag at City Hall to be flown "both day and night until the Vietnam War ends and the young men and women of Quincy return."

The flag was finally lowered in February 1973 when the last two Quincy sons, Navy Comdr. Richard A. Stratton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Stratton of North Quincy and Air Force Capt. E. Alan Brudno, son of Dr. and Mrs. James Brudno of Wollaston were released from POW camps.

THE VIETNAM WAR MEMORIAL with 27 names of Quincy men inscribed on it, was dedicated on Veterans Day in 1968 at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. Principal figures at the ceremonies included Mayor James R. McIntyre and Congressman James A. Burke shown at right. Sadly, the list of names grew to over 40 on the memorial.

Stratton, who was a POW for six years, said: "My hometown was the root of whatever strength I had to resist the enemy and stay alive."

"We wept tears of joy," said Brudno of his release after seven and a half years.

But tragedy was to follow.

Just four months later the day before his 33rd birthday-Brudno was found

McIntyre Re-elected To Third Term

Mayor James McIntyre vowed in his midterm address to fight city-wide property revaluation saying it could have a negative impact on the small homeowner.

Several northeast storms dumped 71.5 inches of snow in the city and nearby area, causing numerous power losses. Mayor McIntyre sought the use of Army equipment to help battle the storms.

Contracts were signed for a 226-unit addition to 1000 Southern Artery which, it was believed, would make it the largest elderly housing facility in the nation.

City Hall was draped in black at the death of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower and a memorial service was held at United First Parish Church.

Quincy-born Ruth Gordon won an Academy Award at age 72 as best supporting actress for her role in "Rosemary's Baby." "This is very reassuring," she mused.

A total of 21 were appointed to the Police and Fire Departments. The police appointments made it possible to establish a narcotics division.

General Dynamics Shipyard was still trying to fill 500 jobs. Its annual payroll was over $70 million.

"There is no sense to living any longer. My life is no longer worth living."

He was the first of the returned POWs to die and it made news across the country.

Why did he take his own life?

His brother, Robert J. Brudno had his answer in an article he wrote in Newsweek. It was entitled "Unfinished Business" with the subhead: "I think it's time for anti-Vietnam War Americans to recognize the pain they caused."

Feeling that too much comfort was given to the enemy during the war and not enough to those who came home from it, he wrote, in part:

"He became a victim not just of the North Vietnamese, but of the inability of so many in his own country, during that horrible war, to separate the war from the warriors.

"Whether the war was right or wrong, these were our boys. They deserved our support whatever the cause, whatever the result.

"The anti-war movement has yet to recognize the pain and heartache that it caused. My brother had no say in the politics that sent him to war. The lack of appreciation for what he had done combined with the rationale of those who gave aid and comfort to the enemy, helped destroy the will to live that had kept him alive (as a POW) for all those years."

Forty years later, that war is still painfully remembered.

Broad Meadows was the newest site proposed for a South Shore Community College.

Rezoning of the city was favored in Houghs Neck but opposed in West Quincy.

The new MBTA Red Line extension and adoption of zoning changes led Harvard Business School students in a study to predict Quincy would be the "boom town" of the 1970s.

More than 200 trees were lost to the Dutch Elm disease.

A possible $130-plus tax rate faced property owners after a record $39.9 million municipal budget was passed.

The Waldorf Restaurant, a long-time Quincy Square landmark, was razed to make way for the Quincy Center MBTA parking lot.

Homeowners in flood prone areas could obtain flood insurance for $4 to $5 per $1,000 coverage.

Virginia Pritchett, 20, was crowned Miss Quincy Bay Race Week.

In a public opinion poll taken for Mayor McIntyre, an over-whelming majority of residents said the City Council should have the authority to cut the School Department budget. School Committee Chairman James F. McCormick strongly objected and denounced the poll.

Twenty homes, it was estimated, would have to be taken to make room for the planned Lincoln-Hancock School.

Some 1,100 signed a petition supporting the creation of a Houghs Neck Youth Center at 1095 Sea St.

The undefeated Quincy High School football team was rewarded with a trip to see the Orange Bowl game. The Quincy Fathers Club spearheaded the fundraising.

One of Quincy's most colorful political figures, David S. McIntosh, former Plan E mayor and city councillor, died at age 85.

Thirty-six families were relocated to pave the way for construction of the Lincoln-Hancock School.

A granite marker was dedicated on the site of the original Howard Johnson's on Beale St., Wollaston. Howard D. Johnson himself was there for the ceremony along with his son, Howard B. Johnson.

The School Committee recommended the WNEX property in the Montclair marshes be considered as the site for a new North Quincy High School.

Some 250 10-cent parking meters were installed in Quincy Center, City Councilor Clifford H. Marshall, chairman of the council's Ordinance Committee said, however, they might be illegal because there was no ordinance for their installation.

Amelio Della Chiesa

Remembered With Fondness

By TOM HENSHAW

There was nothing glamorous about Amelio Della Chiesa, not when he is compared to most of the stars in the political firmament today. He was the son of Italian immigrants. He was a plumber by trade, a graduate of what was then Quincy Trade School.

But when he died at his retirement home in Pembroke on Oct. 1, 1975, at the age of 74, he was recalled as one of Quincy's greatest mayors, a man who helped guide his city through one of its most trying episodes, the switch from Plan A to Plan E and back again.

Until the arrival of Jim Sheets in the corner office for 12 years, the man who was known as "Mel" alone held the longevity record with eight years swerved as the popularly elected mayor under Plan A and four years elected by the City Council under Plan E.

His career got off to a rocky start.

His big brother, Aldo, was the City Councillor from Ward 3 when the younger Della Chiesa tried to join him in an at-large AMELIO DELLA CHIESA seat. But he lost in 1938 and lost again in 1940 and lost again in 1942. A year later he was elected to succeed his brother in Ward 3. He never lost again.

When the Plan E form of city government with its city manager, ceremonial mayor and complicated method of counting votes came to Quincy in January, 1950, Della Chiesa, one of its supporters, went right along with it, retaining his Council seat.

He was even chosen by his colleagues to become mayor himself for the last four years of Plan E before, after a long, bitter battle, the anti-Plan E forces in the city prevailed.

And when it came time to let the voters choose the mayor once again, it was Della Chiesa, the supporter of Plan E, who defeated Laurence Curtis, a leader of the Plan A forces, in the race to be the first Plan A mayor.

As mayor, Della Chiesa was known for his honesty to a fault, his conservatism that lent stability to the controversial change in government and his advocacy of privatization, as in having private companies pick up the city's trash.

At the height of his political career, he and his wife, Evelyn, lost their only son, Walter, a West Point graduate and Air Force lieutenant, when his plane disappeared during the Korean War on a routine mission over the Pacific off Okinawa.

Della Chiesa retired from the mayor's office undefeated in January, 1966, and was serving his eighth and final term as state representative in 1969 when he read the signs.

It was time for him to go, time for a new generation to take over — Jim McIntyre, who he defeated in his last run for mayor, Arthur Tobin, Walter Hannon, Joe LaRaia and the like.

Five New City Councillors Elected

Five new city councillors took office, believed to be the biggest turnover in that body in the city's history. The five: Leo J. Kelly (Ward 1), John J. Lydon (Ward 3), James A. Sheets (Ward 4), Warren A. Powers (Ward 5), and Dennis E. Harrington (Ward 6).

Mayor Walter Hannon began his second term with a pledge to attack the city's unemployment problem and advocated downtown development.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, in a visit to The Quincy Sun, predicted a good year for the General Dynamics shipyard with an increase in contracts.

The Sun conducted a random telephone survey in February on President Richard Nixon and Watergate. The results: 31.4 percent thought he should resign, another 31.4 percent felt he should complete his term, 25.7 percent said he should be impeached and 11.4 percent said they were undecided.

Six months later, following Nixon's resignation, another Quincy Sun survey found 60.6 percent of those polled believed he should be prosecuted.

The city's unemployment rate reached 10.57 percent during January and February.

Some 1,800 production workers at the General Dynamics shipyard walked off the job in March, the start of a 123-day strike by Local 5.

An eventual new three-year contract gave the worker a $1.48 per hour across-the-board pay raise over the three years with insurance, retirement, disability and other benefits. The loss to all parties during the strike was estimated in the millions of dollars.

Re-elected were Congressman James A. Burke, state Sen. Arthur Tobin, state Reps. Joseph Brett, William Delahunt and Thomas Brownell, and Dist. Atty. George Burke.

Janice Lamparelli, 18, was crowned Miss Quincy Bay.

A 78-year old Quincy business landmark, the Old Colony Laundry closed.

Machine guns were added to the Police Department's weapons following a 40 percent rise in the city's crime rate. Mayor Hannon defended the controversial move, saying the department needed to fight crime with equal force.

Deaths included movie and stage comedian Billy DeWolfe, 67, who grew up in Quincy as Billy Jones and Edward T. "Red" Lewis, 68, Quincy's last Plan E city manager.

LaRaia Defeats Hannon In Close Recount

Mayor Walter J. Hannon went to bed election night Nov. 4, 1975 the winner of a third term over Joseph J. LaRaia, climaxing a bitterly-fought campaign.

Only it wasn't the climax. That was yet to come.

Tabulations that night showed Hannon with 17,060 votes to LaRaia's 16,926: a slim 134-vote victory margin.

But a recount was to determine LaRaia the actual winner.

Hannon was 44 and LaRaia 43, both of them former city councillors and veterans of a number of Quincy political battles.

But this one-between them-was the closest mayoral election in a half-century with the pair slugging it out with no holds barred on the campaign trail.

There was no trouble getting the vote out that year. A record number-34,374 voters-went to the polls. That was even more than the 33,355 that turned out for the showdown between incumbent Amelio Della Chiesa and challenger James R. McIntyre in 1959, which Della Chiesa won by 2,017 votes.

The Hannon-LaRaia recount held two weeks after the election showed LaRaia the actual winner by 483 votes-17,231 to 16,748.

This was during Quincy's paper ballot days and votes were counted in blocks of 50.

Some of those blocks were erroneously credited to Hannon in the election night count and should have gone to LaRaia. Hannon people shrugged it off as a mistake. LaRaia people charged someone was trying to steal the election.

Hannon called for an investigation to clear the air.

"I won't leave this office," he said, "with any impression...I have nothing to do with the election, with counting votes. There'll be no aspersions cast at me."

Judge Albert L. Kramer conducted an in-depth inquest at Quincy District Court. It found that the miscount of the votes was an honest mistake made by six different people at six different polling places. They, it was determined, had written down LaRaia's figures on Hannon's line on tally sheets, the layout of which was confusing.

The error, it was determined, was compounded by the use of the so-called "flash count" system of bundling votes in blocks of 50 in order to speed up the vote count. And, none of the poll workers had been assigned to double-check figures.

Later, a committee of citizens appointed by new Mayor LaRaia, himself, reviewed the evidence and came to the same Newcomers elected to the City Council were Paul D. Harold, at-large and Daniel G. Raymondi, Ward 2. School Committee winners were Francis X. McCauley, Patricia M. Toland and Christopher F. Kennedy.

Anti-busing demonstrators from South Boston followed Sen. Edward Kennedy when he came to Quincy to attend a North Quincy Knights of Columbus Communion breakfast. His train was stoned as it pulled out of the North Quincy station.

Quincy marked the 350th anniversary of its settlement as Mount Wollaston in 1625. Among those on hand for the celebration dinner at the Chateau de Ville in Randolph was a famous daughter, Academy Award-winning actress Ruth Gordon and a distinguished son, Supreme Court Justice Paul E. Reardon.

The 1,600 pound ship's bell from the USS Quincy built at the Fore River shipyard in 1943 and due to the scrapped, was saved and brought home to Quincy. It was on display outside City Hall.

Deaths included Max Zides of the singing team of Hum 'n Strum just 12 days after he and his partner Tom Currier, were honored by the Montclair Men's Club. City Recreation Director William F. Ryan, 52, Charles Wickens, 70, founder of the Wickens and Troupe Funeral and Albert L. Grahn, 77. Founder of Grahn's Bakery.

conclusion: the election was honest but the count sloppy.

There were those, however, including LaRaia, who were still skeptical.

"You can never erase that small doubt from your mind," he said.

The election was over. But the hard feelings were still there and would be there for years to come.

And, LaRaia's single term would be one of the stormiest in the city's history.

LaRaia Starts Stormy Term

Joseph J. LaRaia, Quincy's 25th mayor, began what would be a stormy and his only term, cleaning out City Hall of personnel with ties to the Walter Hannon and James McIntyre administrations. It was dubbed the "January Massacre" by The Sun. LaRaia said he wanted people "with regard to my goals and not in opposition with them."

After some controversy, Mayor LaRaia agreed to a $13.5 million project to renovate the 50-year-old North Quincy High School. The cost was $1.5 million less than originally estimated.

LaRaia battled with Police Chief Francis Finn and Fire Chief Edward Barry, cutting $700,000 from Finn's proposed department budget, and $950,000 from Barry's.

The tax rate was set at $194.60, an increase of $34.90. LaRaia blamed the big jump on under budgeting in Hannon's administration and interference by Council President Arthur Tobin.

A $21 million grant for construction of the Quincy Adams (South Quincy) MBTA station was approved by the Mass Transportation Administration, Washington.

WJDA personality Mary Johnson, who with her husband, Russ, became friends with Jimmy Carter, died from cancer a few days after Carter was elected President. Carter personally sent her a bouquet of roses while she was in the hospital. The Johnsons met Carter when he was invited to speak at the South Shore Protestant Men's Breakfast in 1973 and they met him at the airport and escorted him to the breakfast.

Public school enrollment was 14,772, lowest in 10 years.

One of Quincy's favorite daughters, award winning actress Ruth Gordon, celebrated her 80th birthday. Her hometown helped mark the milestone with a giant cake.

"Quincy Is Our Name" was selected the city's official song, composed by John Fantucchio of Quincy, a Berkley School student.

A number of Quincy stores defied the 250-year-old "blue laws" statute of opening on Sunday. Five were cited by the Police Department.

Deaths included Mrs. Evelyn Della Chiesa, wife of the late Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa; Mrs. William P. McIntyre, 72, mother of former Mayor James McIntyre; Michael J. Peatridge, 29, information officer for Mayor LaRaia, killed in an auto accident; Anthony Venna, 76, former Quincy Welfare Commission; Frank Kelly, former news photographer and founder of the Quincy Track Club; Joseph P. Collins, co-founder and director of the Quincy Detoxification Center; Alfred Raymondi, superintendent of the Quincy Highway Department and Paul Nigro, 17, president of the National Honor Society at Quincy High School.

Tobin Ousts LaRaia

City Council President Arthur H. Tobin ousted incumbent Joseph L. LaRaia from the mayor's office by a vote of 19,096 to 14,046 in November. Tobin also led a six-candidate field for mayor in the September preliminary election.

LaRaia's appointment of Lt. Corady Solimini to the post of Inspector of Divisions in the Police Department was shot down in court. Judge Edward Brown ruled it exceeded the mayor's authority. It would have made Solimini second in command to only Police Chief Francis Finn.

A raid on a Quincy Point café helped break up a multi-million dollar gambling ring. It was led by Lt. David Powell who had been restored to the Special Services Unit by a court injunction by Chief Finn after LaRaia had put Powell on uniformed street duty.

LaRaia, Finn and Fire Chief Edward Barry were squabbling again as LaRaia proposed, and they opposed a three-member commis-

Tobin Takes Office As 26th Mayor

Arthur H. Tobin was sworn-in as Quincy's 26th mayor with one of his priorities a desire to reunite the city after a wrangling during Mayor LaRaia's administration. "And with a fresh spirit." He said, "launch our city on a new beginning." Revitalization of the downtown was another priority.

Congressman James A. Burke (D-Milton) who represented Quincy in Congress for 20 years, announced he would not seek reelection because of diabetes. He was succeeded by Brian Donnelly of Dorchester, a Democrat.

A $10 million home office building for the National Fire Protection Association got the blessing of the Tobin administration. The site was 42.5 acres in West Quincy across from Pine Hill Cemetery.

22 Inches Of Snow, Winds Gust Over 90 mph

The Blizzard of '78 Brings City To Standstill

By HENRY BOSWORTH

It started to snow early Monday, Feb. 6 and when it stopped late Tuesday, 27 inches had fallen, bringing the city to a standstill for four days.

It was the heaviest snowfall since the Boston Weather Bureau started keeping records in 1870.

And it fell on top of a 22-inch snowfall Jan. 20—just 17 days before. And yet to come was another nine inches on March 4-5.

That was a lot of snow.

The Feb. 6 northeaster—The Blizzard of '78—was backed by winds that gusted to more than 90 miles an hour. High tides, driven by those winds, rose five feet higher than usual, flooding sections of Houghs Neck and Squantum, where several hundred people had to be evacuated from their homes.

Fortunately, there were not storm-related deaths in Quincy. But damage—mostly to homes—was heavy. It was estimated at $70 million. The cost for snow removal alone was set at around $600,000.

Cars were strung along the Southeast Expressway and Route 128 with drivers still in them waiting to be rescued.

Gov. Michael Dukakis issued an edict banning all but the most essential highway travel for nearly a week. In Quincy, only vehicles on emergency missions were allowed on the streets.

People trudged through the snow or on skis, pulling sleds to get to stores and bring back food. And many of them became reacquainted with one another.

Quincy youngsters thought it was great time. They got an unexpected six-day vacation from school.

Mayor Arthur Tobin, in office barely a month, and Public Works Commissioner James "Pete" Ricciuti set up a command post at Civil Defense headquarters on Sea St. to direct snow removal and relief operations for the elderly and those in need.

The Federal Disaster Assistance Administration opened a field office in the Quincy Vo-Tech School gym to process emergency loan applications. The Red Cross turned part of Quincy High School into a disaster center for emergency housing, clothing, food and medical supplies.

Radio station WJDA, except for a four-hour period when it was knocked off the air when high tide flooded its transmitter in Germantown, got back on and stayed on all night past its dawn-to-sunset hours broadcasting emergency reports. Members of the staff slept at the station that night.

Twenty-five persons were arrested for looting during the storm, primarily in the Houghs Neck and Germantown areas where homes were evacuated. There were other cases in North Quincy.

But there were many heroes who came to the aid of others.

Among them was Warren Sims who organized a bucked brigade to quell a fire on Stoughton St. in Houghs Neck that could not be reached by fire apparatus.

James (Red) Riley, custodian at the Atherton Hough School, remained at his post to help refugees despite the fact that his own home was flooded.

And Sylvester Ray, whose heavy equipment was hired to clear Houghs Neck streets of snow, got to do something extra. In the Edgewater Drive section of Houghs Neck, which was being pounded by the rushing high tide, he rescued people from the second floor of their flooded homes, in the bucket of a front-end loader.

A feeling of togetherness and unity descended upon the area in a way reminiscent of World War II. People helping one another.

"There's always some good that comes out of every happening and the blessing of this blizzard was that it brought the people of our city together," said Mayor Tobin.

DORIS AND LARRY Mirick managed a smile in front of their battered home at 126 Turner St., near Edgewater Drive in an area hard hit by the Blizzard of '78.

LaRaia made a political comeback returning to the City Council by edging newcomer Richard J. Koch Jr. by 247 votes.

Deaths included Mrs. Edna Austin, 93, first woman elected to the City Council; Lawrence J. City Stunned At Death Of Former Mayor James McIntyre

By HENRY BOSWORTH

The death of James R. McIntyre stunned the city March 7, 1984.

One of Quincy's all-time popular and powerful political figures, he was suddenly gone at age 53 from a heart attack following unrelated surgery at Massachusetts General Hospital.

It was hard to believe, for his family, his close friends, followers and, yes, critics.

Quincy's political scene, it was thought, would never be quite the same again. And it hasn't, really.

His political career was somewhat spectacular.

The son of Quincy Police Capt. William and Lillian McIntyre, he was elected city councillor at age 25 in 1955 in his first bid for public office while still in college. He would go on to become City Council president, state representative, state senator and mayor.

His only political defeat came in 1959 when at age 29 he challenged the old master, powerful incumbent Amelio Della Chiesa.

Della Chiesa, who served 12 years as mayor-eight under Plan A and four under Plan E, died in 1975. But his death did not have the impact that McIntyre's did because he was retired from the political scene for nearly 10 years and had moved out of Quincy.

McIntyre gave up the mayor's office in 1971 after serving three terms to become counsel to the Massachusetts Senate, a post he held at the time of his death.

That job took him out of the local spotlight but not out of politics. He remained a dominant figure-in-the background.

His detractors and political enemies called him commander of "the McIntyre Machine" and the Godfather. But they never called him "stupid."

He was one of the brightest and most intelligent political figures in the city's history.

As for the "McIntyre Machine," his followers said it was only a group who believed in the same things he did and how best to improve Quincy. Among them were Walter Hannon and Arthur Tobin who would both go on to become mayor. And, if there was a machine, they mused; at least it had round wheels and moved Quincy forward.

JAMES R. MCINTYRE

And, as for that "Godfather" tag, it was really more a political compliment. Just about every young person thinking of running for office sought his advice first. And veteran office holders sought his counsel, like sort of a "blessing."

James and Sheila McIntyre adopted four children-Elizabeth, Sheila, William and Charles. Their home was filled with love and warmth.

But tragedy lurked.

In December 1983, William died of injuries suffered in a fall down an elevator shaft in Boston.

Now on March 12, 1984, less than three months later-another funeral.

Some 1,000 mourners filled St. John's Church for the Mass, including a virtual Who's Who on the state, county and city political scenes.

Among them: Senate President William Bulger, Lt. Gov. John Kerry, Atty. Gen. Francis Bellotti, House Speaker Thomas McGee, State Auditor John Finnegan, former Senate Presidents Maurice Donahue and Kevin Harrington, former House Speaker David Bartley, former Lt. Gov. Thomas P. O'Neill III, Judge Edward Hennessey, chief justice of the Supreme Judicial Court, Judge Albert Kramer, presiding justice of Quincy District Court, former Dist. Atty. George Burke, Mayor Francis McCauley, former Mayors Thomas Burgin and Joseph LaRaia, state Sen. Paul Harold, state Reps. Thomas Brownell, Michael Morrissey, Robert Cerasoli, Robert Ambler, Sheriff Clifford Marshall, Governor's Councilor Peter Eleey, City Council President James Sheets and members of the City Council and School Committee.

Former Mayors Walter Hannon and Arthur Tobin, Dist. Atty. William Delahunt, City clerk John Gillis and School Supt. Lawrence Creedon were among the honorary pallbearers.

Bulger, with whom McIntyre served in the Massachusetts Senate and one of the speakers at the Mass said in tribute:

"As do all men of action in governmental service, he had to endure the insolence of lesser men who assumed the role of critic. But he was never one to buckle to the forces of power and publicity.

"In this city of Quincy he loved so much, he left the imprint of his zeal and personality."

Bishop Thomas V. Dailey, vicar general and chancellor of the Boston Archdiocese was the principal celebrant of the Mass, concelebrated by Fr. William McCarthy, St. John's pastor, and Rev. Msgr. James Scully, pastor of St. Ann's Church in Wollaston.

On a light note, Fr. McCarthy observed that McIntyre had made many appointments during his life, "But to me he gave the greatest appointment of all- he made me the chaplain of the machine."

Clergymen of all faiths and civic leaders attended the Mass.

Sheila McIntyre, in her reflection of her life with her husband, noted a quote on the family's daily calendar for March 7, the day he died:

"The great use of life is to spend it for something that outlasts it."

Jim McIntyre's life, his friends say, was much too short but he did spend it on much that will last.

Actress Ruth Gordon Dies At 88

Ruth Gordon, Quincy-born award-winning actress who never forgot her Wollaston roots, died unexpectedly at her home on Martha's Vineyard at age 88. Miss Gordon frequently returned to attend the annual reunions of her Quincy High School Class of 1914. The class was dubbed the "worst class" by a teacher because no one made the honor roll, but out of it came numerous success stories.

City employees picketed City Hall for new contracts.

Mayor Francis McCauley warned against uncontrolled overdevelopment in downtown Quincy.

The closed Pollard School in Quincy Point was destroyed by a suspicious fire. Damage was so heavy, the building was later torn down and a condo complex built on the site.

Bad news at General Dynamics: 3,084 workers, it was announced, would be laid off by the end of the year.

Architectural consultants recommended that the 50-year old Quincy police station be renovated and expanded at a cost of $4.8 million or a new station built at another site at a cost of $5.5 million.

After a six-month fight against locating a sewage plant on Long Island Quincy got the good news: the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority selected Deer Island instead.

Gov. Michael Dukakis, Sen. Edward Kennedy and Congressman Brian Donnelly and Gerry Studts attended a rally in front of City Hall in an effort to keep the General dynamics shipyard.

At the urging of City Clerk John Gillis, Quincy abandoned the old paper ballot's voting system and switched to punch cards in the September primaries. Gillis was smiling when the results were all in by 10:15 p.m., a good several hours

Fore River Shipyard Closes, Sold At Auction

By TOM HENSHAW

It once reverberated to the sound of the riveter's hammer and the sight of the welder's torch as 32,000 workers turned out the warships that won a great war in the Pacific.

But, in the years that followed, the Fore River Shipyard had fallen on hard times, ending when it was finally closed for good in 1986 and sold at auction for $9 million in 2003.

The winner bidder was automobile dealer Dan Quirk and for a while it was feared that what was once one of the world's great shipyards and the lifeblood of Quincy would become a used car lot.

The yard was owned by the Bethlehem Steel Company during the wartime years but it was sold to General Dynamics in 1963 and enjoyed a brief surge of prosperity building liquefied natural gas (LNG) tankers.

General Dynamics sold it in 1987 to the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) as a staging area for the Boston Harbor cleanup and a drying area for sludge and pellet-making.

When the MWRA had no further need for the yard in 1997, it was sold to Sotirios Emmanouil, an MIT-educated Greek national and head of Massachusetts Heavy Industries, who pledged to return shipbuilding to Quincy.

But first he sought a $240 million construction loan from the U. S. Maritime Administration (MARAD) to begin the cleanup and modernization of the yard.

"It will be done by next month," he promised. "Then nine months after that modernization will be completed. Then another three months and the first keel will be laid."

Quincy was so enamored of the return of shipbuilding that the city committed $7.8 million to the shipyard and $330,000 of its $2,441,000 CDBG was reserved to make a loan payment.

"Sotirios not only came with education and experience, he came with $240 million in contracts to build six ships once the plant is up and running," said Mayor James Sheets.

But the contracts proved to be a mirage and Massachusetts Heavy Industries went bankrupt and defaulted on $55 million of the requested $240 million of the MARAD-backed loan already guaranteed.

MARAD paid off the $55 million loan and took over the 135-acre site in March, 2000, and finally put it up for auction three years later when it was bought by auto dealer Dan Quirk for future development.

But even as the shipyard moved on to a brighter future, two men were killed when a crane collapsed on a building they were removing and another died in the removal of the Goliath Crane for shipment to a yard in Romania.

THE FORE RIVER shipyard, builder of some of the great warships of World War II with a working force of thousands, closed down in 1986 and later sold at auction.

Five New City Councillors Elected

Mayor James Sheets announced that because of a $5.7 million surplus at the end of Fiscal Year 1995, the city would be able to not raise property taxes for the second consecutive year. Not only did the commercial rate remain the same the residential rate dropped four cents.

It was the first time in two decades the tax rate did not increase for two consecutive years.

The popular Sheets was challenged by 78-year old Roger Lyons, a retired contractor, in the city's municipal election. The mayor was re-elected with 80 percent of the vote.

Five new city councillors were elected in the largest turnover on the council in 22 years. They were: Daniel Raymondi (Ward 2) Patrick McDermott (Ward 3), Michael D'Amico I (Ward 4) Stephen Durkin (Ward 5), and Paul Harold (at-large). Two new faces joined the School Committee: former Mayor Francis McCauley and Christine Cedrone.

McCauley won a two-year seat vacated by Sean Barry who with Cedrone won the two open four-year seats on the committee.

Sheets appointed at-large Councillor and former Mayor Joseph LaRaia to the Quincy Board of Assessors. Charles McIntyre, 1993 council runner-up, filled the seat for two months before Harold

Sheets Leads Effort To Keep Quincy Hospital Open

By TOM HENSHAW

For five uncertain days in October, 1999, the city of Quincy wasn't sure it would have a health care facility of its own the next morning.

Faced with deep cuts in federal Medicare payments, which made up 60 percent of its revenues, 111-year-old Quincy Hospital was on the verge of closing.

The solution was a merger with a financially stable health care facility and Boston Medical Center, the old Boston City Hospital, looked with approval on such a union.

But who wanted to take on an institution that was $70 million in debt?

It was then that Mayor James Sheets, the City Council and the legislative delegations on Beacon Hill and in Washington set about to erase the deficit.

The city managed to commit $33 million. The feds came up with another 223 million. All eyes turned to the state, where a $12.1 million interest-free loan was wending its way slowly through the Legislature.

The deadline was Oct. 1. But there was disagreement between the House and the Senate. House Speaker Thomas Finneran and Senate President Thomas Birmingham say down to negotiate a compromise.

Oct. 1 came and went, the start of a new fiscal year and Quincy Hospital had no operating budget. Then Oct. 2 ... 3 ... 4 ... 5. On Oct. 6, agreement was reached and Quincy Hospital — now Quincy Medical Center — was pulled back from the brink.

The venerable Quincy Hospital, founded in 1888, had gone from a private 25-bed cottage hospital to a public hospital in 1918 to a 282-bed private non-profit community hospital once again.

The loan bill was signed into law two days later by Gov. Paul Cellucci and Lt. Gov. Jane Swift in open air ceremonies in front of the Medical Center with most of those responsible in attendance. But mainly it was Mayor Sheets.

"I don't know how it is, Bill Delahunt, over in your office, or how it is, Governor, with you," said Sen. Ted Kennedy, "but every time I go out in my waiting room day and night, Jim Sheets is out there. 'Can I talk to you just one more minute, senator?' This is the first time he has been back home with a smile on his face."

MAYOR JAMES SHEETS takes his oath from City Clerk Joseph Shea in January of 2000. Sheets was elected to his sixth term in 1999, the longest of mayors under Plan A.

Phelan Defeats Sheets In 17-Vote Upset

School Committeeman William Phelan, a scant two years after his debut in elective office, scored a stunning upset of Mayor James Sheets in his bid for a seventh two-year term.

Phelan's margin, after a hand recount, was 17 votes, the closest ever in a Quincy election.

Attorney and former City Councillor George Burke was the high bidder at $160,000 for a silver tankard donated to United First Parish Church by Col. John Quincy in 1767 as the church's silverware went on auction to pay for repairs.

Mayor Sheets proposed and the City Council approved a $193 million municipal budget for fiscal 2002, a 5 percent increase over the previous year.

Hotel, the first new full-service hotel on the South Shore in 25 years, opened in Crown Colony Office Park in West Quincy.

The State Democratic Party moved its headquarters from Boston to the SAR Building at 10 Granite St., Quincy.

State Police and the District Attorney's Office were investigating the case of Daniel Keating, the mayor's executive secretary, who admitted breaking in the personnel office at City Hall looking for a copy of the firefighters contract.

Jimmy Liang, 24, a restaurant owner, became the first Asian-American nominated for political office in Quincy when he won the sixth and final spot on the ballot for city councillor at-large.

Death in 2001 included Robert Rimmer, 84, author of the controversial 1962 best seller, "The Harard Experiment," which sold more than a million copies; Roy Lind, 69, who broadcast music, news, sports and talk over WJDA for more than 30 years; The Rev Peter Corea, co-pastor of the Houghs Neck Congregational Church for 55 years.

Mayor, Councillors Get Salary Hikes

Mayor James Sheets proposed and the City Council approved a $183 million municipal budget for fiscal 2001, a 6 percent increase over the previous year, including pay raises for the mayor to $495,000 and Councillors to $19,500.

At the insistence of the mayor and in the face of grumbling by the business community, the Council dropped the business classification from 175 percent of full valuation to 169 percent, which set a residential tax rate of $15.94 and business $33.56.

The School Building Needs Task Force voted unanimously to consider only a site on Quincy Avenue in South Quincy for the new $65 million Quincy High School.

But Mayor Sheets changed his mind when it was pointed out loudly that the site had been a dump where the Fore River Shipyard got rid of its waste, some of it toxic, in the 1940 and '50s.

The U.S. Maritime Administration paid off Massachusetts Heavy Industries $55 million loan and took over the Fore River Shipyard. The company laid off its entire workforce and filed for bankruptcy but insisted they still planned to build ships there.

City Councillor-at-Large Frank McCauley called Sotirios Emmanouil, owner of MHI, "a modern day Pontius Pilate."

Paul Harold defeated Stoughton Republican Bruce Olsen in the race to succeed Barry Hannon for Norfolk County Register of Deeds. The Democratic ticket of Al Gore and Joe Lieberman defeated Republicans George Bush and Dick Cheney in Quincy.

The Rev. Bedros Baharian, 84, retired pastor of the Quincy Point Congregational Church who played a key role in bringing major development to Quincy as head of the Planning Board for 17 years, died in Leesburg, Fla.

Historian David McCullough won the prestigious Pulitzer Prize for his biography, "John Adams," that sparked a new interest in the Quincy-born second president of the United States.

Mayor Phelan proposed a $195,256,540 budget for Fiscal 2003, anticipating the loss of 13 to 15 policemen, about a dozen firefighters and 117 teachers. The City Council approved $194,287,304.

The tax rate was set at $13.62 for residential

The School Committee raised the rent charged to Quincy College for its use of Coddington Hall and two other buildings from $217,000 to $450,000.

Then the college refused to pay and the School Committee filed an eviction notice.

Daniel Keating, executive secretary to former Mayor James Sheets, pleaded guilty to a breaking and entering charge into City Hall and was fined $500 and placed on probation for six months.

Mayor Phelan sent the City Council a "lean, conservative" $204.5 million budget for fiscal 2004 and the Council passed it intact after accepting the $65.7 million for the schools.

Good News For Homeowners: Tax Rate Up Only 11¢

The flag of the People's Republic of China flew alongside the American flag briefly over the Wollaston headquarters of the Chinese United Association despite the protest of veterans who saw it as the flag of their old enemy, Communist China.

A banner strung across the façade of United First Parish Church read "People of Faith for Marriage Equality" in support of same sex marriage remained in place legally for 60 days in the face of protests.

Radio Station WJDA, the voice of the South Shore for 57 years, was sold for $4.5 million to the Principle Broadcasting Network, a Christian-oriented music and talk station. Its last broadcast was April.

Mayor William Phelan submitted to the City Council and the Council approved a $237,502,017 budget for Fiscal 2007 to the City Council, an increase of $10,719,712 over the previous year.

Former Mayor James Sheets, 71, suffered a mild heart attack but was able to return to his home after five days in the Quincy and Boston Medical Centers.

Deval Patrick won the Democratic nomination for governor over Christopher Gabrieli and Tom Reilly, but his margin in Quincy was a narrow 94 votes. He beat Republican Kerry Healey in the city by a larger margin.

The residential tax rate for Fiscal 2007 was set at $10.44, an increase of only 11 cents over that of Fiscal 2006. The commercial rate was fixed at $22.40 or 183 per cent of fair market value.

John Noonan, 86, chairman of the Council on Aging for 20 years, died.

WJDA Signs Off After 59 Years

For years, at 10 o'clock each morning, radio dials throughout Quincy were tuned to 1300 and listeners settled back to enjoy 30 minutes of strictly local news and views.

It was, many agreed, Radio WJDA's finest half hour.

But, on Friday, April 28, 2006, the fabled "Party Line" made its last appearance in Quincy as 59-year-old WJDA was sold for $4.5 million to Principle Broadcasting Network.

Quincy folks who tuned in for Party Line on the morning of May 1 heard a strange mixture of Christian-oriented music and talk coming all the way from the new studios in Chelsea.

"It's getting harder and harder to make it as a stand alone station," said Jay Asher, the president and CEO of WJDA and the son of James Asher, the station's founder.

"We're not going out

JAMES D. ASHER SR.

JAY ASHER

with our tail between our legs. We still do a good job. But the business has changed. We're one of the few stations in the Boston area that stands alone."

WJDA, whose call letters were the initials of James Dudley Asher Sr., debuted on the air at 6 a.m., Sept. 13, 1947, with Asher and his partner, Joseph Tobin, presiding.

Tobin moved away and the elder Asher died in 1973 leaving a young (26) Jay Asher in charge.

Over the years, WJDA has been the springboard to celebrity for a number of broadcasters, like Ken Coleman, who became the Voice of the Red Sox, and Don Kent, who became the dean of Boston weathermen with WBZ.

For years, listeners woke up to "Breakfast with JDA," news reports by Herb Fontaine and Joe Catalano and remained for "Party Line" with Roy Lind and Win Bettinson.

The final "Party Line" was a trip down Nostalgia Lane for many of the current and former broadcasters and listeners alike, who recalled the memorable moments from the station's past.

There was the long ago quiz program, "Stump the Staff," Jerry Howard and "The Little White Cloud;" and the "Stork Report" of newborn babies; and Slim Pickens, who delivered weather reports with a country twang.

Fontaine, the news director for 35 years, brought back memories of his early morning interview calls to police station and politicians all over the South Shore for his 6 a.m. newscast.

Bettinson recalled the Blizzard of 1978 when Braintree police picked him up at his home and took him to the town line where Quincy police took him the rest of the way to the Brackett Street studios.

"We stayed the whole night," he said, the only connection with reality for some 80,000 people snowbound amid still falling flakes in Quincy.

Terry Fancher, the former South Shore Chamber of Commerce officer, recalled his youth in Arkansas listening to a community radio station much like WJDA. He missed it coming to Boston.

"When I came across 1300 on the dial and I heard WJDA, I knew I was home," he said. "That was the kind of station I grew up with."

First Classes At New QHS Set For February 2009

Possibly the longest running affray in recent years was the siting with 90 per cent state reimbursement of a new Quincy High School with a new Central Middle School and renovation of Sterling Middle School thrown in.

It began in 1997 when a plan was unveiled for a $73.1 million project aimed at improving the physical plants of the three schools and the City Council approved a $15.5 bond issue to get the first phase underway.

It was still progressing without a hitch in July, 2000, when the School Building Needs Task Force voted unanimously not to consider any site but one on Quincy Avenue in South Quincy that the city had purchased for $3.5 million.

City Auditor Michael McFarland advanced a proposal for a 10-year bonding plan with a debt schedule of $54 million for a new high school, $24 million for a new Central and $10 million for a renovated Sterling for a total of $104 million.

But the site was also a former dump, where the Fore River Shipyard got rid of its waste, some of it toxic, in the 1940s and 1950s and the protests grew so loud they reached the office of Mayor James Sheets.

Reluctantly, Sheets ruled the site out, although he still thought it would be safe for the students after it was cleaned up and capped and he expressed concern that the 90 per cent reimbursement would be jeopardized if the site were changed.

The move threw the siting of the new school open once again.

Some suggested the DPW complex at 55 Sea St. but most went for Faxon Field, a marshy area between the old Quincy High School and Southern Artery, which was called by consultant firm of Camp, Dresser, McKee the "least environmentally damaging" site.

The new school went on a yoyo from there.

The City Council approved a $110 million bond to build on Faxon Field, concern was expressed for the 90 per cent reimbursement. A trio of officers, led by Sen. Michael Morrissey, doubted whether the school should be built at all.

The state temporarily called a halt to all reimbursements in February, 2003, then relented and put Quincy on the "most urgently needed projects" list. But there were 300 projects ahead of Quincy on the list for reimbursement.

But through it all the city plunged ahead.

The design was changed to avoid the Faxon Field wetlands. Tishman Construction of Boston was chosen project manager. Symmes, Maini, McKee was picked to design the building.

The new design was unveiled in February, 2005, and the State School Building Authority immediately ruled it a substantial change and thus ineligible for the 90 percent reimbursement.

Ground was finally broken in June, 2007, but even that happy day had to be postponed because of a four-day strike of 900 members of the Quincy Education Association.

The cost had now risen to $90.9 million and the school was now a three-building complex.

The first of the three buildings was scheduled to be finished in February, 2009, and, if everything goes according to plan, the first classes will be held on Feb. 23.

Koch Upsets Phelan By 2,051 Votes

Tom Koch, 44, resigned as park commissioner to run for mayor and scored an upset victory over William Phelan, who was seeking a fourth two-year term in the office. Koch had 12,672 votes to 10,621 for Phelan.

Mayor Phelan touched off unrest among city employees when he warned in his mid-term address that the contractual benefits given them was threatening the financial stability of the city.

Some 900 teachers struck for four days before agreeing reluctantly to pay 20 percent, rather than 10 percent, of their health insurance premiums.

Ground was broken for the new $126 million Quincy High School behind the old high school on Coddington Street.

The body of Army Corporal Ciara Durkin, 30, was found shot once in the head on Bagram Air Base in Afghanistan. The military ruled her death a suicide.

Mayor Phelan presented the City Council with a $250,844,657 budget for fiscal 2008, an increase of 4.9 percent over the previous year. The Employee Benefits line was up from $18 million in 2002 to $42 million.

Anthony Siciliano, 65, former deputy emergency director, was convicted of raping a teen-aged boy and sentenced to four-to-five years in prison.

Death came to Edward F. Barry, 86, retired fire chief of Quincy; Thomas R. Burke, 83, assistant city clerk for 32 years; John F.

Cahill Elected Treasurer, Seen Candidate For Governor

Will history repeat itself?

The pundits were asking the question again as the 21st century dawned and Tim Cahill, once a Quincy city councillor at the age of 29, had moved into position as state treasurer to challenge a sitting governor of his own party.

The last Quincy resident to hold statewide office was Frank Bellotti, whose impatience after one term as lieutenant governor led him to run against and defeat Democratic Gov. Endicott Peabody in 1964 only to lose himself to Republican John Volpe.

The intraparty dissension was so strong that it took a long time for Bellotti to revive his political career. He ran for attorney general and lost in 1966 and for governor and lost in 1970 before finally winning three terms as attorney general ending in 1981.

In The Sun's anniversary year of 2008, speculation was growing that Cahill, who would be almost 52 at the crucial time, might be willing to risk it all and take on sitting Gov. Deval Patrick in the 2010 Democratic primary.

Cahill was never one to pass up a challenge.

He was no sooner out of Boston University with a degree in political science than he was founding his own business, the restaurant Handshakes, with partners Ed Graham and Joe Irvine and running for the City Council (He lost).

He had written a book on entrepreneurs, "Profiles in the American Dream," when he got his second chance, winning an at large seat on the Council in 1987 and taking on the added chores of Norfolk County treasurer in 1997.

He was well-established in that post in 2002 when he decided to take the chance and run for state treasurer, an open seat that attracted three strong opponents in the Democratic primary alone.

There was James Segel of Needham, endorsed by some of the strongest political voices in the state; Stephen Murphy, the well-positioned Boston City Councillor; and Michael Cahill, the state rep from Beverly with the name guaranteed to cause confusion.

It was Cahill's daughter, 10-year-old Kendra, who devised the slogan, "Tim for Treasurer," that neutralized the other Cahill and her father went on to win the primary in an upset and go on to defeat the Republican, Daniel Grabauskas, in the final.

Most agreed that Cahill had compiled a solid record as treasurer, creating the Mass School Building Authority and increasing by more than 50 percent the assets of the Pension Reserves Investment Trust Fund.

And he hasn't hesitated to take on a popular Democratic governor when he disagrees with his fiscal policies. After all, no one ever accused Tim Cahill of unwillingness to take a risk.

A 150-ton leg of the Goliath crane collapsed while it was being dismantled for shipment to its new home in Romania crushing to death ironworker Robert Harvey, 28, of Weymouth.

Beechwood on the Bay was closed down to make way for the new municipal senior center.

Fire Chief Timothy Pettinelli retired.

The School Department and the Park & Recreation Board were at loggerheads over whether a new 400-meter track facility should be at Faxon Field (the Park choice) or Pageant Field (the School choice).

RABBI DAVID JACOBS Dies at age 81

Capt. Paul Keenan, the mayor's brother-in-law, was named police chief, succeeding Robert Crowley, 61, who retired four years before the mandatory age.

Residents of West Quincy were protesting an 80-foot electronic billboard double on Willard Street that flashed a continual enticement to drink Svedka vodka to motorists on the Southeast Expressway.

Mayor Koch submitted a $233.9 million budget for Fiscal 2009 to the City Council.

Workmen repairing the Abigail Adams Cairn on Penn's Hill discovered a time capsule of Quincy momentos placed there at the time it was erected in 1896.

The HBO television mini-series "John Adams" touched off a new tourist boom in Quincy.

Democrat Hillary Clinton and Republican Mitt Romney were the winners, edging Barack Obama and John McCain respectively as Quincy voted in the presidential primary.

Death came to Rabbi David Jacobs, 81, spiritual leader of Temple Beth El for 51 years.

People Knew They Could Trust Paul Harold

By TOM HENSHAW

"Since high school, I knew that my career would be in law and politics..."

Thus Paul Harold began his memoirs that were still unfinished when death from stomach cancer caught up with the veteran Quincy politician in the early morning hours of Aug. 12, 2002, at the untimely age of 53.

Politics had been his life for more than 30 years, starting as an intern in the Washington office of Congressman James Burke, through the City Council, the State Senate and, finally, as County Register of Deeds.

He traveled around the world, sowing the seeds of democracy for the U. S. Information Agency but always he returned to the city he loved.

"Paul had the unique ability to be able to see right from wrong and the courage to stand up and speak out on what he believed in whether it was popular at the time or not," said Mayor William Phelan. "People knew they could trust Paul to do the right thing."

Harold was one of the little folks himself, growing up on Adams Shore. He was a Patriot Ledger carrier boy, a tour guide at the Adams' Birthplaces, a dishwasher at Howard Johnson's, a bundle boy at Star Market and a clam digger on the flats of Houghs Neck.

He ran for state rep in 1971 and lost. He ran for the City Council in 1973 and lost. He ran for the Council again in 1975, knocking on 5,000 doors and shaking 15,000 hands, and this time he won. He ran for reelection in 1977 and won with the largest vote count ever for the City Council.

A year later, Harold took on the reigning Quincy political power of the day, State Senator Arthur Tobin, and scored a stunning victory.

He served 14 years in the State Senate, finding time to travel the world for the Information Agency, act as visiting professor of American Studies at the University College in Cork, Ireland; and host for the State Department such visitors as Queen Noor of Jordan and Prince Bandar of Saudi Arabia.

He left the Senate in 1992 to run for the U. S. Congress only to be stymied when redistricting snatched away his strongest precincts, leaving him in a strange district with the veteran Congressman Gerry Studds. He lost.

Not to be denied, he started over at the bottom again, winning a seat on the City Council in 1997 and as Register of Deeds in 2000. He was midway into his first term when he died.

In the midst of his first victorious run for the City Council, Harold managed to attend 10 games of the team he sponsored in the Quincy Youth Hockey League.

"Paul was the only guy I know who sponsored teams and also came to see them play," said Mike Linnane, his longtime friend. "The kids got all excited. It meant a lot to them. It was typical Paul, to be there for the little guys."

Reflections Of Two Sun Newscarriers

Rev. John Swanson

By REV. JOHN SWANSON

It is relatively rare for Protestant ministers to find themselves pastoring in their hometown. A long chain of events resulted in my being called as the eighth settled minister of Union Congregational Church in 1993. In the 113 year history of the church there has only been eight ministers and none but myself were from the South Shore, let alone Quincy.

One of the delights of being "back home" was my becoming reacquainted with The Quincy Sun and its wonderful publisher, Henry Bosworth, an acquaintance that began back in the summer of 1969, following "Joe Brett's Baseball Day." State Representative Brett had a tradition of taking neighborhood kids to Fenway Park. It's interesting for me to reflect that Joe Brett's Baseball Day, The Quincy Sun and Union Congregational Church all came together for me on a long ago August day.

I grew up as the only Protestant kid in West Quincy, or so it seemed. (Recently Mike Bellotti teased me by adding the only Republican as well!) On that summer day in 1969, I showed up at the old Willard School, where I'd be in sixth grade that fall and, with my friend, Jimmy Nimmerskern, boarded the school bus for Fenway Park.

I remember the bus trip took forever as we had stops at the old Gridley Bryant and, as it was known, the Furnace Brook School—where the smart kids like recently retired Navy Commander David Ray, formerly of Lyons Street, and my sister Patty, now of Hingham—were invited to attend. I wasn't.

After stopping at the Furnace Brook, now Bernazzani School, we drove to Wollaston where we parked in front of a big old granite church, to pick up kids from the old Massachusetts Field School. Who could have guessed, definitely not 11-year old me, that 23 years later, I'd be Pastor of that same old church!

After leaving Rawson Road, we went straight to Fenway, where we watched the Kansas City Royals defeat the Red Sox.

Now for The Quincy Sun connection. On arriving home, 30 complimentary copies of The Quincy Sun sat on the dining room table of my house at 25 Lyons St. I had called The Sun a week before and had been accepted as a Quincy Sun Paper

Rev. JOHN SWANSON

Congregational Church

Boy. Delivering The Sun was to be my first job. I had asked for 50 copies, which Mr. Bosworth had felt was way too ambitious, so he had given 30 copies to my sister, who had picked them up for me while I was at the game.

Quincy Sun Paper Boys, in those days, "built" their own routes. The paper was so new there were as yet no routes to pass on. I wasn't able to get subscriptions for the full 30, but I was able to build a fairly respectable route of 20 or so customers. Of course, two of them were my Mom and Dad, Carl and Louise Swanson, one my sister Carol and two (originally three) my fourth grade teacher David Ezickson, who bought them for the old southwest Quincy Community Center at Brewers Corner.

A common joke leveled at clergy, regardless of their denomination, is that we only work one morning a week. Whenever someone teases me about the "one hour work week," I always look at them deadpan and say, "Yeah, but boy does that hour come up quick!" Well, The Quincy Sun only comes out once a week but to an 11-year old boy, it always seemed to come up quick.

I was always surprised to see that bundle of papers sitting on the porch on Wednesday afternoon. "Hahn't I just delivered them?" I'd often moan to myself. Truth was that was often the case. I guess I never grasped the concept of Mr. Bosworth's "weekly paper" or, rather, it was different than my 11-year old concept. "If The Quincy Sun comes out once a week, doesn't that mean people have a whole week to read it?" I reasoned. And where the masthead says Thursday and I have them on Wednesday, this obviously means the day they are delivered is not of great importance. So, on more than one occasion, The Sun was delivered on other days aside from Thursday. One of my customers on West Street didn't understand this logic and, as a result, I got a call from Mr. Bosworth.

Went through the tradi-

I remember approaching my parents in 1979 at the age of nine after coming to the realization that "money does not (in fact) grow on trees", a phrase often heard in the McDermott household while I was growing up.

Having been raised by parents born and raised within the years of the Great Depression, I was taught the values of hard work and self-determination in order to succeed in life. So I gave them a proposal I heard from another kid in the neighborhood...I heard I could get my first job as a Quincy Sun Paperboy.

Mr. Bosworth was (and still is) a towering figure to me when I first came into the office in the fall of '79. "Hey kid...so I hear you want a route" or something like that was said.

Luckily for me, my friend in the neighborhood was graduating to a bigger route with the Ledger, and since I had done the route with him a few times, I was his pick to take over. After a thorough interview with Mr. Bosworth explaining to me the responsibilities of a news carrier, I heard those magic words - "You're hired". Henry had that phrase down well before Donald Trump.

I was in business. I had about 15 customers at first with a route that spanned about 5 blocks from my house on Taylor Street over to Pine Street. Over the years I doubled my customer base to about 30. The Feeney's, the McCarthy's, the Goodrich's, the McFarland's, the McDonald's, the Ciccerone's, the Kiley's... all great long-time Wollaston families. It was a great mix.

Mom and Dad made sure I got out as soon as the papers arrived, reminding me that good customer service would be rewarded...and it was. I felt like the richest kid in the neighborhood. I averaged a good $5-8 a week in tips and always had my own pocket money when visiting Andre's on Brook Street or Dacey's on Beale Street and especially when the ice cream truck cheerfully roamed through the neighborhood or a new toy hit the shelves at Child World.

My fondest memory was

PATRICK MCDERMOTT
Register of Probate

with a wonderfully charming old lady on Pine Street. I wish I could remember her name. She lived there with her daughter and was my last stop on the route. It was a good hit. She always invited me in for a snack and some conversation. She was interested in how I was doing at school and what I wanted to be when I grew up...politics was not on my radar then.

At the time, I was a student at the Boston Archdiocesan Choir School at Saint Paul's in Cambridge, where afternoon rehearsals sometimes caused me to be late in getting the paper out. My Pine Street customer never seemed to complain...and I made it up to her by singing one or two of our latest tunes we were learning at school. "Tell me Why" was her favorite. She was my best tipper...usually $1/week (for a paper that was $.10 at the time) and $5 at Christmas.

Who would have known that several years later I'd be knocking those same customers' doors asking for their vote to be city councilor? And frequently utilizing my vocal chords on the campaign trail or at the annual Salute to Saint Patrick's Day.

I too "graduated" from my route with the Quincy Sun and took up the Ledger then the Globe. But those early lessons of good customer service and treating people with kindness gave me a great foundation to build upon.

As I reach my own milestone of 40 next year, I reflect fondly on my years with the Quincy Sun...as a paperboy and as my family's life-story unfolds with elections, graduations, accomplishments, weddings, births, etc. I look forward to the next forty with nothing but the best of wishes.

We have tried to recap the happenings in Quincy the past 40 years in this special Quincy Sun anniversary supplement.

We know we didn't get it all. Forty years is a

So please forgive us if we missed something you wanted to see.

Thank you for your understanding.

tional landline and the traditional mom before it reached the traditional 11-year old. This resulted in the end of "open delivery" for my paper route.

Billing was another issue. The paper was 10 cents a copy, and most gave you a quarter, and occasionally 50 cents. The Sun paid us four cents per copy. This meant, on average, a Quincy Sun paperboy made 19 cents per copy. My route averaged around 20 customers, which meant an average weekly amount of $3.80 for me and $1.20 for The Sun.

One lesson I learned as a paper boy, which was later reinforced by my father, Carl, who, for a while worked with me when I tried my hand at business ("Jackie: Jack of All Trades. Swedish Quality Workmanship at Scotsman Prices" A Handyman's Service advertised in The Sun 1976/77) was to never mix money. I developed a nasty habit of not setting aside the $1.20 for The Sun and spending the whole $5. This of course also resulted in a phone call from Mr. Bosworth. I can still remember Henry's gentle way with youth. "John, if you don't pay your bill you'll go to jail."

Eventually I did pay my bill (I think) and deliveries were made on Thursdays (okay, maybe an occasional Friday). I kept the route for three years, eventually giving it to the Sun's first papergirl, Lillian Callahan of Hopedale Street, who was much better at it than I ever was. Lilly really built the route and kept it going for several years, well into junior high.

Reflecting on my Sun paperboy days, I have to ask Henry, "Are you really surprised my church press releases are so often late?"

Wishing The Sun and The Sun family the best on this wonderful milestone.

Rev. John Swanson who we fondly remember as "little Jackie Swanson" is now pastor of Union Congregational Church.

Koch Firm In Opposition

City Being Sued By W.Q. Billboard Owner

The owner of a controversial 80-foot-high billboard in West Quincy has filed a lawsuit against the city blaming Mayor Thomas Koch for a Zoning Board of Appeals decision declaring the sign illegal.

The suit, filed in Land Court, claims that the mayor "used his influence" to begin a process to have the billboard removed, leading to a cease-and-desist order by the city's chief building inspector and ultimately the Zoning Board ruling upholding that decision last month.

"My opinion that this billboard is a blight and never should have been approved last year is no secret," Koch said. "I expect the members of all our regulatory boards to uphold the law regardless of the specific case. The City is prepared to stand fully behind the Zoning Board's decision of last month."

The city began to scrutinize the billboard earlier this year following its 2007 approval, leading a decision by Director of Inspectional Services Jay Duca that it did not meet the city's building code. City Councillors held a public hearing on the sign in which more than 100 neighbors protested the billboard and the process that led to its original approval.

A number of neighbors and abutters to the property owned by the Biondi's Service Station in West Quincy claimed they were never informed about the project, and as a result were not allowed to register their objections last year.

the cease-and-desist order, and the city has also filed a separate lawsuit claiming the Massachusetts Outdoor Advertising Board ignored several guidelines when it issued a permit last year.

In its lawsuit, the billboard company, Boston Outdoor Ventures LLC, claims that neighbors to the property enlisted Koch's help to fight the billboard and that "the mayor used his influence toward that end." It also contends that Koch communicated directly with board members and told them the results he wanted and that board members deliberated the project outside of the public hearing. Officials denied both allegations.

The lawsuit claims that

88 To 90 Percent Forecast Biggest Voter Turnout Expected Here Since Kennedy-Nixon

BY HENRY BOSWORTH

The biggest voter turnout since the John Kennedy-Richard Nixon presidential battle 48 years ago is expected here for next Tuesday's election.

City Clerk Joseph Shea sees the final showdown between the Republican John McCain-Sarah Palin and Democrat Barack Obama-Joseph Biden tickets bringing out 88 to 90 percent of Quincy's 56,357 registered voters-the city's highest in history.

Of the 56,357, 2,390 are new voters since August.

The Kennedy-Nixon turnout in 1960 was 93 percent. Four years ago only 69 percent cast ballots in the George Bush and John Kerry election.

September state primary attracted only a 13.36 percent turnout.

Next Tuesday's election is an historic one which will give the country either its first black president in Senator Obama or its first woman vice president in Palin, Alaska's governor.

As the race comes down the homestretch latest polls indicate Obama is leading but McCain still with a chance to win the White House.

Some even think it could wind up as close as the Kennedy-Nixon election.

There are four other candidates for president, including consumer advocate Ralph Nader who is running as an Independent. He is on the ballot in 45 states and the District of Columbia.

What effect he could have on either Obama or McCain is a question that will only be answered on Election Day. But in 2000, Democrats blamed him for Al Gore's loss to George W. Bush.

The other three candidates are Chuck Baldwin, Constitution party; Robert Barr, Libertarian and Cynthia McKinney, Green-Rainbow.

Shea is basing his heavy vote forecast on a number of factors:

Some 2,000 absentee ballots already returned to the Election Department. Prior high was 1,450 in 2004. The number of new voters. And the heated campaigns waged by Obama and McCain and their running mates.

"And, of course the economic crisis is a big issue affecting almost everyone," Shea notes. "Interest in the election is taking off. The voters are energized and I don't think many will be staying home this election day."

There are also three referendum questions on the ballot, which are expected to help boost voter turnout.

(Question 1) State Personal Income Tax:

A Yes Vote would reduce the state personal income tax to 2.65 percent beginning Jan. 1, 2009 and eliminate the tax on or after Jan. 1, 2010.

A No Vote would make no change in state income tax laws.

(Question 2) Possession of Marijuana:

A Yes Vote would replace the criminal penalties for possession of one ounce or less of marijuana with a new system of penalties.

A No Vote would make no change in state criminal laws concerning possession of marijuana.

(Question 3) Dog Racing:

A Yes Vote would prohibit dog races on which betting or wagering occurs effective Jan. 1, 2010.

A No Vote would make no change in the laws governing dog racing.

Note: Questions 1 and 2 are on the front of the ballot and Question 3 is on the back.

DPW Sets Up Hotline For Graffiti Reports

The public must act as the "eyes and ears" of the city in the constant struggle against graffiti, according to Public Works Commissioner Larry Prendeville who has set up a telephone hotline for citizen reports to his office.

"The reality is we can use all the help we can get,"

Prendeville said in a report on graffiti to City Council last week.

Residents may call 617-376-1359 and leave information as to the date and location of graffiti and Prendeville promised a speedy response.

Reports are forwarded to individuals, utility companies or city departments for action. The police document and investigate serious instances of such vandalism.

Markings on city property are removed with a specialized city-owned machine or painted over.

Prendeville said that Post Office officials have "been very responsive" to reports of property damage and vandalized mailboxes and have pledged to continue.

However, graffiti is a never-ending struggle and he said that the DPW will continue working with the police department, the T, and the schools, according to Prendeville who said the public's cooperation is essential.

Prendeville said graffiti is photographed and documented and officials keep records and photographs in efforts to track down serial taggers who travel from place to place leaving a specific marks.

Council Votes 6-3 For Smart Growth Density

By LAURA GRIFFIN
City Councilors, meeting as the Ordinance Committee, voted 6-3 Monday to drop one sentence from the zoning code in a decision that supports increased density in Business C zones.

The committee's vote must be relayed today to Land Court Judge Gordon Piper as he considers a controversial case on property abutting Marina Bay.

The City Council must formally approve the change at a future council meeting.

The 11-word change in the city's zoning bylaws will increase the number of units allowed on large parcels in Business C zones.

Several of those parcels are located in Wollaston, Quincy Center, West Quincy, and North Quincy.

As an example, the change would allow the O'Connell Company to develop an 80-unit apartment complex at 260 Victory Rd., North Quincy rather than the 25-unit development allowed under a strict interpretation of the bylaw.

Marina Bay residents have been fighting in court to halt the project.

The proposed development will be tucked between Marina Bay and the 223-unit senior complex, The Moorings at Squantum.

Michael McFarland, Councillor at large, proposed the zoning change last December and has supported the issue at three previous meetings.

McFarland described increased density as part of the city's promotion of the Smart Growth concept.

Under 'Smart Growth,' cities and towns support dense development near business areas and transportation, such as T stations in North Quincy and Wollaston.

Both McFarland and City Solicitor Jim Timmins suggested that the single short sentence in the zoning code was an oversight in the zoning code that needed to be clarified.

However, Ward 6 Councillor McNamee stated later that Arthur Chandler had deliberately inserted the working to protect against high-density projects.

In a letter to the committee, Edmund Alcock urged councilors not to vote Monday as the issue is still under consideration in Land Court. Alcock represents the Marina Bay residents.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee also asked councilors to delay a vote, stating the nearly 300 families of Marina Bay should be allowed due process.

"They do not want high density," McNamee said, adding Marina Bay is beautifully developed now and heavy development could ruin the area.

McNamee, also, noted that residents had taken their "litigation up to the Supreme Court," spent hundreds of thousands of dollars and deserved their day in court.

The change will, also, allow increased density on Newport Avenue and West Squantum Street, North Quincy, Adams Street, Quincy Center, as well as a parcel in West Quincy.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi described a dense development proposal that residents opposed in his district and then contrasted the drastic contrast between 25 units and 80 units on one parcel.

"We're not talking an insignificant difference," Raymondi said, warning that developers could "crowd as many units as possible."

Raymondi, also, read passages from court papers on the issue, indicating that Judge Piper could rule in favor of the Marina residents.

That could change as Timmins told the committee that Judge Piper had asked for a full report of the Ordinance Committee's meeting within 48 hours.

Councilors had previously postponed action on MacFarland's motion until Oct. 24 in order not to influence a court decision.

Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gatro opposed the motion, citing a large parcel on Adams Street that could be densely developed.

Other parcels are in Councillor Kevin Coughlin's Ward 3 in North Quincy. After the meeting, Coughlin said the Newport Avenue site in Wollaston needs to be developed and improved.

The change reduces the land requirement for apartment units allowed in Business C zones on parcels that are 42,000 square feet or larger from 2,500 square feet to 325 square feet.

Raymondi Ordinance Backed

City Council Votes Ban On Sale Of Knives To Minors

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Long and sharp knives were passed about Monday as city councillors considered an ordinance to ban the sale of knives to minors.

Councillors eyed the real weapons taken from children as young as nine as they considered the ordinance submitted by Ward 2 councillor Daniel Raymondi.

After testimony and a short discussion, councillors unanimously passed the ordinance, possibly the first in Eastern Massachusetts, banning the sale or giving of knives to persons under 18.

Councillors must now approve the ban in a formal City Council session.

Raymondi said he proposed the ban after hearing from Richard Turbin, a coach and resident of Martinson Street.

Turbin told Raymondi that his 13-year-old son "was able to go into a retailer in the city and buy the knife."

"Young folks should not be carrying these kinds of knives," said Raymondi, adding that he received support on the issue from Norfolk District Attorney William Keating.

Turbin, Scoutmaster John Monahan, and Community Police Officer Jim Dentrement testified in favor of Raymondi's proposed ordinance.

"I need your help on this," said Turbin who described knives for sale at a retailer, "right on the counter—a soda bag of chips and a knife."

"There are too many knives out there that young people carry," said Dentrement, a police officer for 10 years, who urged the councillors to be pro-active in protecting youth.

"Small kids walk up and purchase something like this," Monahan said as he handed councillors a steel weapon bought by a nine-year-old.

Councillor Joseph Finn and Ward 4 Councillor Jay

Davis asked how the ban would affect the legitimate use of knives such as for fishing with family members or scouting.

City Solicitor James Timmins assured councillors that police would have discretion as the ordinance was written, "They won't be up at Neponset River after kids fishing."

Councillor John Keenan said he was supporting the ordinance to "protect a good kid from doing something foolish and making a stupid mistake."

Keenan added that the ordinance will not stop a bad kid from getting a knife, but should help protect good kids.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee noted that the issue is, also, one of parental oversight, knowing what the children are doing and what is in their knapsacks.

Turbin's 13-year-old son bought the knife and Monahan said a nine-year-old purchased the knife he holds. The Ordinance Committee Monday unanimously approved a ban on the sale of knives to youngsters under 18 years old.

Presidential Pot-Shots

There's been a lot of harsh words—some nasty—hurled back and forth in this year's campaign for president.

Most people are tired of all the rhetoric, attack ads, the promises and, pardon me, the side dishes of political baloney.

Let's get it over with.

If you believe most of the polls, it will be Barack Obama moving into the White House, the first black occupant.

But John McCain's diehards cling to the belief the polls don't have it right. That the real poll will be the one on Election Day.

Some voters are dissatisfied with both sides. Maybe there will be some Hilary Clinton or Joe the Plumber write-ins.

Anyway, come next Tuesday it will be all over and hopefully we've picked the right man.

And maybe McCain and Obama might then sit down together and pass the peace pipe. We don't need any more political warfare. We need some non-partisan unity.

But whoever wins will still have political flak to face at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. There's always insults waiting there.

Whoever gets the keys to the White House soon discovers that being president doesn't make you immune to insults—even nasty ones.

Some of our greatest presidents—as well as some of the not so great—have been targets of insults down through the years.

Like as we have mentioned before, our own John Adams and John Quincy Adams. The father was called "distrustful" and the son, "repulsive." Kind of tame though compared to others.

Abraham Lincoln was called a "huckster," Richard Nixon and Lyndon Johnson "liars."

The nastiest one of all could have been Hearst acid-pen Westbrook Pegler's zinger at Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

"It is regrettable," he wrote, "that Guiseppe Zangara hit the wrong man when he shot at Roosevelt in Miami."

And, author-columnist H.L. Menken tossed this grenade:

"If FDR became convinced that coming out for cannibalism would get him votes he so sorely needs, he would begin fattening a missionary in the White House backyard."

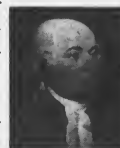

Those and other presidential zingers are from the "Book of Insults and Irreverent Quotations" by Donald Hook and Lothar Kahn and "The Complete Book of U.S. Presidents" by William DeGregorio.

Here are some more:

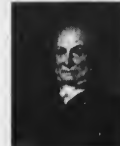

About John Adams: "He is distrustful, obstinate, excessively vain and takes no counsel from anyone." (Thomas Jefferson)

About John Quincy Adams: "Of all the men whom it was ever my lot to accost and write civilities upon (he) was the most doggedly and systematically repulsive."

About Harry

Truman: "It defies all common sense to send that roughneck ward politician back to the White House." (Republican Senator Robert Taft)

About Richard Nixon: "Nixon is a shifty-eye goddamn liar and people know it. He's one of the few in the history of this country to run for high office talking out of both sides of his mouth at the same time and lying out of both sides." (Harry Truman)

About Abraham Lincoln: "He is a huckster in politics, a first rate, second rate man." (Wendell Phillips, abolitionist)

About John F. Kennedy: "I sincerely fear for my country if Jack Kennedy should be elected president. The fellow has absolutely no principles. Money and gall are all the Kennedy's have." (Republican Senator Barry Goldwater)

About Gerald Ford: "He's a nice fellow but he spent too much time playing football without a helmet." (Lyndon Johnson)

About Lyndon Johnson: "He tells so many lies that he convinces himself after awhile he's telling the truth." (Robert Kennedy)

About Dwight Eisenhower: "I think that when the President stops being president the best job we could give him in our country would be as director of a children's home. He would not harm children. But as head of a mighty nation he is more dangerous and might do a lot of harm." (Nikita Khrushchev, Soviet premier)

About George H.W. Bush: "If ignorance ever goes to $40 a barrel, I want the drilling rights to George Bush's head." (Jim Hightower, Texas Commissioner of Agriculture)

George W. Bush apparently didn't make the list but there are those who probably would say that he could share the one about his father. Or call it his own.

In the White House it can sometimes be "Hell to the Chief."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1937 postcard showing the first phase of building St. Ann's Church on Hancock Street in Wollaston. Like many Catholic churches it started out as just a basement level and later funds were raised to complete the structure. When first organized this parish held its masses in the theater at the old Masonic Temple building on Beale Street in Wollaston Center. This church building was completed in 1940. It is constructed of Weymouth seam-face granite that came from quarries near the Hingham-Weymouth border. The rust color comes from mineral deposits that formed along the face of the granite at its natural cracks or seams. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

A 'No' On Question 2

This Election Day, each voter will be presented with several unique opportunities that will have an immense impact on the social, economic and political future of our country. We are all aware of the high stakes of the presidential election as well as the various state and national seats up for grabs. One issue that should not require so much intense thought and deliberation, however, is ballot Question 2. Question 2 seeks to decriminalize the possession of less than one ounce of marijuana.

The City of Quincy has suffered many tragedies due to substance abuse over the past few years, and strong efforts have been made in the schools, law enforcement and civilian groups to raise awareness so that families do not have to endure the devastation triggered by drug abuse that has already affected so many in this great city. A 'Yes' vote on Question 2 would nullify these efforts, and make a dangerous substance more readily available on our streets.

One ounce of marijuana, when sold, can yield more than $200 profit for the dealer. When the fear of arrest is removed from the equation, there will be an increased availability of a substance that is more potent than it was decades ago. Marijuana is the leading cause of adolescent hospital admissions for substance abuse in our state. It makes impossible the safe operation of a motor vehicle. Studies show that the second leading cause of motor vehicle accidents, behind alcohol, is intoxication through marijuana usage.

A 'Yes' vote on Question 2 opens the door to increased drug use amongst the youth of our communities. Drug dealers will no longer have to fear the police, and they will be able to safely carry one ounce in the open. For years, government, social, educational and parental organizations have striven to reduce substance abuse in the youth community. With one vote on Election Day, all of these efforts could be wiped out. A 'Yes' vote on Question 2 will endanger our communities, endorse substance abuse and make stronger drugs on alarming reality. On election day, the only sensible vote on Question 2 is 'No'.

For those whose concern is that young people currently facing arrests for marijuana possession are "saddled" with a "CORI" (Criminal Offender Record Information), perhaps that is the law that needs to be addressed. Restructuring the depth of that record could eventually allow those young offenders to learn from their mistakes, regain their good name and be able to recover their abilities to obtain jobs, school and housing loans, and become members of society who are no longer marked forever by their youthful transgressions.

Perhaps we as parents need to educate our children quickly about the changes proposed by Question 2 and also about the heartaches of a CORI. Let's insist that they research it themselves and then discuss it with them. Maybe then, young people would understand that passing Question 2 would not protect their health and well being. In addition, understanding how a CORI can affect the rest of their lives would help our children learn other problems that marijuana use and abuse can create.

Prevent Crimes Before They Happen

Crime is a national issue that affects everyone regardless of social status, race, sex, or location of residence. Unfortunately, it seems as if there is no definite solution to crime; but there are ways to fight it and mitigate it.

Looking at the statistics from 2006, there have been 2,190 crimes in Quincy per 100,000 people, and 5,801 crimes in Boston (also per 100,000 people.) Boston and Quincy are both busy cities, and Quincy proudly has less than half the crime rate of Boston. This statistic is a testament to police officers and community workers who have worked to diminish crime and have educated the youth on ways to avoid it.

The City of Quincy has been successful in alleviating the crime rate, but there are still improvements to be made. Larceny and burglary top the list of crimes in Quincy, but these problems cannot be solved with law enforcement alone. These offenses are a result of underlying causes in the city that supply the offenders with motivations to break the law.

Law enforcement certainly helps in cutting down crime, but a change in culture is the most effective long-term approach. Rather than reacting to incidents that have happened, we as a community should be working to prevent them before they happen.

There are obviously causes and reasons for these crimes; addressing them and eliminating them may be the best solution to weaken the impact crime has in our daily lives.

Quincy's Yesterdays

GOP Leaders Given Rousing Welcome At Rally

By FRANK McCAULEY

Quincy Republicans turned out en masse and gave a rousing welcome to Governor Alvin Fuller, Senator Butler and other prominent speakers at the big rally at Quincy High School Hall, which followed a banquet, and reception at the Elks Grill.

The distinguished guests were greeted with cheer after cheer and a sea of waving flags as they marched down the aisle of the school auditorium to take their seats in the platform, the Maple Leaf Fife and Drum Corps playing a stirring selection all the while.

It was by far the largest attended rally held in this city for a long time. Gov. Fuller, a candidate for re-election as governor, addressed the large throng, telling his audience of his accomplishments during the two years that he had served the Commonwealth as governor.

Lt. Governor Frank G. Allen also addressed the crowd.

QUINCY POLICE HOUSE WARMING WEDNESDAY

Members of the Quincy Police Department will officially celebrate the occupancy of the new police station with a big house warming Oct. 27. The affair, one of the most significant in the annals of the department, will be attended by practically every member of the force.

A big banquet, addresses by prominent officials, music and an all-police talent program are features of the event. Lt. George Fallon is chairman of the committee on arrangements while Chief Ernest Bishop will serve as toastmaster.

The chief speakers of the day will include United States District Attorney Harold P. Williams and Percy Harrison of the Civil Service Commission. Other invited guests included Mayor Perley E. Barbour and members of the city council.

Quincy Symphony To Open Season With World Premieres

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of maestro Yoichi Udagawa, will open its 2008-09 season Sunday, Nov. 2, at 2:30 p.m. at the Performing Arts Center in North Quincy with two world premiere works featuring the exotic Japanese Koto.

Note that the fall concert's traditional Friday night time slot has been changed to Sunday afternoon.

Koto soloist Ryuko Mizutani will debut

"Sunlight Dancing upon Mountain Snow" with the QSO, written by Martin Schreiner. Mizutani and the QSO will also premiere "When Doves Coo," written by Takasi Koto.

The Koto is a Japanese stringed instrument with 13 strings strung over 13 movable bridges. Players adjust the string pitches by moving these bridges before playing, using three finger picks to pluck the strings.

Also on the program are the dramatic Beethoven Coriolanus Overture and the tuneful and engaging Dvorak Fifth Symphony in F Major.

Tickets are $17 for adults, $12 for seniors and students and $5 for children under 12, who must be accompanied by a parent. Tickets may be purchased at the door.

The QSO will also celebrate the holiday season with a pair of Tuesday evening concerts Dec. 2 and 9.

'La Traviata' Explored In Library Discussion

Opera buff Pete White will conduct a free exploration of Verdi's opera "La Traviata" on three consecutive Mondays at 7 p.m. starting Nov. 10 at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

The opera, which includes the well-known arias "Libiamo no' lieti calici" and "Addio del passato," will be shown and discussed in segments, in Italian with English subtitles.

For more than 50 years, opera has been part of Pete White's life. He has studied many of them using librettos and recordings, reviewing documentaries and histories and listening to lectures.

He previously taught elementary school in California and Arkansas.

Registration is not required for the free opera program. For more information, call 617-376-1301.

QHS Culinary Arts Students Visit Quincy Farmers' Market

Quincy High School culinary arts students and their teacher, Chef Patrick Noe, recently visited the Quincy Farmers' Market in Quincy Center.

Noe walked with his class on a recent Friday to the market to meet and greet the growers who serve the area and area customers. The market operates at the John Hancock Municipal Parking lot across the Court House off.

produce with the actual grower who grew the fruits and vegetables at the market. Many of the students have never seen an active live beehive. The Golden Rule Beekeeper sets up his see true bee hive at the weekly market for people to observe the bee activity. The Golden Rule bee keeper's bees pollinate the Stillman Farm's apple orchard.

The students understood after visiting the Quincy Farmers' Market the connection with the bees and the apple production, not only from reading, but by visual observation.

Noe understands the value of food miles and teaches his students these concepts.

"I try to instill into my students to eat in season locally grown fruits and vegetables as much as possible. There are numerous benefits of such eating habit," Noe continued. "The more we reduce the food miles, the lesser of the carbon foot print we leave behind.

"In checking the Food Odometer, in the U.S. the average grocery store's produce travels nearly 1,500 miles between the farm and the home refrigerator. A tremendous amount of fossil fuel is used to transport such long distances, releasing carbon dioxide, sulfur dioxide, particulate matter and other pollutants into the atmosphere," Noe added.

Noe and his students will also check out the Gloucester Farmers' Market, where at one of their events, chefs are given $25 dollars to shops for 15 minutes at the market and then prepare a dish/s from the produce they had just purchased.

It is perhaps intended to simulate the Iron Chef concept, fun and innovative local idea, and a tremendous awareness builder, as most of us appreciate the hard work of the chefs performs.

WHILE THE WEATHER was too wild for the Images of Honor and Memory display at the QMC cancer Walk on Sept. 28, the Walk was a huge success nonetheless, attracting more than a thousand walkers and raising more than $200,000 for cancer screening, education and treat-

On Display From 2 to 4 P.M. On Steps Of Administration Building QMC's Images Of Honor And Memory Tribute Today

Each year, one of the highlights of the Quincy Medical Center Cancer Walk is the Images of Honor and Memory display, which honors cancer survivors and memorializes those who have lost their lives to the disease.

Unfortunately, inclement weather prevented the display at this year's walk on Sept. 28. Instead they will be displayed today (Thursday) from 2 to 4 p.m. on the front steps of the QMC Administration Building (114 Whitwell Street, Quincy).

In case of rain on the 30th, the display will take place in the QMC front lobby. A memorial prayer service will be held at 3 p.m. All are welcome to visit the display and service.

Images of Honor and Memory is a visual tribute representing the profound impact cancer has had on the community. Last year, more than 500 Images of Honor and Memory containers filled the Ruth Gordon Amphitheatre, adjacent to Pageant Field, during the Walk. The display features pink, blue and white sand-filled containers, each adorned with a name of the person who is being honored or remembered. White containers honor cancer survivors; pink and blue containers memorialize individuals who have lost their lives to cancer.

The QMC Cancer Walk benefits the Marie A. Curry Fund, a permanent endowed fund at Quincy Medical Center, focused on encouraging prevention and early detection of cancer and enhancing access to vital cancer screenings and services for men and women, regardless of their ability to pay. This year's walk raised approximately $200,000, bringing the total raised since its inception 11 years ago to more than $1.5 million.

Images of Honor and Memory containers are available with a $5 suggested donation or donations may still be made to the Walk, by calling 617-376-5493. Visit www.quincymc.org for additional Walk information or to view a slideshow of photos from the September 28 Walk.

Quincy Medical Center is a 196-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

Gutro Ordinance To Give Seniors Broader Abatements

BY LAURA GRIFFIN

More seniors will be getting a break on their water, sewer and tax bills, under an ordinance proposed by Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro and unanimously approved Monday by the Ordinance Committee.

Once the new limits are formally approved at a City Council session, the rules will be publicized through leaflets and on the net, according to Marion Fantucchio, Chief Assessor who spoke at Monday's Committee meeting.

Gutro said that expanded limits on income should encourage more seniors to apply for the abatements. The cost of the program is totally reimbursed by the state.

"Hundreds and hundreds of seniors" in Quincy are eligible for the breaks on their municipal bills but have not applied, according to Gutro who said Monday that only 170 households applied for the abatements.

The city has an 834 household limit for total state reimbursement.

Gutro noted that the country's financial crisis is dangerously hurting seniors dependent on pensions,

DOUG GUTRO

Social Security and 401K investments.

These are the people who can really use the $600 break, according to Gutro who urged councillors to pass the revision of the city's abatement code in order to meet the fiscal year 2010 deadline.

"The changes must be approved before we set the tax rate," Gutro said, adding that, once they are approved, "Seniors can apply in January."

Fantucchio said Monday that the city has not increased its income limits since the first abatement program was adopted. "Our limitations have not gone up accordingly."

Actually, the value of most seniors' net income has declined over the years, said Fantucchio.

Councillor Michael McFarland asked whether state could eliminate the reimbursements as legislators face major financial crises this year.

Fantucchio said it was possible, but very unlikely, as a change in the reimbursements under 41C would affect all cities and towns in the state.

Health Forum Sunday At Crane Library

A free National Issues Forum with the topic "Coping with the Cost of Health Care: How Do We Pay for What We Need?" will be held at 2:30 p.m. Sunday at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

It is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

During the forum, participants will consider three possible approaches to the problem: reducing the threat of financial ruin from major medical expenses; restrain-ing out-of-control health care costs; and providing health care coverage as a right of every citizen.

Free booklets will be available to read prior to the forum. To obtain this booklet, stop by the Main Library Reference Desk (top floor).

Salvation Army Needs Volunteers For Kettles

The Salvation Army in Quincy needs volunteers to help man the collection kettles during the Christmas season.

The kettles will be at various locations starting Monday Nov. 17 through Wednesday, Dec. 24.

Major Douglas Jones, co-commander with his wife, Major Linda Jones, of the Salvation Army Quincy Temple Corps, 6 Baxter St., said individuals and groups are needed as volunteers for a day or part of a day on whatever time they may be able to give.

Volunteers standing at a kettle "may at the same time, be standing in honor of a loved one or a friend as a tribute or remembrance," Major Jones noted.

Sought are volunteers from churches, service clubs, companies and families to help raise funds to help others in need as the Salvation Army has done in the Quincy area for more than 100 years.

A sign attached to the kettle will identify the group or individuals who are volunteering or name the person they are honoring or "standing for" if so desired.

Typically, a group stands for about eight hours a day, with two people from the group volunteering for one- or two-hour shifts together. It takes about 16 people to handle a day at one-hour shifts. Groups can work as few as four hours if they are smaller.

Just before the turn of the century, the Army started collecting money in soup kettles following a shipwreck in San Francisco. They were housing and feeding the survivors when the soup kettle and their resources ran dry. An inspired Salvation Army worker took the empty kettle off the stove and ran to the street to asked people to "keep the pot boiling" by making donations to help the people in need in their city.

Today, the Army uses the red kettle on a tripod in 107 countries to collect funds for people in need. The Quincy Salvation Army uses the money to meet local needs such as emergency food assistance, toys for children and gifts for shut-ins, Major Jones said.

"Contact The Salvation Army in Quincy at 617-472-2345 if you can join the other volunteers and groups who have already signed up to help," he said. "Please call right away to be assured of the date and location you or your group want most."

Nov. 6 Meeting To Work On Master Plan For Faxon Park

A master plan for an enhanced Faxon Park may be finally getting off the ground.

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi has set up a community meeting for Thursday, Nov. 6 at 7 p.m. in the Koch Family Recreation Complex, One Merrymount Parkway, to lay the groundwork.

Thanks to Hotel/Motel Tax funding, the original Faxon donations of 54.6 acres can be increased in size to 84.2 acres with the acquisition of the former Avalon and Quincy High School sites.

"We hope to integrate them so they will look like part of the park," said Raymondi.

"Residents have varying ideas about the park. We hope to learn what is acceptable and what is not. We hope to keep it a family complex."

Raymondi introduced a resolution in the City Council last Jan. 22 calling on the new administration of Mayor Tom Koch to develop a master plan for the park with input from area residents.

"I am pleased to report that Mayor Koch has responded in a positive manner," he said in a letter to residents, "and the city is ready to proceed with the development of a master plan for this area."

Raymondi said he has invited Kristen Powers, director of Park, Forestry & Cemetery, to the meeting to help volunteers organize a Friends of Faxon Park Committee to work with city officials on matters that impact the park.

Also invited are acting Fire Chief Joseph Barron to respond to concerns about fires in the parks and what has been done about them, and Police Chief Paul Keenan to deal with reports of homeless, teenaged drinking and sexually dangerous persons in the park.

"I share your concerns for controlling development and by working together we have made great progress in our community in rezoning acres of buildable areas abutting Faxon Park to open space," said Raymondi in his letter.

"Over the past few years, I have rezoned 15.84 acres (former Quincy High School) and 13.75 acres (former Avalon site) to Open Space. This has added approximately 30 valuable Open Space acres to Faxon Park."

The original Faxon park consisted of 26.8 acres donated to his city in 1885 by real estate operator Henry Hardwick Faxon with three conditions -- it remain a free public park named Faxon Park and liquor never be licensed for sale on the premises forever.

The elder Faxon's son, Henry Munroe Faxon, added 19.8 acres to the gift in 1935 and 8.2 acres more in 1940.

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, Oct. 16, 2008, at approximately 3 p.m., Officers James Dentrement, Matt Miller and Declan Breslin were on bicycle patrol in the area of the Thomas Crane Public Library during the release of Quincy High School.

LT. DAN MINTON

While looking for unusual behavior, they observed a male hanging out with a group of high school students, smoking a cigarette on the library lawn. The male was older than the students and smoking cigarettes is prohibited on library property, which is posted several places on the premise. As the officers approached the male, he glanced at them, quickly turned around and then began walking to the library with the lit cigarette.

The officers intercepted the male at the entrance to the library and advised him that smoking was not allowed on the library's property. The officers noted that the male appeared to be nervous, his skin was pale and his eyes glossy. The male provided his name and it came back that he had an active warrant for a parole violation. During the inventory pat frisk, the suspect stated he had four hypodermic syringes in his right jacket pocket.

As he was taking the syringes out of his pocket, the suspect pulled out a clear glassine baggie with a brownish substance believed to be heroin, a clear glassine baggie with an orange colored pill broken in half believed to be Suboxone, and a silver spoon with a residue of a brownish substance believed to be heroin. The suspect, a 25-year-old homeless man was placed under arrest for the parole warrant, possession of Class A (heroin) subsequent offense, and possession of Class B (suboxone) substance. The suspect was transported to the police station by Officer Stephen DesRoche and booked in the usual manner. The drugs were tagged and placed in the evidence bin to be tested at the MA State Drug Lab.

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE On Thursday, Oct. 16, 2008, at approximately 6 p.m., Officers James Dentrement, Thomas Ford, Matt Miller and Declan Breslin, while assigned to the Community Policing Bicycle Unit conducted a follow up investigation on Ruggles Street. There was an ongoing dispute between neighbors in a two family duplex style house.

Numerous neighbor complaints about this residence had been logged and there was a new concern that there was a sex offender living in the building. Neighbors stated that they had noticed someone new in the neighborhood during the past two weeks and he was walking young children to school.

Officer Stephen DesRoche, who had responded to many calls at the building, conducted a criminal record check on the male and determined that the suspect had warrants in Massachusetts and in other states. There was a default warrant out of South Boston District Court for "Assault and Battery" and he was a wanted person in New Hampshire and Alabama. New Hampshire State Police stated they would extradite him from Massachusetts. The suspect's record also showed that he was charged with "Failure to Register as a Sex Offender" in Charlestown in the year 2000.

Detective Cindy Walsh of the Special Investigative Unit was contacted regarding the suspect and his failure to register offense. Detective Walsh informed the Officers that the suspect should be charged with "Failure to Register as a Sex Offender." When the Officers located the suspect in the building, he initially gave them a false name, but after extensive questioning, he recanted and confirmed his identity. The suspect, a 41 year old male, who now claimed Quincy as his residence, was placed into custody for "Failure to Register as a Sex Offender, Fugitive from Justice in New Hampshire for Forgery and a default warrant out of South Boston District Court for Assault and Battery." Nice Work!

(FINANCIAL) SIGN OF THE TIMES: On Monday, October 20, 2008, the Quincy Police Department received a call stating that a woman was contemplating suicide - by shooting herself. Officers' Paul Holland and David Levine were able to counsel the woman and then get her help at Quincy Medical Center. The caller - the woman's Accountant!

Anchor Sails To Final Station At FR Rotary

By TOM HENSHAW

After a voyage of some 300 miles and more than two years in mothballs, the 2,600-pound anchor from the Quincy-built heavy cruiser Des Moines reached its final station over the weekend.

The anchor was hoisted into place in the rotary at the foot of the Fire River Bridge by heavy equipment provided by Jay Cashman, Inc., to serve as a reminder of Quincy's shipbuilding heritage.

"Quincy's shipbuilding history is one of the most important parts of our city's heritage," said Mayor Tom Koch.

"By placing this anchor in a prominent place at the gateway to the city, it will serve as a great permanent symbol of that heritage and as a tribute to the thousands of people who worked at the shipyard over the years.

"I wish to thank Henry Bosworth of the Sun and Michael Condon of the USS Salem for pursuing the idea and Jay Cashman for making it happen."

Right now, the anchor is resting on its side in the middle of the rotary, waiting to be raised to a standing position on its cement pedestal, painted white and dedicated in a ceremony sometime in the future.

The anchor for the USS Des Moines, sister ship to the Salem, which was built in the Fore River Shipyard in 1948, has a history all its own.

It was in Philadelphia, about to be scrapped in August, 2006, along with the ship when Mike Condon, the executive director of the USS Salem Shipbuilding Museum, stepped in to claim it.

The J. A. Mira Transportation Company of Wilmington brought it back the 300 miles from Philadelphia to Quincy, where it was stored under the temporary Fore River Bridge, about 100 feet from the rotary.

"Middlesex, which is building the bridge, babysat it for us for two years," said Condon.

It was offered to the city, free of charge, but the offer apparently got lost in the mayoral election contest. The offer was made again once the excitement died down and this time new Mayor Koch accepted.

"The guys from Middlesex carried it to the rotary on a flatbed truck," said Condon, "and the guys from Cashman picked it up and put it on the cement base."

And there it sits, a worthy successor to the granite "gazing" ball that graced the rotary for some 68 years before that too was moved to its rightful place on the Common next to City Hall.

MIDDLESEX workmen ride with 2,600-pound anchor on their flatbed truck during the 100-foot journey from the Fore River Bridge to its final home in the rotary.

ANCHOR finally finds its permanent home on a concrete slab at the rotary where it will symbolize Quincy's shipbuilding heritage.

Quincy Environmental Network To Co-Host Energy Efficiency Workshop

The Quincy Environmental Network (QEN) and Clean Water Action will host an Energy Efficiency Workshop Wednesday, Nov. 5 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

The workshop is geared to help homeowners and small business owners meet their energy needs in the face of rising energy costs this winter.

Consumers will learn free and inexpensive strategies for saving energy and money through the cold months, as well as energy-saving investments that can provide savings over the long term.

Michael Berry, chairman of the Sustainable Building Committee for the Builders Association of Greater Boston, will present the free workshop that is open to the public.

Before becoming a builder of Energy Star homes, Berry spent many years converting old homes into models of energy efficiency. He will share his experience by helping the public access energy efficient solutions for their homes and business.

The workshop is the second in QEN's series addressing conservation and wind power.

QEN invites all environmentally concerned citizens to attend their Climate Action Subcommittee meeting held the fourth Wednesday of every month in the second floor of the new City Hall building. Due to Thanksgiving, the next meeting is Wednesday, Nov. 19.

For more information on the Nov. 5 workshop, call Maura O'Gara at 617-302-1050.

Former House Speaker Tom Finneran Keynote Speaker

200 Attend John D. Noonan Annual Senior Conference

Former Speaker of the House Tom Finneran shared words of wisdom and humor at Quincy's 13th Annual John D. Noonan Senior Conference held recently at the Broad Meadows Middle School.

The conference was attended by 200 of Quincy's seniors who enjoyed a continental breakfast, keynote address and many workshops designed to keep the mind and body healthy as well as sheer enjoyment. In addition, several students from Broad Meadows referred to as "Workerbees" were, once again, a big part in making this a special day for seniors.

This year's conference marked the first year in which two outstanding senior volunteers will be annually honored. The awards are named in memory of Frank Kearns and Mary Vallier. Frank was a longtime board member of the Quincy Council on Aging as well as South Shore Elder Services, and a pioneer in providing transportation for elders and meals on wheels. Mary was also a long time member of the Council on Aging board, a founding member of DOVE and served on many boards and commissions throughout her life.

This year's recipient for the Frank Kearns award was Don McCusker of Quincy. Don has headed up the Department of Elder Services tax preparation program for several years. This program stretches from early December through to April 15th each year and serves hundreds of seniors, saving thousands of dollars.

The Mary Vallier Award was given to Sally McCusker, who has volunteered hundreds of hours to the Quincy Council on Aging is well known to give of herself to helping others without looking for any recognition.

Both Don and Sally were chosen by the committee because of the generous donation of their time and effort, which benefits others in return for the satisfaction only of being able to make a difference.

Pumpkins In Starring Role At Quincy Farmers' Market

With Halloween in the offing, the Quincy Farmers Market's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of pumpkins.

The weekly market in the Hancock Parking Area is inviting families to drop by between 2:30 and 4:30 p.m. and paint their Halloween pumpkins and decorate their tote bags in preparation for Trick or Treat goodies.

Pumpkins on sale at the market include sweet sugar pumpkins which are storable beyond Halloween and early winter and make excellent pies and soups. They are dark orange brown with deep folds.

Jack O'Lantern type of squash is light in color, easy to carve and are of lesser eating quality.

The Quincy Farmers Market will continue on Fridays until Nov. 21, weather permitting.

Storyteller At Library Saturday

Storyteller Kelly Santilli will be at the Thomas Crane Public Library Saturdays Nov. 1 and Nov. 15 at 10 a.m. with stories, songs, rhymes and more for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult.

The Nov. 15 program will be presented in English with Cantonese and Mandarin interpretation. No registration is required.

The program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

OPINION

The Bait And Switch Of Question 1

By NICK PULEO

Times are tough, and voters will certainly have the economy on their minds when they enter the voting booth and consider ballot Question 1, a binding referendum to eliminate the Commonwealth's income tax. While it may sound appealing, Question 1 would destroy local services including Quincy's public schools and end up costing taxpayers more in the end.

If the income tax were eliminated the state would lose $12.7 billion in revenue. That equals approximately 40 percent of the total state budget. It is important to consider the impact of this ballot question on our community and on our wallets.

The Commonwealth's 68,000 employees account for approximately $5.3 billion in state spending. Even if all were to face layoffs, we would only be less than half way to the cuts that would be required to implement the elimination of the income tax. Such a move would be devastating to our economy: 68,000 people is equal to every resident in Quincy between the ages of 20 and 74.

Local aid and services would be on the chopping block.

If the income tax was eliminated our schools would stand to lose 77% of total state aid. That would mean general education funding would be reduced by $12.9 million, special education funding would be reduced by $1.4 million, school construction and repair would be reduced by $786,056, and grant funding would be cut by $410,874. Overall, the Quincy public schools budget would face a 14 to 18% reduction.

The results of this loss of funding would be devastating, and potentially include: larger class sizes, elimination of full-day kindergarten, layoffs, steep fees for sports, and the elimination of enrichment activities.

But it is not just kids who would be hurt. Funds for Quincy to pay for police, fire, and other city services would be reduced by $17.3 million. The Council on Aging could face a cut of $125,566. Seniors would lose benefits from the property tax circuit breaker, Prescription Advantage, and home care services.

Moreover, capital improvement projects would be eliminated altogether from the state budget for at least eight years. Capital improvements pay for school building projects, the Fore River Bridge, and potential future improvements to Wollaston Beach and downtown Quincy.

No one would deny that eliminating taxes sounds good on its face. Families budget are getting tighter because of the rising prices of fuel, groceries, college tuition, and property taxes. I think this is a time to demand a more efficient government. But the working families of Quincy stand to lose far more than they will gain from this initiative.

According to the Massachusetts Taxpayers Association, individuals making under $50,000 per year who account for about 65 percent of the state's taxpayers pay about $850 a year in state income taxes. The Boston Globe lists Quincy's median income as $57,621. Those who will benefit the most from Question 1 are those making over $200,000 per year.

Nine other states do not have the income tax. Three of those states- Alaska, Wyoming, Nevada- have substantial streams of revenue from other sources, such as oil, minerals and gaming, respectively. In the six remaining states, local taxes are heavily relied upon to support government spending.

New Hampshire is one of the nine, and is often used in the arguments made by Question 1 proponents. Residents there pay no state taxes on their payroll earnings; however, government replaced income tax with a substantial over-reliance on local taxes. In fact, that state relies on local taxes for 47% of all government revenue. According to the website for New Hampshire's Department of Revenue, this includes a $3.33 per $1000 statewide property tax. This is an addition of 20 to 30 percent on top of local property taxes.

In fact, New Hampshire's property tax is the highest in the nation as a share of personal income.

Following New Hampshire's example would be a hardship on Quincy's families. Let us look at a family earning $50,000 and living in a house appraised at $350,000. By eliminating the income tax the household would save about $850.

But in order to provide funding for essential services (schools, public safety) a $3.33 per $1000 statewide property tax could be imposed here in Massachusetts. This would be an additional cost of $1,165.50.

That family would be receiving fewer services for $350 more per year. Such a move would be a disaster for seniors, many of whom are on limited incomes and deserve to stay in their homes. It would only further exacerbate the foreclosure crisis.

This is not an initiative aimed at helping working families. It is a move by a small group of wealthy individuals from tony suburbs that are attempting to shirk their responsibilities to the Commonwealth. In effect, Question 1 is designed to move the tax burden from the rich onto seniors and working families.

What does this all mean? The people of Quincy will be paying more and getting less. The Wall Street crowd will be again laughing all the way to the bank and the rest of us will be stuck with the bill.

Let us not be fooled. Say no to Question 1.

Council Approves Taxi Rate Increase

City councillors unanimously approved rate increases for Quincy cab companies at the Ordinance Committee meeting Monday after a presentation by Wayne McCulley, General Manager of Yellow Cab of Quincy, Inc.

The rate increase must now be approved at a formal City Council meeting.

Before final approval, councillors will require a police report describing the condition and upkeep of city cabs.

Police Lt. Kevin Tobin who handles the city's hackney inspections will be asked for a full report on all of the 90 cabs in the city.

Councillors questioned McCulley on the need for the rate increases as gasoline prices have gone down considerably. They also asked whether the increased rates will benefit cab drivers.

McCulley said that drivers must earn a good income or they wouldn't take the position.

"We spend a ton of money on maintenance," said McCulley. "I don't think we're shooting for the moon here."

Under the proposed schedule, fares will be set at the following rates: a minimum fare will be $3 and 30 cents for each additional one tenth of a mile.

A charge of ten cents may be charged for each additional passenger carried. The waiting or use charge will be $24 an hour.

Special flat rates for metered and un-metered hackney carriages may be arranged. All provisions must be posted in a conspicuous location inside or outside all licensed cabs.

Five Home-Buying Myths

Dollars and sense

by David Uffington

HOPE for Homeowners

The HOPE for Homeowners Act is now in effect. Signed by President Bush in July as part of the Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008, the HOPE program is designed to give relief to millions of struggling homeowners by restructuring their home mortgages.

To be eligible, the homeowner must:

- Use the home as his main residence.
- Certify that he hasn't defaulted on the loan just to take advantage of the HOPE program.
- Have a debt-to-income ratio greater than 31 percent as of March 1, 2008.

If the borrower qualifies, the lender will rewrite the loan down to an amount that the borrower can pay, up to a cap of 90 percent of the current market value of the home.

The new loans must have a fixed rate for 30 years, with the borrower annually paying an extra 1.5 percent of the loan principal for FHA insurance.

The downside to the borrower is that he must split any equity with the FHA down the road. That amount will be determined by a phased-in sliding scale, but can be as much as 100 percent of the equity if the borrower pays off the loan (by selling or refinancing) in the first year, or down to 50 percent at five years.

Not all lenders are eager to participate in the program, however. In theory they'll lose a bit now to keep from possibly losing a lot later if they don't help homeowners get mortgages under control. Under the program, lenders would have to reduce the amount of the mortgage to 90 percent of the home's present market value, which can be a considerable loss if home values in their area have already plunged. And the lenders will have to pay FHA, the backer of the loans, 3 percent of the amount.

Additional provisions of the Act include a federal tax credit up to $7,500 (10 percent of the purchase price) to buy a new home, new regulations on reverse mortgages for the elderly and more protections for veterans facing foreclosure.

To read details of the Act, go to www.govtrack.us, click Bills and Resolutions, and put H.R. 3221 in the search box.

(ARA) - As first-time homebuyers grow curious about the home-buying process, they often turn to friends and family for advice about purchasing a home. While these sources can provide useful tips and information, they also may perpetuate some common home-buying myths.

"While family and friends may have the best intentions when sharing their purchase experiences, it is important to make sure that first-time homebuyers have accurate information," says Brian Lee, vice president and national sales manager for ditech, a wholly-owned subsidiary of GMAC Financial Services.

There are many resources first-time buyers can use for learning about the home-financing process, including attending local mortgage seminars or researching online. Well-known mortgage lenders such as ditech often have educational resources and mortgage tools on their Web sites.

So what are some common home-buying myths? Lee, who has 10 years of experience in the mortgage industry, addresses the myths and sets the facts straight.

Myth 1: You need perfect credit.

An individual's credit score will significantly affect his or her mortgage loan approval and interest rate. Credit scores may range from 500 to 850, but the majority of scores are between 600 and 700. The higher the score, the more options you will have when looking for a mortgage. Along with your credit score, lenders will need to consider other factors before they approve a loan. Carefully review your credit report and immediately contact the credit reporting bureaus to correct any errors. You will want your credit report to be accurate by the time you apply for a mortgage.

Myth 2: Owning a home is more expensive than renting.

In many markets, owning can be as affordable as renting, especially when you consider the tax advantages of owning a home. Unlike rental costs, which increase over time, fixed-rate mortgages provide consistent monthly principal and interest payments for the life of the loan. As you make payments, the money will be applied toward the principal, increasing the equity in your home over time. Historically, owning a home has been one of the easiest ways of building wealth in America as home prices generally increase over time.

Myth 3: Lenders share your personal information.

Your personal information is protected by federal and state privacy laws. Generally, lenders must get your permission to share personal financial information with non-affiliates.

Myth 4: The mortgage process is too long and complicated.

With the right resources, the process of buying a home and obtaining a mortgage can be simplified. Expect an experienced loan officer to review the home financing process with you, define terms, and address concerns to find the financing option that's right for you. In addition, home lenders such as ditech (www.ditech.com) offer a number of online resources such as payment calculators, appraisal tools and a glossary of commonly-used mortgage terms to simplify the home-buying process.

Myth 5: Lenders love to make you wait.

Mortgage lenders don't enjoy making you wait, but it does take time to review your application. Although some lenders may give you a preliminary and conditional pre-approval based on the information provided in an application, they will need to verify this information. This typically involves confirming employment and income, financial assets, and assessing the value of the home you're purchasing. Other documents, such as a payoff statement, may have to be ordered as well. Because lenders must rely on the response time of third parties, the process may take longer than anticipated. Ask your lender about what to expect when you submit an application and to keep you informed of unexpected delays.

Raiders Improve To 5-2, Tied For Second Place

By SEAN BRENNAN

At this juncture in the high school football season every win is critical. But for the North Quincy Red Raiders, last Friday night's 21-14 victory over Hanover High School at Veterans Memorial Stadium, was just about as critical a win as a team can earn.

The seven-point victory upped North Quincy's overall record to 5-2 (four wins in the last five weeks) overall, but more importantly, brought their Fisher Division record to 2-1. As of this week, the Raiders are tied with Hanover High School for second place in the division; both teams are one game behind Rockland High School (3-0 Fisher Division record) in the race for first place in the division and a spot in the inaugural Patriot Bowl on Nov. 14.

The Patriot Bowl will match the Keenan and Fisher Division winners in a game that will decide which Patriot League team will represent the league in the state playoffs.

The Raiders lost to Rockland HS two weeks ago 23-14, putting them in the position where they need to win both of their scheduled games against fellow Fisher Division opponents Randolph HS and Middleboro HS the next two weeks. The Raiders would also need to have Rockland lose to Middleboro and Hanover and have Hanover lose at least once to be in a position to represent the Fisher Division in the Patriot Bowl.

Not impossible, especially if North Quincy can get close to the effort that was given last Friday night versus Hanover in a must-win game.

"That was a big win for our team," said NQ head coach Jim Connor. "We are happy to get the victory, but at this point we cannot be concerned with how it affects us moving forward and we surely cannot be worrying about the other teams battling it out for first place in our division."

"Since we can't control what the other teams are doing, we need to continue to take this season one game at a time and take care of ourselves."

The Raiders found themselves down by a touchdown early in the game against the Hanover Indians. On the first possession of the game, Hanover took the ball and went 62-yards on five plays. The capper was a four-yard touchdown run from running back Matt Page. A successful PAT off the foot of Brett Wheeler put the Indians up 7-0.

North Quincy's powerful offensive attack was quieted all quarter long, but the Raider defense held the Indians in check throughout the rest of the quarter and after North was shutout on its first possession of the second quarter, the defense came through with a game-changing play.

With four plus minutes to play before halftime, and the Indians in control of the ball, Raider defensive back Matt Jay intercepted an errant pass from quarterback Matt Johnson. The turnover gave the ball back to North Quincy in great field position. Two plays later, NQ quarterback Mike Stanton (10-for-15, 165 yards, TD) found wide receiver Tim Stille with a 27-yard pass. Stanton then connected with wide receiver Paul Reamer on a five-yard touchdown strike. Oluwaseyi Adeoyan's PAT attempt was successful and the score at halftime was tied at 7-7.

"Stanton is no longer a rookie," said Connor of his first-year varsity starter at quarterback. "He has quickly become a leader on this team and with the reps he has been getting he is becoming significantly better every game. He has played great the last two games."

The Raiders opened the second half the same way that the Indians opened the first half: by driving the length of the field for a go-ahead touchdown. The biggest play of the drive was a 57-yard pass from Stanton to Reamer (five catches, 103 yards, TD). The completion helped to bring North into the shadow of the Hanover goal line. Senior captain, running back Terrence Staley, finished off the drive with a one-yard touchdown run, and after Adeoyan kicked the PAT, the Raiders held their first lead of the game at 14-7.

The Indians quickly responded to the Staley touchdown. Hanover went 75-yards in just four plays on its next possession finishing off this productive drive with a five-yard TD pass from Johnson to Nick Hocking. The PAT was good and after three quarters the score was tied at 14-14.

But on this night, Staley and the Raiders would not be denied a victory. Staley, one of five running backs to see considerable time for North Quincy this fall followed the blocking of his offensive line on his next carry and went 57 yards to the house. His second touchdown run of the half put North Quincy ahead for good, 21-14.

"We have five guys who see time at running back and this depth is an advantage for us in case of injuries," said Connor. "Terrence is a guy who has been playing more and more and he really stepped up in the second half of the game with those two scores."

North Quincy's defense protected the 21-14 lead the rest of the way. With the score still knotted at 14-14 in the third quarter, Jay picked off his second pass of the game and Reamer closed out any hope the Indians had for a comeback with an INT on the final play of the game. And, as a result of good defense and quality offense, the Raiders picked up arguably their biggest win of the 2008 season.

"We are happy to pick up the win and move on," said Connor. "Time to focus our attention on Randolph."

North will play Randolph High School tonight (Thursday) at Veterans Memorial Stadium. Kickoff is scheduled for 7 p.m.

NQ In Postseason For First Time In 9 Seasons

The North Quincy Red Raiders are celebrating like it is 1999.

For the first time in the last nine seasons, North will be playing soccer games when it counts the most, in the postseason.

The 2008 regular season was very successful for the Raiders as they finished with a 10-5-3 overall record. The team finished with a 9-4-3 record in the Patriot League, finishing in third place in the league's Fisher Division behind Hanover (10-3-3) and Pembroke (11-5-0) High Schools.

The team had a great depth of talent, starting with tri-captains Shane Regan, Mike Prioli and Ryan Louis.

Regan, a senior, is one of the top scorers in the state with 20 goals and 21 assists for a total of 41 points. A varsity squad starter since his freshman year, he has been selected as a league All-Star for the past three years and was a Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic, Eastern Mass All-Star and an All-State All-Star last year, with more accolades to come this off-season.

NQ head coach Rich Hanlon called Shane "one of the fastest and best ball control players he has ever seen at the high school level."

Senior forward Mike Prioli is also a vocal leader on the Raiders. He finished second in scoring in the Fisher Division with 10 goals and 7 assists for a total of 17 points. Junior goalie Ryan Louis, a starter in net since his freshman year, is considered one of the top goalies in the league with a 1.22 GAA (goals against average).

Other seniors who contributed to the scoring this fall included Paul DeLucia (6 goals, 3 assists) and Dan Russell (3 goals, 2 assists). Seniors playing supporting roles at midfield and defense included Florian Mustafaj, Vishal Kapadnis, Dhiraj Tamang, Alex Filippi, Zach Omwenga and Parth Parikh.

The juniors on the team were led by Silas DeBus, an exchange student from Germany whom Hanlon describes as "a great addition to the team." Anchoring the defense were Kevin Therrien and Tim Gillis with strong play from Jon Couchenour at midfield. Jake Mullaney and Cody Cot also played well at defense and midfield, respectively.

Starting sophomores playing key roles on the team were forward Nick Carbone and defender Ricky Long. Freshman Matt Costa rounded out the defense.

"It is exciting to have so much success this year, especially since the team has only seven returning varsity players," added Hanlon. "The boys have worked really hard for this; they started preparing with summer league play and intense preseason conditioning."

Junior Varsity coach Chris Ranft has been a great help getting the team in top physical condition. The players have worked really hard all season and are seeing the results of all their hard work pay off."

Seedings for the tournament will be announced later in the week.

Now A Math Teacher At Atlantic Middle School

Tim Daley: A Baseball Star With Carlos Pena At Northeastern University

By LANNY LARASON

It was suggested to Tim Daley recently that he was Carlos Pena's original Evan Longoria and the math teacher at North Quincy's Atlantic Middle School shuffled somewhat uncomfortably and modestly saying, "Ahhh, I don't know about that".

But, the fact is, Daley hit cleanup with Carlos Pena third in the Northeastern University batting order in 1997 and 1998 and it is Daley, not Pena, who holds the Husky records for career home runs (37) and RBI (147).

The '97 NU baseball team won the America East conference championship and beat Bethune Cookman in a play in game to earn a spot in the NCAA regional at Stanford where they were eliminated with losses to Stanford and Cal State Fullerton. Daley led that team with 15 home runs while Pena had 11 and Daley was the team RBI leader with 59, which is NU's single season RBI record.

Any good math teacher will tell you that statistics sometimes lie. Daley, who must be pretty good in the classroom, doesn't hesitate to mention that he "benefited from being in the lineup with (Carlos). Pitchers knew he was coming up and they pitched around him a lot of times putting them in situations where they had to throw strikes to me" and "where statistically I had better numbers than him, you knew that he was the prospect. You just knew".

Daley and Pena met for the first time as participants in Boston Herald columnist, Steve Buckley's "Old Time Baseball Game" in the summer of '97. Pena had just transferred to NU from Wright State in Michigan and Daley recalls was "just a personable kid. Genuine. Family guy. What you see is really who he is". It was a pairing that for the next two seasons became for Northeastern what Pena and Longoria are now for the Rays in baseball's post-season of 2008. NU baseball coach, Neil McPhee recalls those seasons with Pena and Daley hitting back to back saying "you could feel the tension in opposing pitchers and the confidence on our bench even an inning before they came to bat. Invariably, Tim and Carlos would hit back to back shots. Tim just crushed the ball to the opposite field and Carlos hit some of the longest balls I have ever seen".

Growing up a Red Sox fan in an avid baseball family Daley played baseball at Weymouth High: "I was the fourth best player on a pretty good team, went to Northeastern and walked on". Younger sister, Kate, only recently moved from the head softball coaching job at Weymouth High to the head job at Abington HS and both are on the coaching staff at Hingham's South Shore Baseball Club where he will coach the 16 and under Seadogs AAU team this summer. He's on the coaching/instructional staff at SSBC where he takes part in clinics and camps and is available for individual hitting lessons. Now in his early 30s, Daley's a baseball "lifer" who coached the Weymouth American Legion team deep into the state championship last summer finishing two wins away from the title and is on the lookout for a head coaching job at the high school level.

As that lifelong Red Sox fan, Daley says despite the connection with his friend and former teammate he'd prefer to see the Sox in the World Series as opposed to the Rays, but "clearly if Tampa Bay advances out of this series I'm hoping they win it all. For him."

Raiders Need Two Wins To Reach Postseason

By SEAN BRENNAN

It will all come down to last night's Patriot League game against Scituate High School and Friday's non-league game against Somerville High School. Win both and they are in the postseason, lose one of these two games and the dream of a twelfth straight tournament appearance is officially over.

The North Quincy Red Raiders entered their final five games of the regular season needing to win four-out-of-five to advance to the postseason. The Raiders knocked off Rockland HS (1-0) and Middleboro HS (1-0) late last week before dropping a 6-1 decision to Pembroke HS last Friday.

The Raiders started their late-season tournament push with a huge 1-0 victory over Patriot League opponent

Girls' Soccer

Rockland on Oct. 21. The two teams had played to a 0-0 draw earlier in the year (Sept. 18), but this time around the Raiders received a spectacular showing from its defense and senior goalie Siobhan Carnell (35 saves) and got a timely goal from junior Cara Murtagh (assist to junior Kristen Peterson) to earn the win.

"This was unquestionably our best game of the year," said NQ head coach Paul Bregoli. "Carnell was unbelievable in net and the defense of Shannon Coleman and Devon McKay at outside back, Sammi Bonanni at stopper and Lindsey Repucci at sweeper was phenomenal. It was our best performance of the season and it was a big win."

Presidents' Record Drops To 1-2 In Patriot League

The Quincy Presidents were looking to build off their 3-0 win last week over Whitman-Hanson High School when they traveled down to Kingston last Saturday to take on the red-hot Silver Lake Lakers in Patriot League Keenan Division football action.

The Presidents got the boot.

A 32-yard field goal off the right foot of Silver Lake's freshman placekicker, Jackie Hurley, with just over two minutes to play in the game gave the Lakers a 19-10 advantage; a late-game safety accounted for the final two points and Silver Lake beat Quincy, 21-10.

The loss drops Quincy's record to 3-4 overall and 1-2 in the Patriot League. For the Lakers (5-2 overall, 3-0 league), the victory keeps them in contention for the top-spot in the Keenan Division along with Duxbury and Hingham HS with two games to play before the Patriot League holds the first-ever Patriot Bowl on Nov. 14.

FOOTBALL Quincy - 10 Silver Lake - 21

Hurley had gotten the host team on the scoreboard first with an opening-quarter field goal that capped off the Lakers first possession of the game. The Presidents' defense held the Lakers to the field goal try after they had moved into the Quincy red zone to open the game.

Trailing 3-0 as the second quarter began, the Presidents evened the score at 3-3 on a 24-yard field goal from last week's hero, Mark Gilbody. But the Lakers would not be denied.

Senior running back Robbie Struble (107 yards, TD) finished off a 10-play, 69-yard drive with a one-yard touchdown run with less than a minute to play before halftime. Hurley's PAT was good and the Lakers entered the locker room with a 10-3 advantage.

Silver Lake extended that lead late in the third quarter. After Struble took the ball 27 yards to put the ball at the Quincy 13-yard line, Darius Smith found the end zone on an 18-yard end-around with seconds remaining and the Lakers took a 16-3 lead into the fourth quarter. The two-point conversion was no good.

In the fourth quarter, Quincy finally got into the end zone. Quarterback Lance Peterson (9-for-22, 109 yards, TD) connected on a nine-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Anthony Raddatz. Gilbody's PAT made it a 16-10 game.

And then Hurley ended it with his late-game field goal.

The Presidents play their final home game of the season at Veterans Memorial Stadium on Friday night against Scituate High School. Kickoff is scheduled for 7 p.m.

The Presidents will play on the road against Hingham High School on Nov. 7. Quincy will be the away team on Thanksgiving against North Quincy.

the 1-0 advantage. The play of Carnell (sixth shutout in 2008, 17th of her varsity career) continued to move the Raiders closer to their stated preseason goal of making it to the postseason.

"Siobhan has been so good this year and in this game she stopped shot after shot," said Bregoli. "Her play won it for us."

North Quincy freshman Jonlyn Lydon and senior Kerry Donaghey both missed on breakaway scoring chances in the second half but the Raiders held on nonetheless.

Bregoli singled out the play of senior captains Amy Carchedi and Jillian O'Brien, junior Rachel Lucier and senior Lindsey Reilly.

Against Pembroke HS, North fell behind early and dropped a 6-1 decision. Carnell made 19 saves before sitting out the second half and Brittany Folkins scored the lone goal. The goal was the third of the season for Folkins to go along with five assists.

"We came out a little flat," said Bregoli. "Pembroke is a great team but we didn't really play up to our capabilities. Losing to them means that we need to win our final two games to advance."

Playing well against Pembroke included Murtagh, Lucier, senior Erin Collins and Logan White.

If North Quincy defeated Scituate High School Wednesday night and beat Somerville this Friday the Raiders will advance to the postseason for the twelfth season in a row. Seedings for the tournament will be announced early next week.

Cold Weather Fitness

The late fall and winter months can make it difficult to continue a fitness routine that consists of outdoor activities. Colder temperatures and less sunlight require a realistic and diverse plan to keep you moving toward your fitness goals. These tips can keep you fit on the inside when it gets cold outside.

- Anticipate a temperature change. Begin planning alternative exercise routines early. Plan ahead; don't wait until you are forced to change your workouts. A fitness routine that consists of running, walking, cycling or hiking may have to be altered during colder months.

- Find innovative and fun activities that could take the place of outdoor activities that may have to be put on hold during the winter, such as dance lessons, spinning classes, mall walking or indoor rock climbing. Try different activities before the really cold weather arrives, so you're well-prepared if your workouts have to change. Keeping yourself active and motivated are top priorities.

- Prepare your body for colder weather. Not everyone hibernates; if you continue to walk, run or cycle outdoors as the weather changes, it is extremely important to equip your body with tools to fight the elements. Dress in layers and protect your head, ears, face, nose, hands and toes. As you begin to warm up you can always peel back layers. And drink plenty of fluids. Although the weather is cold outside and you may take longer to build a sweat, staying hydrated is still important.

- Go with the flow. Try to remain flexible and give yourself many options. Since the weather is beyond our control, developing plans for different scenarios can be helpful. Joining a health club, purchasing an aerobic video or teaming up with a friend who owns fitness equipment are three options you can use to complete your aerobic workout regardless of outside conditions. Also, remember not to be too hard on yourself if you miss a day — just get back on track as soon as possible.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

Keeping Colds And Flu At Bay

It's lurking just around the corner. No, not a creepy Halloween spook, but cold and flu season. And the best way to avoid it, according to Dolly Darcy, RN, MSN, FNP-C, and Sharon Giordani, RN, MSN, FNP-C, is to get an annual flu shot and wash your hands — a lot.

"It is a good idea to get a flu shot as soon as they are available, which is right now," recommends Darcy, noting that the flu shot is generally approved for use in people 6 months of age and older and the nasal-spray flu vaccine is an option for healthy people 2-49 years of age who are not pregnant. "Getting the vaccine early provides protection throughout the flu season, which can stretch into the spring. But even if you get a shot later in the season, it will still provide some protection against flu."

Cold and flu viruses spread mainly from person to person through coughing or sneezing of people with the viruses. People may also become infected by touching something with viruses on it and then touching their mouth or nose.

"With the flu, individuals may be able to infect others beginning a day before symptoms develop, before they even know they are sick and up to five days after becoming sick," adds Giordani. "So I would encourage everyone, in addition to being vaccinated, to practice frequent hand washing to decrease your chances of getting the flu, as well as colds and other illnesses. And if you are sick with a cold or flu, try to reduce your contact with others and cover your coughs and sneezes with the crook of your arm or with a tissue to help keep germs from spreading."

While both colds and flu can make you feel lousy, the flu can lead to complications, including bacterial pneumonia, ear infections, sinus infections, dehydration, and worsening of chronic medical conditions, such as congestive heart failure, asthma, or diabetes, while colds generally do not result in serious health problems. Because their symptoms can be similar, telling the difference between a cold and the flu can be tricky. In general, the flu is worse than the common cold, and symptoms such as fever, body aches, extreme tiredness, and dry cough are more common and intense. Stomach symptoms, such as nausea, vomiting, and diarrhea, also can occur but are more common in children than adults. Colds are usually milder than the flu and are more likely to cause a runny or stuffy nose.

If you have questions about whether you should get a flu vaccine, or if you get the flu and would like to know if antiviral drugs are an appropriate treatment option, consult your health-care provider.

Darcy and Giordani provide primary care services at the Boston University Medical Group at Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell Street, during extended hours on Wednesday evenings.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

DOES YOUR FAMILY GET ENOUGH FLUORIDE?

According to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the reduction in dental cavities due to adding fluoride to public water supplies is one of the top ten public health achievements of the 20th century. Yet, 60 years after fluoridation was first introduced into public water supplies to help prevent tooth decay, the water systems serving about 30 percent of Americans are not giving them fluoridated water. This translates to 82 million Americans not getting fluoridated water from community water systems. It should also be pointed out that people who obtain their water from private wells or from bottled water may not get fluoride, either. If you have concerns about getting sufficient fluoride, consult with your dentist. Widespread use of fluoride has been a major factor in the decline in the prevalence and severity of dental caries (i.e., tooth decay) in the United States and other economically developed countries. When used appropriately, fluoride is both safe and effective in preventing and controlling dental caries. We are dedicated to excellence in dental care. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer a full array of dental procedures. We want you and your family to look and feel your very best. Please call us at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. New patients are always welcome. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com. P.S. Your dentist can recommend a number of fluoride treatments.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The high standards you set for yourself don't always translate into the behavior you expect of others. That relationship problem can be resolved if you're more flexible and less judgmental.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) This could be a good time to share some of your plans with those closest to you. Their comments could give you some added insight into how you might accomplish your goals.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) An attack of self-doubt might be unsettling for the usually super-assured Feline. But it could be your inner voice telling you to hold off implementing your plans until you've reassessed them.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a great time for you to reward yourself for all your hard work by taking a trip you haven't spent months carefully planning, to somewhere you never thought you'd be going.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Some misunderstandings resist being resolved. But your sincerity in wanting to soothe those hurt feelings wins the day. By month's end, that relationship should begin to show signs of healing.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A hectic job schedule begins to ease just in time to blow off all that work-generated steam on Halloween. A family situation runs into an unexpected complication.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A cutting remark in the workplace needs to be handled with finesse. Remember: How you respond could determine the depth of support you gain from colleagues.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Once again, that Capricornian stubborn streak sets in and could keep you from getting much-needed advice. Fortunately, it lifts by week's end, in time to make an informed decision.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A surprise trip early in the week could lead to other unexpected offers when you return. Word to the wise: Avoid talking too much about this until you've made some decisions.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Learning dominates the week for perspicacious Pisceans, who are always looking to widen their range of knowledge. A series of important job-linked commitments begins late in the week.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"The realization that there are other points of view is the beginning of wisdom. Understanding what they are is a great step. The final test is understanding why they are held." - Charles M. Campbell

Yes, it is often difficult to be dispassionate why people do or say certain things. You have to try to be dispassionate and objective, difficult as that may be, and not let yourself become hurt or offended. Ask yourself, "Why did he say that?" "Why did he do that?" ... When you understand people's reactions, then by the use of patience and good will you can often heal their hurts and resentments.

It is a sad fact that many people sometimes go through life misunderstanding associates, friends and family. Much misunderstanding is due to the fact that a few drops of kindly understanding are not allowed to fall into the cups that would be brimming with happiness if a little understanding were present. Couldn't it be said that a little misunderstanding can go a long way toward solving most serious situations? ...

Quincy-North Quincy Golf
Finish Up Season At Granite Links

The Granite Nine was the site for the season finale for both the Quincy Presidents and the North Quincy Red Raider varsity boys golf teams last Wednesday at Granite Links Golf Club.

Despite high winds and chilly temperatures, each team sent out eight golfers to play in the four-ball style competition. The day turned out to be more about enjoying the beautiful layout of the course and camaraderie than the scores on the golf card. All enjoyed the day of golf.

This day of golf capped off an outstanding season for the North Quincy Red Raiders. The team finished the year in first place, tied with Hanover High School, in the Patriot League's Fisher Division with a 7-3 record. The Raiders went on and captured the Patriot League tournament outright.

North Quincy's Fisher Division opponents included teams from Hanover, Pembroke, Rockland and Middleboro High Schools.

Sophomore Mike Mulkerins placed first (individually) in the Patriot League tournament and teammate Matt Brundige finished in third place.

The third member of North's power trio, junior Peter Eleey, paced the Red Raiders, as the team's top golfer, all season long.

Mulkerins continued his excellent golf when he qualified for the State Tournament by shooting a round of 75 at Glen Ellen Country Club last week. The team, as a whole, narrowly missed qualifying for the State Tournament, placing fifth out of the over 30 teams that participated in the qualifying event.

The Quincy Presidents wrapped up a tough season on the links, one that saw the team win only one match during the season. Quincy finished the year with a 1-10 record playing in the Patriot League's Keenan Division.

The Presidents' Keenan Division foes included teams from Duxbury, Hingham, Scituate, Whitman-Hanson and Silver Lake High Schools.

Quincy should be much improved in 2009 as the team has a talented trio of juniors led by Pat Conley, Tim Young and Kevin Keith returning next year.

Coaches Lou Venturelli (QHS), and Bob Doyle (NQHS) extend their gratitude to the Chris Sleeper, head professional at Granite Links, for the use of his course this season, as well as Donnie Small from Presidents Golf Course and Mike McBroom from Furnace Brook Golf Course and their staffs for their continued support during the 2009 golf season.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said C-Mart officials have recently concluded a traffic study on the impact of the project on the area and have outlined proposed traffic mitigation measures.

The proposed market, an Asian supermarket, was the subject of a neighborhood meeting held in September by McNamee and Ward 5 City Councillor Douglas Gutro.

McNamee said area residents described the need for a store that features Asian foodstuffs and culinary favorites.

However, a large number of residents "expressed grave concerns regarding the intensity of the use at the proposed site and feared an adverse impact on area traffic"

After a lengthy discussion last week, councillors set the Nov. 6 date to conform to requirements for applications for special permits. All requests must be heard with 65 days and Nov. 6 is the deadline for a first hearing on the C-Mart plan.

Plans for the supermarket may be reviewed at City Hall.

New Fire Chief Test To Be Called

A new Civil Service test for Fire Chief candidates will be scheduled after three of the four who signed to accept the job ultimately decided they would not take it if appointed.

Mayor Thomas Koch said acting Chief Joseph Brown will remain in that position until the new test, and the subsequent Civil Service list, becomes active next year.

"Civil Service rules dictate that the appointing authority, in this case Mayor Koch, have at least three candidates to choose from. Right now, there is one," said Human Resources Director Stephen McGrath.

Deputy Chief George McGunagle, Deputy Chief Jeffrey Starr and Captain Paul Griffith all stated they would not accept the top position in the Fire Department after signing Civil Service paperwork indicating they wished to be considered for the chief's job. Deputy Chief Gary Smyth was the fourth candidate.

"A clean slate will be the fairest way to handle it at this point," Koch said. "I have full confidence in Acting Chief Baron, his command staff and all our firefighters. We have the best fire department in the Commonwealth, and the process for selecting a chief is not going to change that."

The decision to call for a new test comes after an original selection process that was clouded by several issues leading up to fire Chief Timothy Pettinelli's retirement this year, Koch said. Among those issues:

The last Civil Service exam for chief's candidates was held in 2006 and was set to expire prior to Pettinelli's scheduled retirement.

A new test was scheduled for last year, with those results expected to be in effect when Pettinelli retired. But too few people signed up for the test, meaning that the old Civil Service list would be extended for another year

Barack Obama, on his way to the White House, put Quincy solidly in his camp with an easy win here over John McCain Tuesday.

Obama and running mate Joseph Biden took Quincy with 57.89 percent of the vote to the John McCain-Sarah Palin ticket's 39.49 percent.

The actual vote count was 22,775 to 15,536—a margin of 7,239.

Obama, before midnight, had more than the necessary 270 electoral votes to become the first black president in the nation's history. The popular vote appeared closer.

Obama and Biden will be inaugurated Jan. 20.

On the statewide ballot initiatives, Quincy voted No on Question 1 — the Repeal of the State Income Tax — by a 68.68 to 31.32 percent. The Quincy vote was No, 25,978 and Yes, 11,848.

Quincy voted Yes on Question 2 — the Decriminalization of Marijuana — by a 63.16 to 36.84 percent — vote. With a total of 24,117 voting Yes and 14,064 voting No.

Mixed Reaction At Hearing

Koch Introduces Track Plan For Faxon Field

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The city could have a new regulation size track at Faxon Field as early as next Fall, engineers from Gale Associates of Weymouth told Park Commissioners at a public hearing Monday.

Gale Associates' Bill Seymour unveiled sketches for a track on the three-acre site behind Quincy High School that he said meets all MIAA, (Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association), the ADA requirements for disabled persons, and, also, addresses space, soil and water issues.

A similar presentation is planned Monday at the City Council's Park and Recreation Committee meeting at 6:30 p.m.

Seymour was introduced by Mayor Thomas Koch at Quincy High School auditorium. Koch told the sometimes skeptical, sometimes hostile, audience of approximately 40 persons, "It makes perfect sense to locate the track behind the new high school."

More than a dozen audience members then peppered Seymour with questions regarding flooding, parking, lane widths, lengths and safety.

One audience member threatened to contact the attorney general's office and file legal action after a heated exchange with City Solicitor Jim Timmins regarding endangered fish and conservation procedures.

Seymour described a track with a radius of 100 meters, 10 meters above the requirement for MIAA approval, enclosing a football field and accommodating such sports as the long jump, triple jump, high jump, pole vault and shot-put venues.

Under the plan, Seymour said electronic scoring could easily be added along with spectator seating for 300 persons and a storage shed. The plan provides five new parking spaces for handicapped and public safety vehicles.

However, Quincy High School principal Frank Santoro said the high school parking lot with 250 spaces can be used as well as the parking spaces along Coddingtton St.

The current plan does not include space for javelin meets which was a major hurdle for several audience members.

"It lacked room for the javelin event and I've never seen the discus event being thrown within the field," said Maureen Keeley who heads Parents for Pageant, a group interested in locating the track facility at Pageant Field.

Under Gale Associates' plan, the javelin events would be held across Coddingtton Street on YMCA property.

Koch said he received a verbal agreement, but not a written agreement, from YMCA officials at this time. Audience members doubted that the Y Board of Directors would agree in writing.

Seymour described the Faxon Park parcel as bordered by a Wetlands Resource Area and was asked what type of clearance would be needed from the Conservation Commission and Department of Environmental Protection (DEP).

Raymondi Wants Review On Trucks Carrying Fertilizer Pellets

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi doesn't think it is a good idea to have trucks rumbling through city streets at all hours carrying fertilizer pellets from the old Fore River Shipyard.

Apparently that's the way it's going to be for a while after fire last week in a ventilation pipe closed down rail deliveries from the New England Fertilizer Company plant on the premises.

"It's not fair to residents of Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth to live with trucks on their streets day and night," said Raymondi, who has asked the City Council to take up the question at its Nov. 10 meeting.

"Two years ago," said Raymondi, "the MWRA, the owner of the property, decided not to renew a contract to provide standby rail service to get the pellets out."

"I was against it. Senator Morrissey was against it. But the MWRA told us there had been no incidents and the standby rail was costing a lot of money. Our position was; No trucks.

"Last week there was a fire at the fertilizer plant that interrupted the shipping. A ventilator pipe, three inches in diameter, caught fire and it closed down."

The Quincy Fire Department had difficulty accessing the fire due to the configuration of the pipe. There was a structural problem that needed to be addressed.

'Sarsaparilla' And FDR

"Sarsaparilla!"

Just one word.

But the beginning of a most unbelievable story of World War II. One that never made the headlines because of the tight security and secrecy surrounding it.

I first wrote about it after the war in the 1950s. Ann McLaughlin, director of the Thomas Crane Library, has invited me to retell it for the "Quincy Remembers World War II" series on the library's website (thomascranelibrary.org).

And, I get a column out of it, too.

It goes back to Armistice Day (Veterans Day), November 1943 and Norfolk, VA. I was a signalman on the destroyer USS Cogswell and had the signal watch that particular night. Our captain, Comdr. Harold Deuterman said to me:

"I am expecting an important message. It might be only one word — sarsaparilla. If it comes, awake me immediately."

It wasn't too long before the battleship USS Iowa reached out of the inky darkness with a flashing signal light.

Three dots, dot dash, dot dash dot and so on until the flashes spelled.

The captain was awakened and the message relayed to two other destroyers, one of them the William D. Porter.

Whatever else "sarsaparilla" meant it told us to get underway. Around midnight, the Iowa, and its screening escorts the Cogswell, Porter and another destroyer whose name I don't remember, slipped quietly out to sea under cover of darkness while Norfolk slept.

It was a mysterious trip. No one told us where we were going but you could tell something was up.

A few days later we were nearing Gibraltar. I was on the bridge with other signalmen. A quiet, peaceful day-until the silence was shattered by a booming cry: "T-O-R-P-E-D-O!"

And there it was a torpedo streaking through the water toward the Iowa.

The Iowa was warned by emergency flag hoists and a talk-between-ships telephone. She managed to turn to avoid the torpedo, which exploded about 50 yards behind in her wake.

General quarters were sounded and the Cogswell crew rushed to their battle stations as we prowled the area looking for the German submarine to drop depth charges on.

But we couldn't locate the sub. Then we learned there was no sub to locate.

The torpedo was not from a German submarine. It had been fired from the Porter.

The flag officer in charge of the destroyer escort was on the Cogswell and sputtered and fumed when the Porter informed us "that was our torpedo."

The Porter, it was later learned, had its torpedo mounts aimed at the Iowa in a simulated attack training session. A live torpedo in one of the tubes was accidentally fired and sped toward the Iowa's No. 2 Magazine.

If the torpedo had hit, it could have sunk the Iowa.

The flag officer continued to sputter. Why all the rage, I thought to myself, a young kid from Quincy Point. After all, it didn't hit the Iowa.

But he knew something that we didn't know.

On the Iowa were Harry Hopkins, Admirals Leahy, McIntire and Cook. Generals Marshall, Arnold, Handy, Somervell and Watson according to Hopkins' private papers made public after the war.

Not only that, but with them was Admiral Ernest King, Chief of Naval Operations.

FDR

And someone else was aboard the Iowa: President Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

We were escorting him to the Tehran Conference to meet with Churchill, Stalin and Chiang Kai-Shek.

We later turned the Iowa over to another division of destroyers one day out of Africa. The Cogswell and Porter headed to Bermuda.

The Porter was held in Bermuda for a board of inquiry investigation with the whole ship under arrest. The board found that the Iowa episode was an accident with no evidence of any sabotage.

The Porter was ordered to the Aleutian Islands apparently as punishment duty.

But that didn't end our relationship.

The Cogswell headed for the Panama Canal and out to the Pacific where we screened the carriers in the Third and Fifth Fleets.

And on to the Marshalls, Truk, Saipan, Guam, Tinian, the Philippines, China Sea, Formosa, the Bonnin Islands, etc.

Forgotten was the William D. Porter.

But now it was June 1945 and Okinawa, the doorstep to the Japanese mainland. The Cogswell was assigned to radar picket duty between Okinawa and Japan with other destroyers. Two destroyers would go out together as a team.

On June 10, the Cogswell moved out to take its picket station. Out came another destroyer to join us.

We could hardly believe it. It was the William D. Porter, which we hadn't seen since the Iowa incident.

We took our positions about 500 yards apart. And suddenly there was a Japanese Kamikaze high in the sky and diving down on us.

We fired all our guns at the plane but it got through. Now the pilot had to make a quick decision, which destroyer would be his target. He picked the Porter.

We thought it crashed onto the Porter. But according to the Navy version, it was a near-miss. The plane's bomb apparently passed under the Porter before exploding causing uncontrolled flooding.

LCS hurried to the Porter's side to take off 350 crewmembers. Word was that there were no fatalities.

About three hours later, the Porter rolled over on her starboard side. Her bow shot up like the grasping hand of a person drowning and she slipped into her watery grave.

It was a sad sight.

We were with her only twice: On day firing a torpedo at the President of the United States and the other taking a Kamikaze instead of us.

She was a hard luck ship. Jinxed.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1910 postcard view of Billings Street in Atlantic looking east toward the boulevard. Newbury Avenue crosses just beyond the parked car in the center of the picture. Electric trolleys ran on Billings Street from Newbury Avenue to East Squantum Street. The trolleys ran here from the old Atlantic Depot up Sagamore Street to Newbury Avenue turning right on Billings to Squantum Street. They then went on to Squantum ending at Squantum Park. Perhaps because the trolleys ran through here beginning in the 1890s, this was one of the first fully developed streets in Atlantic. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Thanks To All Who Participated In Food Drive

The Quincy food pantries, churches and shelters say "thank you" to everyone who participated in Mayor Koch's Holiday food drive that was held Oct. 25, "Make a Difference Day."

Thank you, Quincy residents, for responding to the call for help by giving over 3,500 pounds of food that was distributed to local agencies. Your individual gifts of a few cans or boxes added up as the whole city got involved. The donations you made make it possible for many individuals and families to have meals on their tables and food in their cupboards.

Thank you, Mayor Koch, for sponsoring this event and for opening the Richard J. Koch Park and Recreational Building to be used for receiving and distributing the food. Thank you, USPS Quincy Letter Carriers, for the "extra duty" you did on this day because not only did you lighten your bag by distributing the mail, but you filled it up again with over 1^{1/2} tons of food. We appreciate all the hard work you did on that day.

Thank you, to all of the volunteers, for the hours of hard work that you contributed to get this food sorted, boxed and distributed. We appreciate the giving of your time, especially on a Saturday, to help others.

To everyone who participated - letter carriers, Quincy residents, city employ-

LaRaia, Tobin In Bitter Battle

By FRANK McCAULEY

The most bitterly contested Quincy mayoral campaign since the Charles Ross-Tom McGrath tong wars of a half-century ago, reaches a climax next Tuesday, Election Day 1977.

The city's 50,916 registered voters will have an opportunity to choose between embattled Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia and City Council President Arthur H. Tobin, leader of the opposition the last two years.

City Clerk John M. Gillis predicted that some 70% to 75% of the registered voters would show up at the polls, a large turnout reflecting the bitterness of the campaign.

COUNCILLOR AT-LARGE INCUMBENTS FACE STRONG CHALLENGERS

Incumbent Councillor at-Large candidates Paul Harold and John J. Quinn, along with Ward Six Councillor Dennis Harrington, face strong challengers in the upcoming November city election.

The three incumbents, one of them (Harrington) so designated by court order, will appear first on the ballot in alphabetical order with the designation "Candidate for Re-election" under their names.

Opposing candidates include in alphabetical order, former Councillor and state Representative Joseph E. Brett, newcomer Michael E. Faherty and present School Committee member Francis X. McCauley.

Apple Dumplings

Homemade apple pie is a favorite with the family, and I enjoy baking them. However, recently, I found a wonderful recipe for apple dumplings which I think will be as popular as apple pie. It takes about the same time to prepare this delicious dessert.

The first thing is to either make a pie crust or purchase it already made in the market. Then buy six small apples, either Granny Smith or mackintosh/ (I use both)

In the nutshell if I had to tell you the easiest way to make this dessert, it would be you have to wrap each apple after you fill the core.

Apple Dumplings

For the filling

5 tablespoons sugar
3/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 cup raspberry jam
1/2 cup, chopped walnuts
1/4 cup light brown sugar
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
6 small apples
1 large egg (for egg wash)
1 tablespoon water
whipped cream for topping

Preheat oven to 350 degrees

First cut six round circles out of the dough and roll each piece into 1/8 inch thick. Combine the sugar and cinnamon and sprinkle about a teaspoon over the dough round.

Then combine the rest of the sugar and cinnamon with the jam, walnuts, brown sugar and lemon juice in a small bowl.

Peel and core the apples, creating a cavity about an inch wide. Place each apple in the center of the dough round. Spoon 1 1/2 tablespoons of the jam mixture into each apple.

Now starting on one side, press the dough against the apple and repeat allowing dough to fall into pleats as you work your way around the apple.

Gather the dough on the top and trim off any extra dough. Pinch it closed. Just wrap the apple as nice as you can.

Brush each apple with the beaten egg and water. Place on a slightly greased cookie sheet. Bake until golden brown, 45 to 55 minutes. Serve warm with the cream. It takes a while, but they are so pretty to look at and more delicious when they are eaten.

Wine Tasting Benefits Quincy Animal Shelter

While it was appropriately raining cats and dogs outside, inside the Quincy Animal Shelter's 3rd Annual Fall Wine went off without a hitch.

Four of Quincy's liquor vendors - Presidential, National, Liberty and Shop & Save - provided samples and the stories behind the wines they featured at the event.

The Fall Wine Tasting, held at the Masonic Hall, Hancock St., was attended by 200 people who were treated to refreshments and entertainment while they helping the Shelter's fund raising efforts by participating in the many raffle drawings.

Energy Education Forum At Crane Library Nov. 10

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP), Cong. William Delahunt, and Mayor Thomas Koch will host an Energy Education Forum Monday, Nov. 10 at 10 a.m. in the Thomas Crane Public Library, main meeting room, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The forum is open to the public.

"This is going to be an incredibly difficult winter for many families in Quincy, and I am proud to join QCAP, Congressman Delahunt and our entire community as we come together to do everything possible for families in our city who will desperately need assistance," said Mayor Koch.

Forum participants will learn about local resources that can help them pay a portion of their winter heating bills (such as QCAP's Fuel Assistance Program). Speakers from QCAP, the City of Quincy, a Utility Company and the Fire Department will discuss winter safety and energy savings tips.

Light refreshments will be served. For reservations contact Melinda Alexander, 617-479-8181 ext. 356 or malexander@qcap.org.

The forum is an important educational tool as the continuing spike in energy costs and an economy in crisis are putting the squeeze on consumers, Delahunt said.

"Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) and other human service organizations in my district that work with consumers on energy assistance problems see a critical need to significantly increase funding for LIHEAP, fuel assistance and weatherization programs," Delahunt added.

"Fuel assistance is a critical resource for low-income households to stay safe and warm during the winter months," said Beth Ann Strollo, QCAP's executive director. "We are pleased to announce that the eligibility for fuel assistance has been increased to 60% of the median income this year. With high home energy prices and these tough economic times, we expect to help more residents and urge anyone who may be eligible to call us before the very cold weather hits."

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) is a private not-for-profit organization that was incorporated in 1965. QCAP delivers programs that improve the quality of life for low-income residents while giving them opportunities to reach self-sufficiency.

QCAP is the local Fuel Assistance provider for the communities of Braintree, Milton, Quincy and Weymouth. To find out more, contact Energy Programs at 617-479-8181 x 301.

Public Works Commissioner Larry Prendeville has set up a telephone hotline for citizens to report graffiti to his office.

Markings on city property are removed with a specialized city-owned machine or painted over.

Prendeville said that Post Office officials have "been very responsive" to reports of property damage and vandalized mailboxes and have pledged to continue.

However, graffiti is a never-ending struggle and he said that the DPW will continue working with the police department, the T, and the schools, according to Prendeville who said the public's cooperation is essential.

Prendeville said graffiti is photographed and documented and officials keep records and photographs in efforts to track down serial taggers who travel from place to place leaving a specific marks.

Frederick C. Murphy

Medal Of Honor Winner City's 'Unknown War Hero'

By TOM HENSHAW

He has a school named for him in Weymouth; a federal center in Waltham; a 63-year-old Victory ship awaiting scrapping in Beaumont, Texas; a room in the University off Pennsylvania library; even an Army barracks in Stuttgart, Germany.

But in his hometown of Quincy --- not very much.

Except for a plaque attached to a boulder on Sea Street, an engraved brick at the World War II Memorial, a park off Narragansett Road in Merrymount that the Park Department can't find; and possibly the side road leading to the Quincy Youth Arena, Frederick C. Murphy is the city's unknown war hero.

Murphy, whose family owned and operated the Strand and Alhambra Theatres in downtown Quincy, was a 26-year-old unarmed medic with the 65th Infantry Division on March 18, 1945, when his 259th Regiment engaged the Germans at Saarlautern.

Wounded in the shoulder by machine gun fire, he continued treating others' wounds until he stepped on a mine, blowing off one of his feet. Still he continued ministering to others until he crawled over another live mine. This one he didn't survive.

For his sacrifice, Murphy was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor.

The fact that his hometown has done so little to memorialize Murphy doesn't sit well with Lennie Morris, an acquaintance from Quincy whose 264th Regiment was caught up in the same battle and who recalls watching him die.

It was Morris who purchased the brick in the World War II Memorial walkway to remind his hometown in a small way of his heroic deed in the heat of battle.

"The Germans shot him," said Morris. "It spun him around. He hit the mine that blew off his foot. He tied a tourniquet to stop the bleeding. He staggered to a second wounded man. He reached him and the mine blew him up. What a terrible sight."

FREDERICK C. MURPHY

"What he did I could never do. He wandered out in a mine field looking for wounded. There was no funeral. There couldn't have been from what I saw. There was nothing left of him."

That's not exactly true. His remains are buried in Plot F, Row 11, Grave 19 of the Lorraine American Cemetery and Memorial in Saint Amand in the province of Lorraine, France. Not far from the scene of his heroism in Saarlautern.

Morris said he first met Murphy before the war with his mother and father in a Cottage Avenue restaurant.

"We were not real close friends," he said. "He was a few years older than I was. We'd see each other once in a while and it was 'Hi, Fred.' And 'Hi, Lennie.' But I'd still like to see Fred's memory perpetuated."

His Medal of Honor citation was awarded Feb. 26, 1946, by President Harry Truman.

"An aid man, he was wounded in the right shoulder soon after his comrades had jumped off in a dawn attack 18 March, 1945, against the Siegfried Line at Saarlautern, Germany."

"He refused to withdraw for treatment and continued forward, administering first aid under heavy machine-gun, mortar and artillery fire."

"When to company ran into a thickly sown antipersonnel minefield and began to suffer more and more casualties, he continued to disregard his own wound and unhesitatingly braved the danger of exploding mines, moving about through heavy fire and helping the injured until he stepped on a mine which severed on his feet."

"In spite of his grievous wounds, he struggled on with his work. Refusing to be evacuated and crawling from man to man administering to them while in great pain and bleeding profusely."

"He was killed by the blast of another mine which he had dragged himself across in an effort to reach still another casualty."

"With indomitable courage, and unquenchable spirit of self-sacrifice and supreme devotion to duty which made it possible for him to continue performing his tasks while barely able to move, Pfc Murphy saved many of his fellow soldiers at the cost of his own life."

Murphy was born in Boston but grew up in Quincy and graduated from Thayer Academy in Braintree. He entered the University of Pennsylvania with the Class of 1943 but dropped out before finishing his freshman year and left little mark.

Not until their 50th reunion did the Class of '43 realize that the classmate they had known so briefly had been a war hero. He had been forgotten by them, too.

"There were a few who had known him as a freshman," said Class President Jack Lawler. "He came from a suburb of Boston and students rode back on the train from Boston to Philadelphia with him. Some were in his dormitory but we lost sight of him after the war and did not know he had been killed."

The discovery of Murphy's brief membership in the Class of '43 came as surviving members were donating $3 million for a new circulation room for the college library. It was promptly named the Murphy Room and a plaque and portrait mounted in his honor.

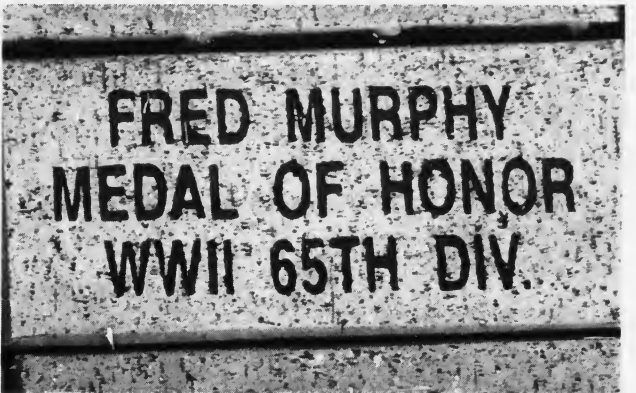

Murphy was living in Weymouth with his wife, the former Virginia "Gina" Bresnahan, and working in the shipyard when he enlisted from that town which gave Weymouth reason to claim him and rename the Homestead School in his honor.

The Army recognized him early, naming in his honor the Murphy General Hospital in Waltham, which became the Frederick C. Murphy Federal Center in April, 1994, when the hospital was closed.

Now, may be it's time for Quincy to take note of its hometown hero, too.

Regional Director Of Boston's Securities And Exchange Commission To Speak At ENC

David Bergers, regional director of the Securities and Exchange Commission Boston Regional Office, will be the featured speaker at the Warren Business Forum Thursday, Nov. 13 at Eastern Nazarene College (ENC).

The event, which is free, will be held in the Commons in the Mann Student Center. The annual catered event draws business leaders, community members, and students from the metro Boston area for a timely talk and networking opportunities.

Bergers' speech will focus on the changing economy, fitting with the forum's theme, "Economic Tsunamis." He is a graduate of Eastern Nazarene College and Yale Law School, and was named "Lawyer of the Year" by Massachusetts Lawyer Weekly in 2006.

The Warren Business Forum is held in memory of the late John Warren, an ENC alumnus of 1934, and founder of the Warren Lightning Rod Company of Collingswood, New Jersey. His company is a leading producer of lightning rods for industrial, commercial, residential, and government buildings in much of the eastern United States. He served two terms as president of the Alumni Association of ENC, and was an active member of his church, mission, and nationwide television ministry board. Warren believed God leads people into business and professional lives, as well as into church ministry and missionary work.

to college students so that they will pursue their goals "not slothful in business, serving the Lord."

The Warren Business Forum is affiliated with ENC's Business Department, which offers 15 business study majors. It emphasizes promoting Christian ethics as they pertain to business and economic activities, with the goal of integrating faith and learning. The department also engenders and nourishes within students an awareness of their potential to society through the exercise of leadership.

Eastern Nazarene College is located at 23 East Elm Ave. in Quincy.

Adams Family Opposed To Pageant Field Track

The Adams family has withdrawn its lukewarm and tentative approval of a track facility at Pageant Field, a part of Charles Francis Adams Jr.'s gift to the city in 1885.

Peter Boylston Adams, CF's great-grandson and treasurer of the Adams Memorial Society, said in a letter to Mayor Thomas P. Koch that the society had voted unanimously to oppose any development at Pageant Field.

Adams in May, 2007, reluctantly worked out an agreement with then-Mayor William Phelan with 10 stipulations and subject to a vote of the Memorial Society to approve placement of the facility.

He hinted that he agreed to the accord only to take the matter out of politics during an election year.

Adams' letter to Koch follows:

"Over the course of the past year the Adams family has focused its attention in considerable detail on plans initiated by the city to significantly develop the open land known today as Pageant Field by building a full-sized track and field facility with the running surface a yellow or orange coloration (a visual horror).

"This land was given by me great-grandfather, Charles Francis Adams Jr., in 1885. His intention in making this gift to the town of Quincy was that it be held in its natural state as a public pleasure ground free to all inhabitants of Quincy.

"In his letter announcing his gift to the town CFA Jr. stated 'this tract of land has seemed to many almost adapted by nature, as the pressure of population increased, for a public pleasure ground.

"He clearly in giving the land to Quincy conceived it would be held in perpetuity as open and untouched conservation land providing an unobstructed view of the tidal vista leading to a stupendous view of Quincy Bay.

"He alludes to a similar gift made by his great great-grandfather, John Adams. He indicates that the underlying reason for his gift as being the same as that of John Adams, 'the habitual affection he bore to the inhabitants with whom he had so happily lived.

"On Sept. 8, 2008, the Board of Directors and member of the Adams Memorial Society met at the stone library at the Old House, now the Adams National Historical Park. At that meeting the unanimous vote was recorded that the Adams family was deeply opposed to any development at Pageant Field which would in any way alter the natural beauty and the existing character of the site.

"Because the Adams family has scrupulously avoided involvement in city politics and the matter appeared to be an issue in a current mayoral campaign it was decided that the Adams family's position would only be made public once the mayoral election was complete.

"It is the Adams family's hope that the citizens of Quincy will honor the intent of this generous bequest of open land made 123 years ago as they have protected other Adams legacies to the town in the past."

USING A PAINT BRUSH instead of a welding torch is Florence DiTullio Joyce, who pioneered wartime work for women at the Fore River Shipyard. Quincy Sun photo/Laura Griffin

Florence DiTullio Joyce A Pioneer

By LAURA GRIFFIN

One might call Florence DiTullio Joyce the first lady of Fore River Shipyard.

"I was the first woman to fill out an application, to be interviewed, and to be hired," Joyce said last week as she recalled the early days of 1941.

She and several others were hired early in the war years, before women were urged to work in defense plants for the war effort.

Two uncles, Dan Libertini and Rocco DiTullio, worked at Fore River and encouraged the 19-year-old beauty and recent high school graduate of Quincy High School to apply.

"They're thinking of hiring women," Joyce's Uncle

Rocco told her. Joyce was raised on Washington Street and lived on Pond Street after her marriage.

Joyce got the job and the rest is history.

The first women, like Joyce, were so successful and good at the jobs, that thousands of women were subsequently hired for defense work.

At the time, Joyce was a pioneer in a man's world and no one called her "Flo" or "Florence," though.

"I had a gorgeous figure and they put 'Woo, Woo' on the back of my welding jacket," Joyce recalled, adding that her male co-workers gave her the nickname, "Woo, Woo" and it stuck.

"I loved it," Joyce said, adding that "The majority of men were respectful."

She recalled that the green suede-like protective clothing was heavy and cumbersome as was the helmet which Joyce had to wear when welding to protect her eyes.

"You'd get a flash, if you took your eyes away," Joyce said of the dangers of looking at the welding flame, even from the corner of an eye. "The flash burns the eye tissue."

Shortly after Joyce was hired, four other women joined her and the women began the heavy-duty, and sometimes dangerous, welding work previously only performed by men.

"We were an experiment," Joyce said when she recalled those early days. "We were an experiment, but we must have done a good job because they kept us and hired many, many more women welders."

"When they found that women were capable of any job, they hired women as burners, welders, shipfitters," Joyce said.

"I welded parts of THE WASP," said Joyce, recalling one of the ships she'd worked on and others commissioned after being built at Fore River.

Records suggest that many more than 2000 women shipbuilders worked at the Fore River Shipyard for the war efforts.

Ron Adams, a history teacher at Broad Meadows Middle School, has done extensive research with his students on the Fore River Shipyard.

His students recorded oral histories of the workers and invited Joyce and her fellow workers to the school for "Winnie the Welder" tributes.

Adams said he believes that there were many more than 2000 at Fore River but official records are elusive at this time due to asbestos lawsuits.

Workers at Fore River were exposed to asbestos and to the lung diseases associated with asbestos.

Women were employed as welders, painters, pipe coverers, crane operators, burners, sheetmetal workers, nurses, and cafeteria workers.

As a group, the women workers were called "Winnie the Welder."

"There were thousands of people that worked there. It's too bad it ended up the way it did. It could give a lot people a job," Joyce said of the Fore River Shipyard.

According to reports, the Fore River Shipyard which was operated by Bethlehem Steel Corporation, produced more ships than any other shipyard in the country. At its peak, the shipyard employed 32,000 people.

Once the war was over, the women workers were forgotten for years.

In 1991, Mayor James Sheets dedicated "Winnie the Welder Day."

Joyce said she's still in touch by mail at holidays with two former workers who live out of state.

At 88, she said she can still wield a welding tool, but she is content to work at her painting.

Her four children and grandchildren keep her busy now. They are Gail Plant, Rockland; Michael Wilson, Atlanta, GA; Jace Wilson, Pembroke and Lynette Frederickson, Halifax.

A World War II Odyssey

Hometown Sailor Recalls Exploits Of USS Quincy

By TOM HENSHAW

Dan Lyons, the retired Quincy police detective, served aboard the heavy cruiser USS Quincy through the shelling of Utah Beach in Normandy, the transport of President Roosevelt to the Yalta Conference and the bombardment of the Japanese home islands.

But one thing bugged him all these years.

An hour before sunset on D-Day, June 6, 1944, a gun crew aboard Quincy was "credited" with shooting down a friendly British Spitfire after someone called out "Spitfire!" and the director officer thought he heard "Open fire!"

"Our task force commander was so mad he told us if it happened again he would take away our air cover," said Lyons. "We wouldn't have lasted long without air cover."

It wasn't until he received a copy of Cruiser Association Magazine in the spring of 2008, some 64 years later, that Lyons learned what really happened from retired Capt. John R. Blackburn, the man who called out "Spitfire" himself.

It actually was a Spitfire but it had been pieced together by the Germans from downed planes and fitted with British wing markings. The pilot, whose body was recovered, wore a Luftwaffe uniform and he was flying a reconnaissance mission over the Allied warships.

That is only one of the many adventures that can be told by the crew of Quincy, one of the most storied ships of World War II.

Lyons joined Quincy on her shakedown cruise off the coast of Maine only two months after she was commissioned and remained with her complement until July, 1946. She was decommissioned three months later in Bremerton, Wash.

Quincy is believed to be the first ship to engage enemy batteries off Utah Beach at 5:37 a.m. on D-Day and remained through June 17 in support of the troop landings.

"The invasion was set for the 5th," said Lyons. "We had already left England when the weather turned bad. We were a third of the way across when the invasion was called off. We sailed in circles for a day. We started bombarding the beach about 5 o'clock."

"We fired everything we had at them. Then we went back to Weymouth in England to reload. We returned to the beach at flank speed. Even the destroyers couldn't keep up with us."

After Utah Beach, the crew from Quincy saw action at Cherbourg in Normandy and Toulon and Marseilles in southern France before returning stateside for a very special mission — transporting President Roosevelt to Malta for the Yalta Conference.

"We picked him up at Newport News in Virginia," said Lyons.

"We had to put a special elevator on the superdeck to handle FDR because he couldn't walk. He celebrated his 63rd birthday aboard and we made him a cake."

"We usually wore dungarees but with him aboard we had to wear undress whites. I worked as a machinist below decks and wore dungarees. Every time I went topside to eat, I'd have to change to undress whites."

"We crossed the Atlantic with no destroyer escort. We were too fast for them. We ran alone. Whenever we made a submarine sounding we'd zig zag or run at flank speed. If they knew Roosevelt was aboard, what a prize that would be."

Quincy arrived in Malta after 10 days at sea to meet Prime Minister Winston Churchill and his Foreign Minister Anthony Eden, Secretary of State Edward Stettinius, Admiral of the Fleet Ernest J. King, General of the Army George C. Marshall and other luminaries.

FDR left the ship to continue to Yalta by air and Quincy sailed to Egypt and anchored in Great Bitter Lake in the Suez Canal to await the president's return.

When he was back from the meeting with Churchill and Joe Stalin, Roosevelt entertained a dazzling group of guests aboard Quincy, including the emperor of Ethiopia, the kings of Egypt and Saudi Arabia and dozens of Arab princes who stayed and stayed.

"Security was very tight," said Lyons. "We had 40 Marines aboard for the trip. One time a destroyer came alongside us in Great Bitter Lake and killed a goat for Arab's meal."

"We never saw FDR during the trip except once in a while sitting in a chair on the fantail. We never saw him standing. He looked old and very frail and he was only 63."

Two months later, he was dead.

"We took Roosevelt back to the states and we expected to get 10 days leave when we dropped him off," said Lyons. "But the next thing we knew we were on our way to the Pacific. We went through both the Suez and the Panama Canals in one month."

He found the Pacific Theater very different from Europe and Africa.

"We got there and looked around and saw nothing," he said. "We woke up the next morning and there were ships everywhere, all kinds of ships. You said to yourself, 'No country can lick us now.'"

After 56 days at sea and surviving a typhoon off the Philippines and supporting carrier strikes on Okinawa, Quincy got its first look at Japan's late war secret weapon — the kamakazi.

The suicide planes were first noted in the area at 1:30 a.m. and the anti-aircraft gunners were rousted from their sleep. By 4:14 a.m., while the crew stood at general quarters, word came that the kamakazi assigned to Quincy had been shot down.

Lyons' ship shelled Kamamaishi on Honshu in July, 1945, the first such bombardment of the Japanese home islands, only days before the first atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima.

Carrier strikes were suspended Aug. 15 after the second bomb was dropped on Nagasaki and Quincy sailed into Tokyo Bay for occupation duty on Sept. 1, the day before the official surrender aboard the battleship USS Missouri.

"The Japanese civilians were scared stiff of us at first," said Lyons. "They must have been told we were going to eat them or something."

Lyons was discharged in July, 1946, after fighting down the temptation to sign over.

"I'd had enough," he said.

He went on the spend 36 years with the Quincy Police Department, retiring as a detective sergeant in 1990.

273rd Birthday

John Adams Honored As First Education President

By LAURA GRIFFIN

One might call John Adams the first president committed to educating the country's entire citizenry.

"Education was supremely important to John Adams," Arthur Ducharme told the nearly 600 persons commemorating the country's second president on his 273rd birthday last week at the Church of the Presidents.

Adams didn't start out as a scholar, according to Ducharme who said, "Young Adams didn't always like studying."

As a young boy, John Adams' fancies were farming, fishing and flying kites. Book learning was of little interest.

"I wish to be a farmer like you," Adams told his father.

The young boy's attitude changed quickly though, after his father encouraged his son to study and tested him with an schedule of sunup to sundown duties on the family farm.

"He never stopped learning. His books were among his most prized possessions," said Ducharme, adding that Adams always stressed "the importance of education to his children and his country."

Ducharme, Director of the Historic Interpretive Program at the Church of the Presidents, organized the annual Adams' wreath-laying ceremony and welcomed the capacity audience to the great granite church planned, but never seen, by John Adams.

"I am particularly pleased to see so many students here," Ducharme said of the hundreds of young visitors from Salem State College, Mount Ida College, Presentation of Mary School in Methuen, Braintree and Quincy High Schools, and

State Scholarships Honor John, Abigail Adams

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts, also, recognizes the Adams commitment by awarding the John and Abigail Adams State Scholarships to state colleges on Adams' birthday. This year, 17,479 students qualified for the free tuition program named in his honor.

The number of new scholars would likely make the second president smile, according to the speakers at the Adams' birthday.

Malika Weekes, a senior at Woodward School For Girls, also, described Adams legacy on education.

"I and other students are direct beneficiaries," Weekes said of Adams' commitment to education which he believed "was necessary for a good man and a useful citizen."

Adams believed education was essential to the success of the country and, actually, had revolutionary ideas about the importance of treating children individually, according to Weeks, Dr. Edward Fitzgerald of the, Quincy Historical Society, and Caroline Keinath, Deputy Supt. Of Adams National Historic Park.

Adams believed the success of the country would depend "on an educated and informed society," said Keinath while Weekes described Adams' belief that a government's duty included an obligation "to insure the education of its citizens."

Weekes also quoted Adams' thesis, "You will never be alone with a poet in your pocket."

Ironically, Adams' duties to his country prevented him from taking an active part in much of his children's education, according to Jim Taylor, Editor and Chief, Adams Papers, Mass. Historical Society.

"He never ended his interest in education," said Taylor who has read thousands of Adams' papers. However, Taylor said Adams felt he'd "robbed," his own children.

"He was not around to help with educating his children," Taylor said.

Of his three sons and one daughter, one son, John Quincy Adams rose to become sixth president of the United States but another son, Charles, died of alcoholism at a young age.

Kirtland Switzer, President of United First Parish Church Unitarian, Rev. Sheldon Bennett, Minister and Mayor Thomas Koch also welcomed the audience which included representatives from the Daughters of the American Revolution and visitors from as far as California.

Following the ceremony, the ministers and officials, accompanied by the speakers, laid the wreath atop Adams' tomb in the lower level of the church. Several dozen guests, then, gathered for a layered red, white and blue birthday cake in the church hall.

Timmins said that the major research and data on environmental issues was collected during preliminary planning for the new high school so that will shorten the city's process seeking approvals.

However, flooding issues were a major concern for abutters in the audience who worried that more water will be draining into a 42-inch drainage pipe serving their area.

Several residents said that the drainage does not protect the area now when tidal waters surcharge. Seymour responded that the track plan will not improve conditions, but will not worsen the situation.

During 100-year flood episodes, Seymour conceded that the track area will likely flood. He added that, due to the planned deep grass roots and proposed soil underpinnings, the area will dry out much quicker than it does now.

Under Seymour's timetable, the permitting process and pre-loading or compressing soil work would begin this spring when the project could go out to bid and construction could begin in May.

The track issue has split residents and track enthusiasts into two camps, those who support Faxon Field and those who support the previous plan for a track at Pageant Field as proposed by former Mayor William Phelan.

Keeley who has been working for a new track for four years said the Gale Associates proposal "...offered some things that were not planned before," such as gates that close and two different shot-put areas.

As for having javelin events across the street, Keeley said that youngsters, such as her son who throws the javelin and competes in track, would have a problem. Those students would have a hard time running back and forth between the fields during meets.

The controversy is far from over, all agreed.

"Both sides of the issue aren't going to change their minds," said Keeley who said she'd like to see the track built. However, she is discouraged. Keeley believes that Mayor Koch is undoing years of work and community meetings on the track.

"It was pretty clear last year where I stood on the track," Koch said when he addressed the issue early in Monday's meeting.

Koch, then, described his efforts to rejuvenate Merrymount Park which includes the proposed Pageant Field area and one of "the prettiest spots in the city."

Timmins acknowledged the standoff as the meeting drew to a close.

"I do think there are pluses and minuses to both sites," Timmins said, but added that, despite the shortcomings, "We have to work with what we have."

Timmins noted the many lavatories at Quincy High School for visiting track teams, and the lockers. He, also, said he had been a track coach and the proposed track at Pageant Field would expose runners to frequent heavy wind conditions.

"It was a little bit of a joke to build a track on a hill," Timmins said, adding that the Pageant Field track would also be "facing the bay."

The "track at Boston College High school has such high winds" and that makes the B.C. High track, a difficult location for meets, according to Timmins.

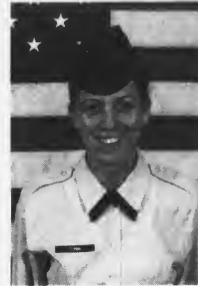

In addition, Timmins said that the administration is considering plans to reroute traffic during major track events and that should address some safety concerns.

After the meeting, Keeley said such traffic arrangements won't help students five days a week at practice.

First Official Visit By Northeast Regional Director

Dennis Reidenbach Visits Adams National Historical Park

Regional Director Dennis Reidenbach was recently welcomed to Quincy and Adams National Historical Park by Superintendent Marianne Peak and park staff.

This was his first official visit as the newly appointed regional director for the Northeast Region.

At the park, he was greeted by Adams descendant, Mrs. John Quincy Adams representing the Adams family. Mrs. Adams is a member of the Adams Memorial Society and Adams Committee who work directly with Superintendent Peak and park staff in advocacy of the National Park Service (NPS) mission to preserve and protect the Adams legacy for future generations.

Mrs. Adams also served as a park volunteer during the 2008 season, greeting visitors at the NPS Visitor Center in downtown Quincy, and is now volunteering at park headquarters on updating the extensive Adams genealogy.

Regional Director Reidenbach was most impressed with the dynamics of Adams family, NPS staff and park partners and their commitment to Adams National Historical Park. His message was clear that we continue to be responsible stewards of a most remarkable resource representing Adams history, the Presidency and our nation. He emphasized the role of the NPS in education, conservation and preservation, all goals to insure the site and its irreplaceable resources the NPS is charged with, are protected and managed for future generations to enjoy. "Children in Nature" and

"Exploring the Real Thing" are important programs within NPS and Adams NHP continues its education programs serving 25,000 students annually, providing curriculum based programs for teachers, students and professors throughout the Commonwealth.

Reidenbach also noted that we are now living and working in times when partnerships and collaborative efforts benefit all parties and ensure that future development opportunities such as "alternative transportation programs" are realized. His first official visit to Adams NHP, he looks forward to returning with family.

As regional director of the Northeast Region, Reidenbach oversees parks within 13 states and serves over 55 million park visitors each year. Stretching from the Atlantic Ocean to the Ohio River and from Maine to Virginia, the Northeast Region is home to a third of all NPS museum collections, a quarter of all historic structures, almost half of the country's National Historic Landmarks and more than half of the National Heritage Areas. Reidenbach has been with the Park Service since 1983. He was appointed superintendent of Independence National Historical Park, Philadelphia, in 2005, after serving 12 years as deputy superintendent.

Reidenbach joined Independence NHP as Administrative Officer in 1988, transferring from the Mid-Atlantic Regional Office where he had served as the regional chief for Contracting and Property Management since December 1983. Prior to that, he held a number of Contract Specialist positions since he joined the federal government in 1976, first with the Department of Defense then with the General Services Administration. Reidenbach, a native of Pennsylvania, holds a Bachelor of Arts degree in business administration and political science from Grove City College. He lives in Glenside, PA with his wife Kristine, and they have two sons.

After meeting park staff, Reidenbach premiered the 2008 park program with park staff and a presentation by Superintendent Peak that set the stage for park accomplishments throughout the season. Of special note was park visitation increasing 150%, bookstore sales up 83%, and special events and programs highlighting partnerships, facility management, preservation and conservation projects.

Along with Superintendent Peak and Deputy Superintendent Caroline Keinath, Reidenbach toured Squantum Point Park at Marina Bay with a local delegation of public and private partners. It was at Squantum Point Park that the regional director saw the potential of waterfront transportation linking at least four national parks including Adams National Historical Park, Boston Harbor Islands, New Bedford Whaling and Cape Cod National Seashore through waterfront transportation along the Massachusetts Cultural Coast.

Superintendent Peak noted that "Adams NHP has been the recipient of several grants for funding to expand transportation through the Alternative Transportation Program (ATP) available to National Parks, including three trolley buses that visitors use in accessing the historic sites comprising Adams NHP throughout Quincy. Adams NHP continues to pursue ATP funding to enhance an already successful program at the park, and we look forward to working with public and private partners to explore greater opportunities for waterfront transportation links." In addition to ATP funding for Adams NHP, Congressman William Delahunt continues to support additional funding for ferry service and water transportation initiatives along the Massachusetts Cultural Coast. Lt. Governor Timothy Murray has been instrumental in securing $350,000 through the Seaport Advisory Council to further and expand water transportation and ferry service. Partnerships are key to the success of this program.

MAYOR THOMAS KOCH (left) and Marianne Peak, superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park, recently welcomed Dennis Reidenbach, National Park Service regional director, Northeast Region, from Philadelphia to the Quincy National Park Site. Reidenbach oversees parks within 13 states and serves over 55 million park visitors each year. During his visit, Reidenbach offered very complimentary remarks with regard to the productive summer season at the Quincy National Park location and for the hard work of Peak and her staff. He promised to work closely with state and city officials as well as local business leaders to showcase the local historic site that is currently experiencing national attention, in part from the HBO award-winning mini-series "John Adams."

Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch, along with local constituents, business representatives and park partners welcomed Regional Director Reidenbach to Quincy, and noted in his welcoming remarks to the Director, "Quincy has a national treasure in its community and takes great pride in the mission and commitment of the National Park Service in its role and responsibility as stewards of such a remarkable resource. No doubt, Quincy is the beneficiary of a NPS presence, David McCullough's book JOHN ADAMS and Tom Hanks' HBO Mini-series, all calling attention to the life and times and contributions John Adams made to our country within our great city of Quincy. The time is now to work in partnership with the National Park Service to premiere Quincy, home to two Presi-idents of the United States, and as a result provide our community and visitors to this national park, a most rewarding experience."

Following the coffee, Superintendent Peak escorted the Regional Director on a tour of the park experiencing the world of the Adamsses with Deputy Superintendent Caroline Keinath, Curator Kelly Cobble, and Facility Manager Kevin Kelly and was engaged in the magnitude of the cultural resource and story.

Another exciting opportunity for the Regional Director was to tour the Dorothy Quincy Homestead with Ethel Hamann, member of the Colonial Dames of Massachusetts. The Homestead, owned by the Commonwealth, was designated a National Historic Landmark by the U. S. Department of the Interior, National Park Service, in 2005.

160 Professionals Attend 'Power Of Perception'

Seminar Spotlights Nursing Image

More than 160 nursing professionals from across the South Shore attended the recent seminar, Nursing Image: The Power of Perception, hosted by the Staff Nurse Councils of Quincy Medical Center and Jordan Hospital.

The day-long seminar, held at the Marriott Boston in Quincy, featured inspiring and motivational presentations from some of the area's leaders in the nursing profession, including Maureen Farley Sroczynski, President and CEO of Farley Associates, Inc., past president of the Massachusetts Organization of Nurse Executives and founding member and treasurer of the Massachusetts Center for Nursing, who spoke about "Core Competencies for Nurses of the Future;" William Kirkwood, Principal of William Kirkwood & Associates, who discussed "Exploring the 21st Century Nursing Profession from a Different Perspective;" and Judith Mitiguy, Executive

"Our goal in putting this seminar together was to provide a forum for nurses to take a good long look at our profession, and ourselves as nurses, and provide some insight into where we are headed in the future," said QMC's Carol Miller, RN, seminar chair. "Judging by the feedback we have received from participants, sponsors and presenters, the day was a complete success."

Also presented at the seminar were results from a survey on nursing image conducted at Quincy Medical Center and Jordan Hospital over a two-week period. The survey shed light on nurses' views through questions, such as "do you consider nursing a job or a profession?" A panel discussion ensued following the reporting of data garnered from the survey.

Sponsors for the seminar included Kindred Healthcare, Old Colony Hospice, Nursing Spectrum, Norwell VNA, Weymouth Healthcare Center, Sanofi-Aventis, UMass Boston, QMC Nursing Leadership, Quincy Medical Services, Robert Dart, MD, QMC Emergency Services, Sizewise, Emmanuel College, Corflex, Inc., Radius Specialty Hospitals, TEI Bioscience, Inc. and Welch Healthcare Corporation.

Quincy Medical Center is a 196-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community. At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, and emergency medicine. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work alongside community physicians to ensure the continuity of care.

Arthur Barrett On Suffolk Dean's List

Arthur Barrett of Wollaston has been named to the dean's list for the spring semester at Suffolk University in Boston.

Smoking And Home Oxygen Systems

Occasionally the State Fire Marshal will issue FIREFACTORS, a news release flyer offering suggested topics for educational purposes. The one I'm looking at today is titled, "Smoking And Home Oxygen Systems." It's a topic I touched upon once while the consequences of mixing these two entries is worth noting again.

Our atmosphere is comprised of 21% oxygen. The oxygen systems I'm writing about substantially increase the concentration of oxygen to the user while excess naturally escapes to the atmosphere within a room, and certainly within the immediate vicinity of the individual using it.

The substantially increased concentration will cause a fire to ignite easily and burn at a far greater intensity. Consequently, oxygen saturated clothing, upholstered furniture, fabric, hair and anything in the area will ignite easier and burn at a far greater rate and intensity than they would in a normal 21% atmosphere. Thus the problem and our concerns while the State Fire Marshal offers a few examples:

March 2004, a fatal fire occurred when a roommate was using oxygen and a cigarette ignited a piece of bedroom furniture.

January 2004, a resident used home oxygen for a medical condition and dropped a cigarette igniting the living room couch.

October 2003, an individual suffered burns to her face when she lit a cigarette while her oxygen supply was still on.

June 2003, a man died in a flash fire even after shutting off his oxygen supply when his oxygen-enriched clothing caught fire as he lit a cigarette.

Never smoke or light a match while using oxygen or within a home where oxygen is in use. A home can still be an oxygen-enriched environment, even if a system is shutoff. Keep all flame and heat sources away from containers and systems. Post a sign at the entry door specifying: NO SMOKING-OXYGEN USE.

Make certain the home is equipped with properly maintained working smoke detectors. Be familiar with your evacuation options from your room, house or apartment. Call 911 to summon help if needed.

It is sad to think that in some cases the same habit leading many to depend on oxygen is the same habit that substantially raises the risk factor if continued. Yet many cannot discontinue cigarette use. It is that inability that concerns; we can only attempt to alert and educate oxygen users of the risk associated with the practice of smoking.

Please be mindful of the risks of home oxygen use and be safe while using it.

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

STOP BEING SUCH A HEEL

There are 26 bones in the human foot, of which the heel is the largest. Beside the heel bone, there are several ligaments, tendons, and muscles which can affect the way the heel works and feels. Some heel pain stems from a obvious injury while other pain is caused by a condition that builds up over time. The pain is almost always made better by rest, ice, and/or anti-inflammatory medicine. If these options do not work, a podiatrist should be contacted. General heel pain is often a sign of abnormal stress in the area of the heel. Wearing the wrong kind of shoe, walking barefoot (especially on hard or uneven surfaces), or being overweight can cause this pain.

Bearing all of the body's weight with every step, the heel is subject to considerable stress. Weight gain, high impact athletic activities, even prolonged walking or standing increase such stress. When heel pain is the body's answer to this stress, there are treatments available to eliminate the problem. Any treatment, however, begins with a call to your podiatrist. We are located at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER, with office hours also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. Please call 781-886-3668 for an appointment. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

P.S. Heel pain as seen in an x-ray is most often a bone spur.

Coyotes In Quincy Presentation, Guided Walk Nov. 15

Coyote expert Jonathan Way will present free slide and video show exploring the life cycle and urbanized habitat of the remarkable Eastern Coyote Saturday, Nov. 15 at 1 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The coyote is one of the only carnivores to actually increase its range and distribution in the past 100 years. Coyotes have taken over as top predator in all environments in New England, from wilderness parks to city greenbelts. With photographs and video clips of coyotes in the wild, Jonathan Way will describe what the animal is, how it got here, and why it is here, and answer questions about coyote ecology and how to live with coyotes in your neighborhood.

Author of Suburban Howls: Tracking the Eastern Coyote in Urban Massachusetts, Jonathan Way began his research on coyotes while at Barnstable High School on Cape Cod. He received his B.S. from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, M.S.

A FREE slide and video presentation exploring the life cycle and urbanized habitat of the Eastern Coyote will be led by coyote expert Jonathan Way Saturday, Nov. 15 from the University of Connecticut at Storrs, and Ph.D. from Boston College—all related to his coyote research. Way's main interest encapsulates the study of predators inhabiting urbanized ecosystems. "Suburban Howls" will be available for sale after the presentation.

The presentation is not suitable for children under age 6.

For more information about the presentation, call 617-376-1391 or visit thomascranepubliclibrary.org.

Following the presentation at around 2:30 p.m., Way will lead a walk through coyote habitat in the Marina Bay area of Quincy. The walk will meet at the parking area on Commander Shea Blvd. near Seaport Drive. For more information about the walk, call 617-472-0799.

In case of bad weather, the presentation and walk will be held Saturday, Nov. 22 at the same time.

The event is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library and the Quincy Park Department's Environmental Treasures Program.

Central's Eighth Graders To Honor Civil War Hero

A Quincy soldier who died 147 years ago, one of the first casualties of the Civil War, will be recognized by the kids in his old hometown on Veterans Day.

Eighth grade students at Central Middle School will lay a wreath on the grave of Francis Souther Monday, Nov. 10, at 10 a.m. in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

Souther, a Quincy native, was killed June 10, 1861 in the Battle of Big Bethel in Hampton County, Virginia, widely recognized as the first major battle in the War Between the States.

Nov. 10 was chosen as the date to lay the wreath because there is no school on Veterans Day, Nov. 11. The rain date for the wreath-laying is Wednesday, Nov. 12, at 10 a.m.

Students will read original tributes they have written to honor the sacrifices of Souther and others who have served in the United States military.

"It is important for our students to honor our veterans and all the men and women currently serving in the military," said Bill Pavao, the students' history teacher.

"Seeing war through the eyes of one soldier, someone from our own city, can help students make sense of the sacrifices and human costs of war."

'Saturday Fun' Continues At Library

The monthly "Saturday Fun For Little Ones" program at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center, will feature "Music with Dara" this Saturday beginning at 10 a.m.

Dara VanRemoortel

will present an interactive blend of familiar songs, nursery rhymes, finger plays, rhythmic activities, creative movement, and instrument play for children 0-4.

Children accompanied by an adult will meet in the large meeting room at the library. No registration is required.

The program sponsored by the Friends of Thomas Crane Public Library is designed for very young children. Events are held on the second Saturday of each month. No registration is required.

Career Center To Host Job Fair Nov. 13

The Quincy Career Center will host a Job Fair Thursday, Nov. 13, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. 152 Parkway, Quincy Center.

Three special seminars will be held by representatives from the Small Business Administration and SCORE, the Greater Boston Federal Executive Board and Helms to Hardhats for Military Veterans.

The unemployed or underemployed are urged to attend. Call 617-745-4000 to pre-register.

Space Heater Trips Circuit Breaker

Q. I have a space heater that, every time I turn it on, causes the circuit to shut off almost immediately. Is there something wrong with the wiring in my house? — David L., Lexington, Ky.

A. My first inclination is that something is wrong with the space heater, not the wiring. Many space heaters draw a lot of power, but a heater that regularly trips circuits may be faulty.

Run through a short checklist first: Do you plug the heater into the same wall outlet every time, or have you tried it throughout the house? Are there other electrical appliances sharing the same circuit? Is the space heater in good condition and less than 10 years old? Do the plug and power cord get very hot when using the heater? Is the outlet being used in good condition? Does the heater's plug fit snugly into it? Does any other appliance trip the circuit when plugged into it?

If you cannot find anything wrong with either the space heater or the outlet, and there are few or no other appliances sharing the circuit, first take the space heater to an appliance service center to be checked by a professional (never try to repair a space heater yourself).

Should nothing be found wrong with the space heater, contact an electrician to inspect your home's wiring.

Some quick tips on using portable space heaters safely: Never place a heater on furniture; place it on the floor instead. Clear several feet of space around the heater. Don't run the power cord underneath a rug, and avoid using an extension cord, if possible. If you must use one, use only a UL- or ETL-rated extension cord marked No. 12 or No. 14 AWG (indicating the wire gauge).

Ideas For Kitchens And Baths

Small Projects Can Have Significant Impact

(ARA) - Today's sagging economy may make you hesitant to tackle large home improvement projects. With home values continuing to decline, credit options contracting and sales in a slump, there's not a lot of good news for homeowners hoping for a huge return on investment for large-scale remodels.

According to the National Association of Realtors, a full-scale renovation doesn't return what it used to. In 2006, home sellers got only 80 percent of their remodeling costs back, down from 91 percent in 2005.

But what about smaller, yet significant, upgrades? "Don't fixate on each improvement's immediate payback," advises Josh Garskof, Money Magazine contributing writer. "When you get around to selling after the market improves, you'll probably recoup most (though not all) of the costs."

If you're willing to tackle those smaller home projects now, start with two rooms that typically offer a great return on investment -- the kitchen and bath.

Kitchen Face Lift

In the kitchen, start with the largest, and typically the most costly project -- cabinets. If your existing cabinets are solid wood and in fairly good condition, you may be able to give them a new look with a simple paint job or resurfacing. Not only will you save money on purchasing new cabinets, but you will also help the environment by reusing your current cabinets instead of sending them to a landfill. It's simple to change out existing cabinet door panels with new decorative fillers, such as glass, stainless steel or tin. Or, sand and repaint your current cabinets to create a completely new and updated look.

Granite countertops make a stunning upgrade, but if a complete countertop overhaul is not in your budget, you can still select a feature area in your kitchen. Focusing on an area, such as a kitchen island, to install granite tile can achieve an upscale look at a much more affordable price.

Decorative details, such as faucets and fixtures, go a long way in improving the style of your kitchen. Consider upgrading to a new kitchen faucet that improves both aesthetics and functionality. The new Level kitchen faucet from Moen features sleek and contemporary lines that coordinate beautifully with today's modern interiors. Plus, Level's pull down wand simplifies everyday tasks, such as filling large pots, pitchers and vases in and around the sink.

Bathroom Refresh

In the bath, you have plenty of room for improvement -- from painting to plumbing. But where do you start? An elegant and affordable showpiece will make a huge impact in this small space. For an inexpensive and eco-friendly project, try repurposing an old dresser or buffet into a bathroom vanity. Top that vanity off with a stunning centerpiece, like Moen's Rothbury bathroom faucet, featuring cottage styling and a variety of decorative finishes. Plus, Rothbury bathroom faucets feature a flow-optimized, water-saving aerator, which uses 30 percent less water, without sacrificing performance. To carry the look of your new vanity throughout the bath, install matching tub and shower fixtures, as well as coordinating accessories, like towel bars, robe hooks, a pivoting paper holder and a tank lever, all available within Moen's Rothbury collection.

Similar to old fixtures, almost nothing dates a bathroom more than tired, cracked linoleum or an outdated floor pattern. A new floor can lend fresh vitality to the bathroom, particularly using today's cost-effective resilient sheet flooring -- it offers an attractive option for a high-end appearance with the latest styles and patterns in a wide array of colors, designs and textures. One such example, Tarkett's FiberFloor resilient flooring, stands up to what consumers desire most in their new bath -- warmth and comfort; water- and moisture-resistance; scratch-, stain- and indentation-resistance; and of course, easy cleaning.

Once you have completed updates to your kitchen and bath, consider opportunities in the rest of your home. Try purchasing ENERGY STAR-qualified appliances, which incorporate advanced technologies that use 10 to 50 percent less energy and water than standard models. New paint and window treatments help to change the mood of a room. Bookshelves are a great way to fill empty space, adding charm and character. And, as a finishing touch, adding a fresh coat of paint and a new decorative handle to your front door will create a welcoming tone for your entire home.

City Council Honors Anneli Johnson As Farmers' Market Founder

The City Council last week honored Anneli Johnson for her contributions as founder of Quincy's Farmers Market.

"You are one of Quincy's most respected citizens," City Council President Jay Davis said as he presented Johnson with a commendation for her successful work and community contributions.

Davis cited Johnson's vision and enthusiasm in launching the open-air marketplace more than a quarter of a century ago.

"Congratulations on fulfilling a dream," Davis said of Farmers' Market which has opened every Friday from May to October every summer and fall since 1982.

In her acceptance remarks, Johnson said the Farmers Market may even continue into November this year. "One of our farmers wants to extend it to Thanksgiving."

A Job Well Done

On Monday, October 27, 2008, at approximately 2:24 a.m., Officers Jay Grazioso and Mike Powers were dispatched to Sam's Restaurant on School Street on a "Breaking and Entering in progress." The unnamed caller stated that someone had smashed a window and entered the business. Upon arrival, Officer Powers approached the restaurant and witnessed a male suspect inside the closed restaurant. The suspect was standing in the middle of the restaurant attempting to eat a muffin when he noticed the Officer. The suspect took off running toward the back of the restaurant by going through the swinging door that separates the dining area from the kitchen. Officer Powers ran to the back of the restaurant believing that the suspect was attempting to flee out the back door. The Officer ran down Gay Street then into the parking lot behind the restaurant, where he saw the suspect run out the back door sprinting to the far left corner of the parking lot. The suspect still had the muffin in this hand. Officer Powers gave chase as he identified himself as a Quincy Police Officer, ordering him to stop. The suspect continued running away, then threw the muffin to the ground as he attempted to jump a chain-linked fence at the far left of the parking lot. Officer Powers was able to pull the suspect down from the fence and take him to the ground where he actively resisted until Officer James Menz arrived to assist in handcuffing the suspect.

LT. DAN MINTON

The suspect was given his Miranda Rights and then said that he is friends with the owners of Sam's Restaurant, that he is diabetic and needed food so he broke into the business. When asked about his criminal record, the suspect stated that he has been arrested about 7 times, but never for B&E's, then recanted and admitted that he had been. The suspect kept stating that the only reason he broke in was because he was diabetic and needed food. He reiterated that he knows the owners very well!

Dispatch called the owner who arrived on scene. Officers noted that a window was smashed out on the right side of the building and on the ground inside adjacent to the broken glass was a rock. It appears that the suspect used the rock to gain entry through the window. Outside in the rear lot just outside of the back door was a blueberry muffin and a steel tire iron lying on the ground. The owner stated that they did not know the suspect and did not have permission to be in the building. Due to the quick response by the Officers, the suspect took only a muffin out of the restaurant.

The suspect, a 44-year-old Quincy resident, has 66 arrangements on his criminal record, including over 30 B&E/larceny type crimes. His career of crime dates back to 1981 and he has served significant jail/prison time. The suspect in this case was charged with "B&E nighttime w/ intent to commit a felony, Larceny from building, Malicious destruction of property (the window), Possession of burglarious instrument (tire iron) and Resisting arrest. The suspect also had warrants out of Hull for Burglary and Quincy for B&E in the Nighttime.

Nice Work!

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You enjoy the attention early in the week, but it might be a good idea to opt for some privacy by week's end so that you can have more time to consider an upcoming decision.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You unearth some surprising facts. Now you need to consider how to use them to your advantage. Meanwhile, it might be best to keep what you've learned secret for now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A comment by a colleague piques your curiosity to know more. Best advice: You'll find people more likely to offer information if you're discreet when making your inquiries.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your energy levels begin to rise by midweek. This allows you to catch up with your heavy workload and still have plenty of get-up-and-go to go out on the town this weekend.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You're probably roaring your head off about a perceived slight from a long-time critic. Ignore it. That person might just be trying to goad you into doing something you might later regret.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The early part of the week is open to spontaneity. Then it's time to settle into your usual routine to get all your tasks done. A personal situation could require more attention from you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A meeting of the minds on a workplace project might well develop into something more personal for Librans looking for romance. Aspects are also favorable for platonic relationships.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A more-positive mood might be difficult to assume in light of a recent problem involving the health of someone special. But by week's end, your emotional barometer should start to rise.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Look for a changed attitude from a former adversary once he or she realizes you have your colleagues' full support. Now you can re-focus your energies on that workplace project.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This time, a difference of opinion might not be resolved in your favor. But be patient. It could all ultimately work out to your advantage, as new information begins to develop.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A tug of war develops between the artistic Aquarian's creative aspect and his or her practical side. Best advice: Prioritize your schedule so you can give appropriate time to both.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You could be entering a career phase awash with job-related demands. But avoid being swamped by the overflow and, instead, keep treading water as you deal with demands one by one.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are an exceptionally loyal person, and you're respected for your ability to keep the secrets entrusted to you.

A Low-Cal Approach To Nutrition And Fitness

(NAPSA)-For those who want to adopt a healthier lifestyle, reducing fat and cutting calories is often at the top of their to-do list.

Many start by reducing their intake of refined and packaged foods-such as snack foods and bakery products-made with hydrogenated vegetable oil.

While it is important to eliminate empty-calorie "junk" fat and unhealthy saturated fat, it is also true that some fats are highly beneficial. For example, the fats in oily fish-such as salmon, mackerel and sardines-and in nuts and seeds can help to supply unsaturated fatty acids, particularly omega-3 fatty acids, which are important for general health. Eliminating or reducing fat is a way to manage calories and adopt a healthier lifestyle.

When it comes to reducing calories, sugar and high-fructose corn syrup are often among the first ingredients to be targeted for elimination by those who want to cut empty calories.

Many fruit juices are very sugary, like soft drinks, and should be diluted with water or avoided altogether.

A good way to reduce sugar intake may be a new line of nutritionally fortified juice beverages that have only 10 calories per 8-ounce serving.

There are no preservatives or sugars added, and the drinks are said to be an answer for consumers who are watching their sugar and carbohydrate intake and are ideal for diabetics.

Plus, these refreshing and hydrating drinks-called Drenchers Fit and Lean Super Juice beverages-are designed to offer consumers the added benefit of featuring specific nutritional supplements that address specific needs, including fortification specific to a need.

The beverage line consists of five single-minded, nutritional benefit-driven products, all containing a fortification package of essential vitamins, nutrients, amino acids, electrolytes and herbs called Bodyguard.

According to Chris New, founder, chairman and CEO of NBI Juiceworks, producers and distributors of the drinks, the line fills a need by offering targeted nutrition and reduced calories in a single product.

Staying Healthy This Winter

Winters are sometimes difficult, but there are steps we can take to stay healthy during cold weather.

• Ask your doctor if you should get a flu shot and inquire about the pneumonia vaccine as well. This year there is plenty of flu vaccine to go around. To find locations in your area that are giving shots, go to www.flucliniclocator.org and put in your ZIP code. You can also call your local health department or hospital for information about locations. If you have Medicare Part B, the shot is free.

• If your grocery store provides antiseptic wipes in the cart area, use those on the handles and seat to kill germs that are likely lingering.

• Guard against hypothermia when you venture outdoors. Not only do you need to dress warmly, but good nutrition can help the body weather a chill. Wear a hat! Heat rises, and we lose the majority of our body heat through the top of our head! Fingers and toes need special care, too. Mittens provide more warmth than gloves.

• Even indoors we need to stay warm—staying chilled for too long lowers the body's resistance to germs. Light layers of clothing trap body heat better than one thick layer.

• The floors where you live might be colder than the rest of the room, even if you have carpet. Check doors to see if there is a draft coming in at the bottom. Even a rolled-up towel can block cold air and conserve heat in the room.

• Beware electrical room heaters. If you have an old one, check with senior services in your area to see if they are giving out new ones. Be sure to keep the heater away from furniture or anything flammable.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

LINGERING PROBLEM

It sometimes happens that a permanent tooth grows behind rather than directly below a primary tooth. Usually, the over-retained baby tooth will fall out of its own accord to make way for the emerging permanent teeth. If it doesn't, the lingering primary tooth may have to be extracted to give the new permanent tooth a chance to position itself properly. Most children who experience this doubling up of primary and permanent teeth do so only once. When doubling up does occur, it usually involves the bottom central incisors, and should not be a source of concern. However, when over-retention involves a top central incisor, it is often a sign of overcrowding, which can inhibit flossing. We have expertise in providing care for both children and adults with a variety of special healthcare needs. We are a highly qualified and experienced team of oral health care professionals. We will discuss all of your options with you. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our entire staff is thoroughly trained, skilled and sensitive to your needs. Our goal is to make each visit to our office a comfortable and positive experience. Call us today at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Over-retention of a primary tooth may be due to a root that does not resorb properly or a root that is tightly fused (ankylosed) to the jawbone.

North Quincy Hosts Middleboro Friday At 6 P.M.

Raiders In Running For Division Championship

By SEAN BRENNAN

First-place in the Patriot League's Fisher Division will be up-for-grabs Friday night as four local teams have the opportunity to lay claim to the title of division champion.

The Fisher Division winner, whoever it may be come Saturday morning, will play the champion of the Keenan Division, which will be decided by the winner of the Silver Lake-Duxbury game, also scheduled for Friday night, in the inaugural Patriot Bowl on Nov. 14. The winner of this game will advance to the state playoffs.

Here is the scenario:

North Quincy, Rockland, Hanover and Middleboro all currently have a 3-1-division record entering the final week of Fisher Division play. The Raiders will play Middleboro (Friday 6 p.m., Veterans Memorial Stadium) while Hanover will take a road trip to Rockland.

If North Quincy (6-2 overall) defeats Middleboro (4-4 overall) and Hanover (5-3 overall) knocks off Rockland (3-5 overall), the Raiders will capture the division title based on the fact that North beat Hanover 21-14 on Oct. 24. If the Raiders win and Rockland beats Hanover then Rockland will be division champions based on the fact that they beat North Quincy 23-14 on Oct. 17.

If the Raiders lose, all bets are off.

"We all beat each other so it will come down to a tiebreaker between the two Friday night winners," said North Quincy head coach Jim Connor. "The tiebreaker is head-to-head records and since we beat Hanover, if they were to win, we would advance. If we win and Rockland beats Hanover, then Rockland will move on since they beat us last month.

"The exciting thing about

it is that with one division game remaining there are four schools with a chance to win. It just shows how competitive the whole Patriot League is this year. If you include Silver Lake and Duxbury, you have half the league playing for something in the final week."

The Raiders may be close to achieving one of their goals-winning a division title-but Connor is doing his best to make sure his team focuses on the task at hand and that is beating Middleboro. The rest will take care of itself.

"When push comes to shove we need to take care of our business," he added. "We need to beat Middleboro. They are a good team. Last week they beat Rockland 33-0 and we lost to Rockland earlier this season."

"The one thing we need to make sure does not happen is that we don't beat ourselves. We can't allow that to happen. If Middleboro beats us, they beat us and we move on. We don't want to beat ourselves and that is something that we have been good at avoiding all season long. Lets hope it continues this week."

When the 2008 season started back in early September, Connor wasn't sure what type of team he had and he wasn't sure what type of competition the Patriot League would offer. With one week of play left, the answers are starting to come into focus.

"I knew that this was going to be a good league and to see how competitive it is has been a lot of fun. Now, not only do we get to play great football teams, but also we don't have to travel four hours to do so. It has worked out well.

"Our team has played all season focusing on one-game-at-a-time and it has worked. We have put ourselves in a position to do something great and if we keep playing the way we have all year against Middleboro things may work out."

The toughest scenario for the Raiders would be to beat a good Middleboro team Friday and have Rockland defeat Hanover. If that were to happen, Rockland would move on to the Patriot Bowl despite having a lesser overall record. But according to Connor, if that were to happen, that is the price his team will pay for losing to the Bulldogs in October.

"It would be tough because we would have a better overall record, but that is the way the tiebreakers play out. Rockland beat us. But if we don't win Friday night it makes no difference."

North Quincy got to 3-1 in the Fisher Division by defeating Randolph High School 34-6 on Oct. 30.

A stifling defensive effort (six sacks, one first down allowed in the first-half) helped propel the Raiders to victory and an all-around solid display by the offense dropped 34 points on the Blue Devils.

Senior running back Pat Watkins and junior running back Terrence Staley both scored in the first-half. Watkins scored from four-yards out and Staley from eight-yards out.

The offense capped off the impressive performance with three fourth quarter touchdowns. Junior quarterback Mike Stanton scored on a one-yard sneak; Stanton connected with senior Matt Jay on a 14-yard touchdown pass and senior running back Joe Vialpando finished off the scoring with a four-yard touchdown run, will include different sports memorabilia and other prizes.

The cost for adults is $15 and $10 for children 15-years of age or younger.

North Quincy Girls' Soccer Eliminated From Postseason

By SEAN BRENNAN

A 3-1 loss last Wednesday afternoon to Scituate High School officially eliminated the North Quincy Red Raiders from postseason contention; the loss also ended the Raiders eleven-year run as postseason participants.

"It was not because of lack of effort," said NQ head coach Paul Bregoli. "Scituate is a good team, but as was the case all season long, we had our chances to score but just could not finish when we had the opportunities."

The Raiders found themselves down 1-0 just ten minutes into the first-half, but behind the leadership and play of senior captain Brittany Folkins, North Quincy evened the score at 1-1 with eight minutes to go until the halftime whistle.

The game-tying goal came off of a perfect corner kick from Folkins. The kick wound its way into the box where junior forward Cara Murtagh buried a header into the back of the net, tying the score at 1-1.

"Brittany placed a perfect kick into the box and Cara finished it off," said Bregoli. "It was an impressive play and at the time the goal looked like it may push us forward the rest of the way."

The Raiders did enter the break tied at 1-1, but two other golden first-half scoring chances came back to bite North Quincy in the end. Both Lindsay Reilly and Amy Carchedi had chances to score off the right midfield position in the first-half, but neither could finish around the net and instead of playing with a lead, the Raiders were forced to push the issue in the second half.

"We had our chances to take the lead but could not capitalize," added Bregoli. "That is the way it goes sometimes."

The second-half went scoreless for the first twenty minutes until Scituate took a 2-1 lead. Trailing by a goal, the Raiders went into attack mode. And the strategy almost paid off. Late in the half, Reilly spotted Murtagh open on the left side of the pitch but the connection was just off and the scoring opportunity went by the books. Scituate would score their third goal of the game in the final minute.

"Reilly and Murtagh were off by a split second," said Bregoli. "Another scoring chance that we could not finish. But I have to give the team credit. The girls played hard up until the end and they have nothing to hang the heads on."

Playing well against Scituate were juniors Sammi Bonanni, Devon McKay and Kristen Peterson.

Senior goalkeeper Siobhan Carnell continued her stellar play.

With their postseason dreams dashed, the Raiders finished the 2008 season last Friday afternoon with a tough 2-0 non-league loss to Somerville High School.

The score may have read 0-0 at halftime, but according to Bregoli, his team came out flat and played a poor first-half of soccer.

"We didn't start the game well," he said. "We were flat-footed in the back and were unorganized on offense. The score was 0-0 at the half, but Somerville scored two quick goals to open the second-half and we could not respond."

Bregoli singled out the play of Logan White and Sara Gardiner as two players who played their best games of the season.

Even with the eleven-year postseason run over, Bregoli focused on the positives, and he is looking forward to starting a brand new postseason streak next fall.

"We had trouble all season scoring goals (19 goals, 20 games played). But with two games to play in our season we were right there with a chance. I told the girls that they could hold their heads high. It didn't work out the way we would have liked but it was a good season overall."

Bregoli also spoke highly of his four captains, Carnell, Jillian O'Brien, Folkins and Amy Carchedi, and the job they did this season with this team.

"We didn't have that one superstar, but we did have four captains who lead by example and showed tremendous leadership. All of them were respected and all of them will be missed next fall."

The Raiders will graduate 13 seniors off this year team. They include Carnell, O'Brien, Folkins, Carchedi, Reilly, Kerry Donaghey, Molly Clifford, Jess Howlett, Lily Man, Rachel Graham, Logan White, Erin Collins and Taylor O'Neill.

Notes: Siobhan Carnell was a unanimous Patriot League 1st Team All-Star selection. She received votes from all 12 coaches in the league... Amy Carchedi, an Honorable Mention Patriot League All-Star scored a goal in the league's all-star game this past weekend.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

May we all live to see the day when disputes between all nations will be decided fairly in an atmosphere of friendship and good will. While that is still only a hope, let Veterans' Day remind us that the strength, the courage, and the will to sacrifice which brought victory in wars are needed today to keep the peace in an uneasy world. Veterans' Day serves to remind us that peace and justice will prevail only when and where we have the strength to defend it.

As we approach Veterans' Day, it seems that there are some discontented who shun convictions or allegiances to any cause or principle. Pursuit of such a philosophy to its logical conclusion is an abandonment of observation of all the milestones in the history of our nation or in the history of mankind, for that matter.

History reveals that through the years there was an overwhelming dedication and belief in the United States. Patriotism was not something to be ashamed of or submerged in cynicism - nor were liberty, the principles of self-government or the American economic and political system. Strong convictions commanded respect, and no one doubted our destiny as a nation... And so, on this Veterans' Day, let us turn out in tribute, because we wish to reaffirm those beliefs that make our nation great and which so many of our fellowmen gave up their lives.

Presidents Campaign Against Sailors Falls Short

The Quincy Presidents suffered their third one-point loss of the season last Friday night against Scituate High School. The final score: 14-13.

Quincy (3-5 overall, 1-3 in the Keenan Division) had previously lost by a single point to Cohasset (28-27, Sept. 5) and Canton (8-7, Sept. 12). The Presidents have won a one-point game this year. That 7-6 win was against Rockland on Oct. 3.

A point here or there and Quincy would be looking at a 5-3 overall record, but that is not how things played out and with just two games remaining on the schedule, the Presidents will be shooting for a .500 finish at best.

The Presidents will play Hingham this weekend and will close out the 2008 campaign against North Quincy in the 76th annual Thanksgiving Day game.

Things started off bumpy against the Sailors. The first quarter saw Scituate's Chrysto Brown gash the Presidents' defense for a 76-yard touchdown run. Matt Stewart's point after attempt was successful and after Quincy's two possessions of the quarter yielded no points, the score after one quarter of play was 7-0 Scituate.

But Quincy turned it on in the second and third quarters. Playing aggressive defense and even more aggressive on offense, the Presidents responded to the Sailors big play with a huge play of their own right before halftime.

Junior quarterback Lance Peterson (2 TDs, INT) connected with senior wide receiver Anthony Raddatz (2 TDs) on an 87-yard touchdown pass and after Mark Gilbody kicked the PAT the two teams went into halftime tied at 7-7.

In the third quarter, the Peterson-Raddatz combination struck again. A 14-yard touchdown pass put Quincy up 13-7. But Gilbody's PAT attempt was blocked; a play that would later become the difference in the game as Quincy ended up losing by one-point.

Scituate's defense came up with a game-changing play in the fourth quarter. Peterson had a pass intended for Raddatz picked off and returned 48-yards to the house by Brendan Perkins. A successful PAT gave the Sailors a 14-13 lead, a lead that held up the rest of the way.

Playing well for Quincy on the defensive side of the ball were Sean Gray, Zach Manning, EJ Louis and Stefan Davis.

The Presidents are scheduled to play the Harbormen of Hingham High School on Friday night on the road. Kickoff is set for 7 p.m.

Broken Water Pipe Shuts Down Quincy Access TV

A broken water pipe shut down cable station QATV and the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center for at least one day and possibly more.

"We're going to shut down all our equipment," Betty Campbell, Executive Director, QATV, said Tuesday night, adding, "We'll be off the air."

The electrical systems at QATV and the main library were hit when a pipe burst around 3 p.m. Tuesday.

Campbell said the local cable TV access station planned to shut down after the election reports and will begin broadcasting as soon as National Grid officials complete their repairs.

According to Quincy Fire Lt. Mike Hobin, the water problem began with a boiler and leaked into the electrical system. The electrical inspector notified National Grid, which shut down the electricity in the library.

Police and fire officials were notified shortly after 3 p.m. Tuesday.

Quincy Navy Reserve Chief Asks Aid For Deployed's Kin

By TOM HENSHAW

Some 90 out of 300 Quincy-based reservists are serving overseas in these perilous times and Lt. Cmdr. Christopher Orlowski, their commander, feels their value is too often lost in the tumult of war.

"These people... are the pillars of our communities," he told the annual Veterans Day observance Tuesday. "In the Navy, they're doctors, nurses, medics, intelligence specialists and merchant mariners.

"These people have their civilian lives and train one weekend a month, two weeks a year in preparation for their mobilization. And it's not a matter of if they will mobilize but when.

"The call to mobilize is sometimes known well in advance but often it comes with 90 days notice and the individual has to put aside the civilian life and do a job that his country needs him to do.

"I'm proud to say our military is full of people like this."

Orlowski, who is commanding officer of the Navy Reserve Center in Quincy, said his own deployment to the Middle East was done with few disruptions of his life in the military.

Leadership Team Named For New Finance Dept.

The newly formed Municipal Finance Department began its duties this week with the appointment of a public-private sectors financial leadership team.

Treasurer-Collector Warren Sproul was sworn in Monday as Director of the new department and Deborah Coughlin, a former Gillette Company manager, will succeed him as Treasurer-Collector.

Koch referred to the appointments as a combination of government experience and private sector knowledge.

Sproul and Coughlin, both longtime Quincy residents, started their jobs immediately as the foundation of the administration's efforts to reform city financial operations. The new Municipal Finance Department, one of the broadest government reorganizations in recent city history, will create a centralized nerve center for all fiscal operations, many of which have been traditionally spread among several departments, Koch said.

"I am proud that we have assembled a financial team from both the public and private sectors, and enthusiastic about taking this step toward improving the way City Hall does business," Koch said. "Warren and Deb are immensely qualified and I look forward to working closely with both of them as we continue to look for ways to make government more accountable, efficient and responsive."

State Board To Review Decision On Billboard

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The state's Outdoor Advertising Board will revisit its decision to allow a permit for West Quincy's 80-foot double-sided billboard at a public hearing scheduled Thursday, Dec. 11, at its Boston offices on Park Plaza.

Mayor Thomas Koch and the City Council have asked the board to conduct the hearing in Quincy where hundreds of residents have challenged the billboard erected last spring.

"The purpose of the hearing is to determine whether the above-referenced permits should be revoked," stated Edward Farley, the Board's Executive Director, in an Oct. 29 letter to James Biondi, Trustee of the 313

Willard St. Trust.

Farley cited the billboard's location "within 300 feet of a public park or a recreational area," as the sole reason for the board's turnaround and new review.

However, City Solicitor James Timmins outlined three other significant failings in the billboard location.

In a Nov. 5 letter to Iraida Alvarez, an attorney in the state's attorney general, Timmins wrote, "I am concerned that the board has limited its proposed review to one issue..."

Timmins cited three other alleged violations of state law:

- No billboards allowed in predominately residential neighborhoods

- No billboards out of harmony with or not suitable to surrounding area

- No billboards visible from an interstate highway.

Timmins described the issues as critical and, also, stated that applicable state law requires that such hearings be held in the "impacted" municipality.

"Given the mandatory language used in the statute, I presume there will not be a problem with holding the hearing in Quincy," Timmins wrote.

City councillors Monday unanimously approved a motion submitted by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi asking that the hearing be held in Quincy City Hall.

DAN QUIRK, owner of Quirk Motors, recently donated a 2004 Nissan Pathfinder SE Armada to Quincy High School's Automotive and Auto Body Technology programs. The vehicle will be used for technical training. Each year, Quirk hires the top graduates from the QHS Automotive and Auto Body Technology programs. These programs are accredited by NATEF (National Automotive Technical Education Foundation). Surrounded by students are Quincy High School Principal Frank Santoro, Quirk, Mayor Thomas Koch and Director of Adult and Continuing Education Keith Segalla.

World Healthcare Leaders Visit Quincy Medical Center

More than 20 healthcare leaders from around the world were in Quincy Tuesday to experience a course on medical quality in a community hospital at Quincy Medical Center.

QMC was chosen to represent community hospitals by organizers of the course at the Harvard School of Public Health.

The course, "Improving the Quality of Health Services," has drawn healthcare leaders from Egypt, India, Vietnam, Nigeria, England and many other countries.

"This is a very unique opportunity for Quincy Medical Center to teach and learn from the people that run healthcare systems around the world," said Dr. Thomas Barber, chief medical officer at QMC.

"We are honored to be selected as the community hospital site for this important and special course."

Council Has No Funds To Hire Interim Auditor

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The city's new Municipal Finance Department got off to a rocky start this week as City Councillors found the council without even a temporary auditor or the funds to hire one on an interim basis.

"We have an empty seat," Councillor Joseph Finn said, pointing to the vacant auditor's chair and noting that the acting city auditor "was dismissed today" without any notice given to the council.

Finn Monday rebuked both Mayor Thomas Koch and the City Council for leaving the city without an interim auditor or the funds to hire one as the reorganization of the city's financial departments gets underway.

City Council President Jay Davis said he would have asked the auditor to clarify finances on Koch's proposal for a track at Faxon Field which had been presented earlier in the meeting.

However, there was no auditor.

In addition, councillors learned second-hand that Koch named Treasurer Warren Sproul as director of the new finance department, and Deborah Coughlin as the new treasurer and collector. Both were sworn in Monday.

Davis and Finance Committee Chairman John Keenan said neither they nor their colleagues had been informed prior to the appointments.

Finn pointed out that the major job of the council is the oversight of municipal spending, but, now, there is no auditor on board and the council has no funds and no timetable to hire one.

"For too long, we've lost control of this situation," Finn said, adding that he fears it does not "bode well."

Councillors, also, said they were not formally notified that the position of acting auditor filled by Susan O'Connor would be eliminated Monday when O'Connor's 60-day appointment lapsed.

O'Connor has been reassigned to the new department.

At Monday's meeting, Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin filed a motion to reinstate O'Connor on a temporary basis.

Coughlin withdrew the motion after Finance Committee Keenan explained that there was no money in the City Council budget to pay her.

All budget funding for the auditing department had been transferred, by a council vote, to the restructured Municipal Finance Department.

Keenan asked councillors not to vote for a position if the funding was not in place.

In addition, the new requirements for the position are aimed at contracting with an auditing firm or hiring an individual with advanced degrees and experience.

Coughlin and other councillors said that should not disqualify O'Connor from filling in as "acting" auditor.

The auditor's department was basically eliminated in October when the City Council voted to reorganize the city's financial structure and created the Municipal Finance Department which absorbed most of the day-to-day duties of the auditor.

Under the plan, the function of the city auditor was streamlined and the job now requires graduate degrees or a contract with an accounting firm.

During those discussions, Councillors envisioned a new auditor able to focus entirely on reviewing finances, expenditures and reporting to the council.

This is the second time in four months the council has had an empty auditor's position.

Under the city's charter, the council is solely responsible for selecting and hiring an auditor who reports to the council.

Former City Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick resigned effective July 31st. In mid-August, Koch appointed O'Connor on a temporary basis.

Since Fitzpatrick's departure in July, neither Davis nor Keenan has established a screening process, procedures or a timetable for a replacement in discussions at City Council sessions.

While councillors expressed dismay and annoyance at the current situation, Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said such confusion is often part of a restructuring and reorganization process.

After Dangerous Fire

MWRA Chief Pledges Strong Safety Measures At FR Pellet Plant

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The fire's out and the firefighters are out of danger, but the repair work has just begun at the pellet plant at the former Fore River Shipyard.

As a result, truckers will keep trucking 350 tons of sludge cake through the city streets every week for another month or two.

Once it's over, though, the pellet plant will be safer, the noise will be down, and trucking eliminated in favor of rail transport, Fred Laskey, Executive Director of the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority (MWRA) told City Council Monday.

Laskey who heads the regional water and sewer agency addressed the City Council at the request of Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond.

Raymond invited both Laskey, Acting Fire Joseph Barron, and health officials to the council meeting after residents complained about the 15-20 trucks rumbling through their streets at all hours of the day and night.

Laskey described the MWRA's temporary trucking as the best alternative for transport after last month's fire shut down half the pellet plant's operation, limiting the production of pellets. Now, the plant is transporting sludge cakes.

The only alternative to the trucks would be expensive, temporary and, very likely, odorous rail transport, according to Laskey who said the truck cargoes are securely covered now preventing odor emissions.

Barron said the fire at the the MWRA plant started Oct. 28 in the ducts, 25 feet above ground. Firefighters had limited access and no venting.

After the flames were doused, firefighters withdrew and the fires smoldered within the ducts for over two days while the fire department kept watch.

Barron said that the MWRA provided the aqua jet equipment needed to douse the live ashes.

The situation was "dangerous for our firefighters to work under these conditions" and the fire heated to 1200 degrees with "no ability to vent," according to Barron who lauded the courage of the firefighters and the leadership of Deputy Chiefs Gary Smyth and Gerry Galvin.

Barron said officials at the New England Pellet Co., operators of the plant, have agreed to compensate the city at approximately $41,000, for the manpower and equipment expenses of battling the fire.

"They've really stepped up," Barron said, adding the company has agreed to redesign the plant adding emergency exits, and better design. The new plans will be reviewed by the state fire marshal's office, according to Barron.

At this time, there are no major health concerns, according to Asst. Health Agent Cindy DeCristofaro.

The sludge is transported by tunnel from Deer Island, converted to sludge cake and then baked into fertilizer pellets used for lawns, agriculture, at turf farms, citrus groves, cotton fields and as soil conditioners.

When operating at capacity, the plant produces 90 tons of pellets a day. These are rated Class A by the Environmental Protection Agency.

Excess from the pellets, apparently, created a dangerous coating within the ducts and ignited, according to Laskey who said the situation was not foreseen.

Laskey said the plant will add a fire sprinkler system within the ductwork, and easier access after removal and replacement of the compromised pipes. He expects the new system will be in place in six to eight weeks, "It's our hope."

According to MWRA records, the pellet facility began interim operation in Dec. 1991 when the MWRA ended the discharge of sludge into Boston Harbor and the facility was completed in 2001.

The last major incident at the plant was 1998 when a gas pipe exploded, shutting down operations for 50 days.

Smyth Asks For Clarification On Fire Chief's Article

Deputy Fire Chief Gary Smyth has asked for a clarification on an article in last week's Quincy Sun regarding Mayor Thomas Koch's plan to call for a new Civil Service exam for fire chief.

The release from the mayor's office referred to Smyth as the fourth candidate on the current list after three declined the appointment.

Smyth says that has been interpreted by him and others as though he was in fourth place on the list.

"I am tied for first place," he told The Sun, in seeking the clarification.

Smyth is tied with Deputy George McGunagle, who the mayor's office, said, declined the chief's job in writing. Behind McGunagle and Smyth are Capt. Paul

• On Nov. 16, 1849, a Russian court sentences author Fyodor Dostoevsky to death for alleged antigovernment activities. Instead, he received a last-minute reprieve and was sent to a Siberian labor camp, where he worked for four years. In 1866, Dostoevsky published "Crime and Punishment," one of his most popular works.

It's Speculation Time

With the Presidential election over, it's inevitable political speculation will follow. It's already started.

Some local observers are wondering if Congressman Bill Delahunt might be in line for an ambassadorship in the Barack Obama administration.

Like maybe Ambassador to Venezuela.

George Bush, who Hugo Chavez called "the devil," cut off diplomatic relations with Venezuela and if Obama decides to renew them, Delahunt would be a good choice for the job. He knows Venezuela and is respected there.

Would Delahunt be interested if Obama decided to reopen relations and offered the post to him?

That's the question for the speculation.

But one of his predecessors Congressman Brian Donnelly went on to serve as Ambassador to Trinidad.

If Delahunt did make the move, it would open up a line of candidates for his 10th Congressional seat.

AND, FORMER POLICE Chief Robert Crowley has 'em guessing along the political front. Crowley retired as chief last June after a stormy relationship with the police union.

Crowley has been somewhat of a regular attendee at City Council and License Board meetings listening and taking notes.

Speculation is that he might be considering a run for the City Council in next year's city election.

At-large or ward? He lives in Squantum, which is in Ward 6.

We haven't been able to reach him for comment.

QUINCY'S VOTER TURNOUT last week fell far short of what was anticipated.

The forecast was for 88 to 90 percent but it was actually 71 percent.

But voters in Precinct 5, Ward 6 (Squantum School) once again topped the city with an 82.97 percent turnout.

Runner-up honors went to Precinct 3, Ward 6 (former Beechwood Life Center) with 72 percent.

And in third place was Precinct 2, Ward 2 (1000 Southern Artery) with 68 percent.

DELAHUNT

HANK BRADLEY, Director of Veterans Services, expects to be discharged from Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital in Boston today. Hank, who suffered a stroke at an American Legion conference Oct. 23, says, "I am coming along fine and looking forward to going home."

He will undergo some therapy and hopes to be back on the job soon.

BRADLEY

JEANNE REARDON, City Council Clerk of Committees and husband, Bill, aren't missing any Quincy High School football games this season.

Three good reasons.

Son Bill, of course, is the head coach. And two granddaughters Brooke Reardon, 4, and Amber Reardon, 6, are pretty junior cheerleaders. Brooke is Bill's daughter and Amber his niece.

Go! Quincy, Go!

A FEW COLUMNS back we mentioned "once a Quincyite always a Quincyite." And noted that some 350 former Quincy residents were receiving The Sun by mail out-of-state.

Well, make that 351.

Carol Carpenter called from Mobile, Alabama to tell us that we missed her and Alabama in the out-of-state list.

That now makes 37 states including Alaska and Hawaii where former residents are reading The Sun and catching up on what's going on back here. Florida tops the out-of-state number with 85.

Carol, who left Quincy around 1972, worked in the planning department at General Dynamics. And tells us, her brother Vincent operated the Goliath crane at the shipyard, now newly dismantled.

And, that she misses Quincy.

WE WOULD LIKE to thank members of the Wollaston Garden Club for their kind words on The Sun's 40th anniversary. And for the beautiful Begonia Cathedral plant, which we have in our window. Very thoughtful and most appreciated. We promise to water it.

AND THANKS TO Quincy High School classmate Flo Peterson of Governors Road, Virginia Holdstock of Dunbarton Road and former Sun staffers Nancy McLaughlin and Polly Dredge for their kind congratulatory messages. (Nancy and Polly, thanks for your help in getting us to our 40th.)

Quincy Community United Methodist To Host Beale Street Faire Nov. 22

On the second floor there will be a cookie factory with an assortment of homemade cookies, a boutique with jewelry and clothing; and room full of books, puzzles, tapes, toys and videos.

Santa will visit from 10 a.m. until noon and have pictures taken with children.

A homemade lunch will be available with homemade corn chowder and minestrone soup, grilled cheese sandwiches, hot dogs, meatball subs, and macaroni and cheese. There will also be an afternoon tea. Around 2 p.m. the luncheon tables are rearranged into a tea room. Tea and a slice of pastry will be served.

The church is also inviting those who attend the fair to bring non-perishable food items. The church will add the donations to its month-long food collection, and bring it to the Interfaith Social Services Food Pantry.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1915 real photo postcard looking north on Hancock Street with Billings Road crossing in the foreground. On the right was the Norfolk Downs Garage where Harold Fratus began his auto dealership business. Fratus also had his plumbing shop next door. On the left was the Norfolk Downs Pharmacy operated at the time by druggist Paul Brown. Beyond the large apartment building was the florist business known as the Norfolk Downs Conservatory. Their greenhouses, shown here just at the sidewalk, were extensive. They went behind the buildings on the left almost out to Holmes Street. That is now the site of the library. There were also other greenhouses in the Downs across Hancock Street out of sight on Glover Avenue owned by the Derringers. That site is now the Sacred Heart School. Disappointed Renegades Not In Sun 40th Issue

While reading the 40th Anniversary newspaper of The Quincy Sun, I noticed that there were some stories about the Quincy High School Band going to the Cotton Bowl and the North Quincy Band going to Ireland. But there was not a word about another musical group, the Renegades Drum and Bugle Corps, in the City of Quincy.

The Corps was founded in October of 1972 and made its' first appearance on May 6, 1973, in a parade in Quincy. They placed third in their first contest on June 6, 1973. The Corps marched in every parade in Quincy from 1973 to 1979.

A Junior Corps called the Drifters was formed in the fall of 1974. Between both Corps, there were 200 or more boys and girls. In 1974 the Corps won the CYO Championship, the Greater New England Championship and placed second in the Mayflower Circuit. The Corps traveled all over New England and Canada. In 1975 the Corps won five first-place trophies in one contest in Canada. In 1976, the Corps competed in the DCI World Championships in Philadelphia.

In 1975, South Shore Bank and different organizations put displays in the front windows for a week.

We had a display in those windows for five weeks as they had got so many comments about it. The Corps was sponsored by Quincy Legion Post #95, St. John's Church and the Quincy Auxiliary Police Association. There were many people who worked very hard and spent a lot of time with the Corps. Not one person would change the time spent with the Corps.

Many lasting friendships friendships were made and still exist today. I would like to thank a few people from the city, such as the late Dick Koch for practices places; Joe LaRaia for having a Renegade Day at City Hall; Arthur Tobin for practice fields; Leo Kelly for presenting us with a city flag to give to the City of Verdun, Canada.

It was a great organization, which I hope the city will not forget, and is part of Quincy's history.

Jim O'Brien, Manager Quincy
(Editor's note: Jim, sorry we missed the Renegades Drum and Bugle Corps. No doubt we overlooked some others, too. We will be running photos of events of the past 40 years in future issues of The Sun. If you have a photo of the Renegades we would like to include it. Thanks.)

Cub Scout Pack 42 Thanks Residents, Businesses

Throughout the months of September and October, cub scouts from Pack 42 in Quincy sold popcorn at many local business locations and schools. Popcorn sales are the primary fundraiser for Pack 42, enabling boys to participate in a variety of educational and fun scouting activities throughout the year.

Thank you to those business owners who allowed us to sell popcorn to the patrons; to the Quincy School superintendent and principals who permitted popcorn sales during school events; and to the residents of Quincy who continually support our programs and scouts with their generosity.

Also, in October, Cub Scout organizations throughout the United States celebrated "Adventures in Books."

Cub Scout Pack 42 in Quincy observed this monthly theme by collecting gently used books and donating them to Cradles to Crayons, located in Quincy.

Over 50 books were delivered and will be shared among infants and pre-teens.

Voters Oust Plan E, Bring Back Plan A

By FRANK McCAULEY

Quincy will return to the Plan A form of government in 1958 as a result of Tuesday's election when the voters discarded Plan E and ousted three of seven city councillors.

Plan A won over Plan E, 14,378 to 12,851, as Councillors David J. Crowley, Alfred G. Helfrich and Frank E. MacDonald lost their seats to Thomas S. Burgin, James R. McIntyre and Charles L. Shea.

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa and Councillors David S. McIntosh, Carl W. Anderson and Edna B. Austin retained their seats as 65.2 percent of the voters went to the polls.

McIntyre finished third in the election with 14,187 votes. McIntyre, 25, and still a law school student, is the youngest man elected to the council in 25 years. He was wounded during the Korean War in which he served as a Marine Corps officer.

Shea, 28, won election to the council on his second try. A Boston College graduate he finished fifth polling 12,116.

The seventh and final seat on the council was won by incumbent Edna B. Austin who polled 12,058 votes, edging out 10-year council veteran Crowley by 102 votes. Crowley received 11,956 votes and was considering asking for a recount.

'My Community, My Hospital' Reception Theme Quincy Medical Center Physicians Reach Out To Business Community

Physicians at Quincy Medical Center (QMC) recently held a reception at the Quincy Historical Society aimed at raising awareness among area business leaders of the services that QMC offers for their employee and families, and inviting them to become involved with the medical center.

The theme for the reception was "My Community, My Hospital," and members of the QMC medical staff, including Medical Staff President Nissage Cadet, MD, and radiologist Gregg Miller, MD, as well as QMC President Gary Gibbons, MD, and Chairman of the Board of Trustees Bob Curry, provided an overview of QMC's important role in the community and indicated how local businesses can become more involved to form mutually beneficial relationships for the benefit their employees, customers and the entire community.

"The physicians on the QMC Medical Staff are proud to say, 'This is my community,' and likewise, each physician is proud to say, 'Quincy Medical Center is my hospital,'" said Dr. Cadet. "Our goal tonight is to help you understand what an outstanding healthcare resource you have available to you, your employees, your customers, and, if you live in this area, to your families as well. We invite you to become actively involved with the Medical Center to help ensure our current and future ability to take care of patients right here in their own community. Our goal is for you to join us in saying, "Quincy in my community and Quincy Medical Center is my hospital."

During the event, Mayor Thomas Koch touted QMC's importance to the City of Quincy and the surrounding area and several business leaders shared why they believe QMC is essential to the City, their families, employees and businesses. Phyllis Godwin, chief executive of Granite City Electric, recounted how her grandson received swift and excellent care in the Emergency Department, and Paul Angelico, founder and president of Twin Rivers Technologies, spoke about how QMC provides superior occupational health services for his employees.

Some of the key points the speakers conveyed to the audience were:

- QMC is a private, not-for-profit organization and is not supported by tax dollars;
- Despite an extremely difficult and competitive healthcare marketplace, QMC offers the latest technology, services and high quality care at a lower cost than the big city hospitals;
- A strong medical center makes the city attractive to future employees who might settle in Quincy;

ter makes the city attractive to future employees who might settle in Quincy;

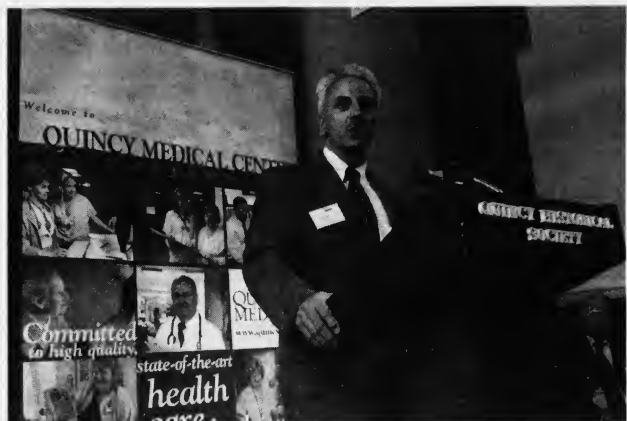

• There are many ways for business, civic and opinion leaders in the City of Quincy to become involved at the hospital, including participating in advisory and fundraising committees, utilizing occupational health services, and lending their expertise and advocacy to important issues facing the medical center.

Business leaders who would like to learn more about getting involved at the Medical Center should call Richard Solomon, Director of Development, at (617) 376-5492.

Quincy Medical Center is a 196-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community. At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, and emergency medicine. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work alongside community physicians to ensure the continuity of care.

PHYLLIS GODWIN, chief executive of Granite City Electric, Bob Curry, QMC Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Mayor Thomas Koch, and QMC President and CEO Gary Gibbons, MD, were among those who extolled the benefits of Quincy Medical Center and invited involvement from the business community.

PAUL ANGELICO, founder and president of Twin Rivers Technologies, Inc., shared his positive experiences using Quincy Medical Center's occupational health services for his employees' healthcare needs.

Coughlin Act Would Abate Tax On Deployed Soldiers

If Ward 3 City Councillor Kevin Coughlin has his way, soldiers, sailors, Marines and other members of the armed forces who own property in Quincy would be abated most if not all of their real estate taxes while they are deployed in foreign lands.

Coughlin's measure was filed with the City Council Monday night and forwarded to the Finance Committee for consideration. When approved by the City Council, the act would go to the State Legislature for passage as a home rule petition.

"It would create a program for the men and women who are deployed in places like Afghanistan and Iraq," said Coughlin. "They are citizen soldiers who step away from civilian life for military pay that does not equal what they were paid in civilian life.

"They have enough stress as it is. This would give some relief to them and their families."

Under Coughlin's proposal, a person making $70,000 a year in civilian life might be cut to $50,000 a year in the military, "a substantial hit," said the councillor.

If he or she were deployed abroad for, say, nine months, that part of his or her real estate tax would be prorated and abated for the term of the deployment.

Eligibility for the abatement would be established by the Board of Assessor with information obtained by Veterans Services, including the deployment orders and military pay vouchers.

The authority of the assessors to grant such abatements would expire after Fiscal 2010, unless extended by the Council.

Elderly To Receive Free Legal Services

Elderly residents of the South Shore area will be able to receive free legal advice and representation, with focus on elders having

Harry A. Johnson Receives Public Service Award

Harry A. Johnson of Quincy, was presented the Public Service Award recently by Gov. Deval L. Patrick at the State House Awards Ceremonies.

The award was established to recognize a civilian member of the community who has provided significant contribution to public safety by Massachusetts

State Police Department of Personnel Orders.

"The contributions of Mr. Johnson's time skills, expert craftsmanship and willingness to help, go well beyond what ones expectations are when it comes to lending a helping hand" said Col. Mark M. Delaney, superintendent of the State Police Command Staff.

His son, Trooper Karl E. Johnson, graduated from the Massachusetts Police Academy and completed training in the New Braintree Academy, where Johnson made new custom frames as well as frames for future classes, and remodeled the writing and booking room.

State Rep. Bruce J. Aye presented Johnson the House of Representatives recognition and congratulations for his contribution to public safety.

Ten State Police and six Boston Police Officers received the Medals of Valor, Medals of Lifesaving, or Medals of Merit.

Despite suggestions that there exists a significant credit crunch, DeMello said the bank has increased its mortgage lending activity by 30% over last year.

Bank Of Canton Continues Lending Despite Nation's Credit Crunch

It's all about the borrower.

That's the message George DeMello, senior vice president of Residential Lending for Bank of Canton, is hoping to get across as the bank continues to offer loans despite the economic woes that have battered the lending industry.

While many lenders throughout the nation have been hit hard by the recent credit crunch, Bank of Canton has managed to thrive. DeMello said the bank's success is largely due to its consultative process for customers: Its mortgage department works closely with the Bank's other business channels to put the borrower on center stage.

"The essence of what it means to be a community bank is to deliver the best possible mortgage experience for the borrower," said DeMello. "Everything Bank of Canton does is focused on reinforcing the values of personalized and exemplary customer service." Despite today's high-tech environment, face-to-face meetings with customers are strongly encouraged by our loan officers even if the first contact was made online, he noted.

Despite suggestions that there exists a significant credit crunch, DeMello said the bank has increased its mortgage lending activity by 30% over last year.

"It all depends on what kind of product you've featured in the past," he said. "For example, lending entities that worked heavily with subprime loans in the past are probably feeling the strain of these difficult economic times right now. At Bank of Canton, we avoided subprime loans and continued to focus on our most popular product line: conventional 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages."

While the Bank offers a variety of loan products, 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages make up about 80 percent of its overall loan volume.

"We sell about 90 percent of the mortgages we originate to investors and retain about 10 percent, which has been the case for the last six or seven years," said DeMello. "We use about eight different investors and the No. 1 reason why we use so many is because, on any given day, any one of those investors is offering the lowest rate. We figure out who has the best rate on that day and pass the savings on to our customers. Of course, prior to working with any investor, we conduct proper due diligence to ensure complete customer satisfaction after the closing."

Thomas Gleason, executive director of MassHousing — the state's affordable housing bank — praised the bank's lending practices.

"Bank of Canton is an outstanding community bank and particularly dedicated to affordable lending for homebuyers of modest means," Gleason said. "They have always been one of our best lenders, especially when it comes to lending to minority borrowers.

Last year, they excelled in this area above all of our other lending partners and received the annual MassHousing award for top lender to minority homebuyers. Bank of Canton has also remained a steady and reliable local partner during difficult times. For people who think banks have stopped making loans, I point to Bank of Canton as an example of a local lender who is there for the community, in good times as well as tough times."

The Bank also is one of 36 banks in Massachusetts participating in MassHousing's Home Saver Foreclosure Prevention Program, a loan and counseling solution that assists borrowers whose mortgages have become unsustainable. Through the Home Saver Foreclosure Prevention Program, Bank of Canton and other participating institutions are able to assist homeowners in maintaining ownership of their homes by making it affordable to refinance to a fixed rate.

Mr. DeMello said the Bank of Canton offers a viable opportunity for those seeking a sustainable mortgage.

"The industry is in turmoil and people are looking for safety and security," he said. "Our clients are our focus. We work with real people, focus on their lives and their homes, and offer the most competitive rates and products in the industry."

For more information, call the Bank of Canton at 888-828-1690.

Leadership Team Named For New Finance Department

of Salem and a veteran analyst in Quincy for 22 years, will be in charge of managing budgets, tracking revenues, reviewing contracts and a series of other duties as head of the new finance department. He was appointed Treasurer-Collector by Koch in February.

Coughlin, a former North American manager of accounting and reporting for Gillette, will be responsible for managing the city's collections and overseeing city accounts. Coughlin worked for Gillette for nearly 30 years. Both Coughlin and Sproul have an MBA.

"We are fortunate to have this kind of talent available to the City, and we plan to make the most of it through creative ideas, new standards, and the desire they both have to help the community," Koch said.

The creation of the new department will add no money to the city budget, Koch said. At his request, the City Council approved $85,000 in account transfers to formalize salaries for the reorganization. The money will come from savings in the Department of Public Works and the city's health department.

League Formed To Promote Beauty, Wellness Practices

Mayor Thomas P. Koch will announce the formation of Quincy Health, Beauty and Wellness League today (Thursday) from 8 to 9:30 a.m. at a news conference in the Atrium Meeting Room at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Created as a partnership of Quincy 2000 Collaborative and LIDO Consulting Group, Ltd., the league is designed to provide a forum for member businesses to collaborate with community organizations to promote health and wellness programs.

The aim is to create a healthier workforce by increasing awareness of the benefits of such practices as well as more visibility for league member services and an opportunity for members to share resources and knowledge.

Organizations involved in the HBW League include:

Quincy Medical Center, Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts, Harvard Pilgrim Health Care, Harvard Vanguard Medical Association, Fallon Ambulance Service, Manet Community Health Center, Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group and The Fitness Factor.

'Wall Of Heroes' Display At City Hall

The Eastern MA Chapter of Blue Star Mothers "Wall of Heroes" will be on display in the lobby of City Hall from Nov. 12 to Dec. 2.

An opening reception is planned for Tuesday, Nov. 18 at 6 p.m. The public is invited to attend. Especially welcomed are all those who have a loved one currently deployed or enlisted in the armed services.

The activities at the event will include posting any collected photo copies of military personnel, past or present, that are brought to the reception on a tile for the "Wall of Heroes," signing Operation Quiet Comfort quilt squares with well wishes for the injured heroes, and making cards of support to be sent to those stationed worldwide through CarePacks.

The Eastern MA Chapter of Blue Star Mothers is creating a "Wall of Heroes" to recognize past and present veterans, the fallen, and currently serving soldiers. Boxes have been placed at City Hall on Hancock Street and at the Veterans Affairs Office on High School Avenue to collect photocopies for the "Wall of Heroes." The boxes will remain in place through Dec. 2.

Drop off non-refundable photos to be added to the "Wall of Heroes." All photos should be labeled or identified with the soldier's name, military branch, and hometown. American soldiers from any time, any branch, any rank, and any duty are welcome to be honored. No photos will be returned. The Wall is the sole property of EMAC-BSMA and will be exhibited by permission only.

This yearlong effort fulfills the Eastern MA Chapter of Blue Star Mothers' threefold mission to: support their children, support veterans in their communities and support each other. For more information about the Eastern MA Chapter of Blue Star Mothers or to request the Wall for display at your event or in your community, please visit www.bluestarmothers-emac.org.

Non-returnable photos may be mailed to: Eastern MA Chapter Blue Star Mothers of America, PO Box 123, Scituate, MA 02066.

City Council Honors David Portesi For Service

City councillors described service on the Zoning Board of Appeals as one of the most difficult positions for a volunteer citizen when they commended David Portesi for his six years' services on the board.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro presented the commendation. He described the often complex and contentious issues brought to the Zoning Board.

Zoning Board members play "an extraordinary role in city government. Their decisions impact our neighborhoods," said Gutro.

City Council President Jay Davis and Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee cited specific cases resolved during Portesi's membership.

"He always asked, 'Was there enough parking?'" said McNamee while Davis recalled the difficult decisions for Brewers' Corner.

"It's been a long six years," said Portesi, recalling "a lot of contentious variances. I always tried to be fair."

Portesi introduced his wife Sharon and noted that the night of the commendation was, also, their 40th wedding anniversary. He is a former teacher at Massachusetts Community College.

Volunteers Sought For Norfolk County RSVP

The Norfolk County RSVP Volunteer Program is conducting a countywide survey to identify needs for volunteer services in each community.

Non-profit community organizations which utilize, or wish to utilize, volunteers in their work are encouraged to contact Norfolk County RSVP with information about the organization, population served and services needed.

"We are here to serve all age groups throughout the county. From pre-school children to aging seniors," said Francis O'Brien, chairman of the county commissioners.

"But very often, community organization in need become so busy they don't have the time or the staff to recruit additional volunteers; our office can help recruit potential volunteers."

RSVP helps recruit and place volunteers 55 years and older in programs such as reading tutors, emergency preparedness and other identified community needs.

To become an RSVP volunteer, contact Elizabeth Larkin at 781-329-5728.

Library, QATV Back In Service After Burst Pipe Outage

A pipe burst knocking out the library's power system and shutting down the Thomas Crane Public Library and QATV for two days last week, but both were back in full swing by the week's end.

Library Director Ann McLaughlin said the power outage did not affect voting at the library as an emergency generator was operated.

Unfortunately, that did not help hundreds of library patrons caught by surprise by closed doors at the library last Wednesday and Thursday.

"It's busy all the time," McLaughlin said.

Even the telephone lines were down, McLaughlin said, adding that the messages had really piled up when the staff was able to return on Friday.

The situation was slightly better at QATV which is housed in the library building.

Executive Director Betty Campbell said the cable television staff had been able to notify its audience during Tuesday evening programs.

In addition, Campbell said QATV was able to finish its election programming Tuesday night.

However, QATV classes had to be postponed during the week until Thursday evening.

"We're back up to speed," Campbell said Monday.

McLaughlin promised that library patrons would not be fined for the two days the library was closed.

Davis Proposes Residential Parking For Southwest Quincy

Addressing neighbors concerns about commuter parking on neighborhood streets near the Quincy Adams MBTA Station, Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis has introduced an ordinance to create the city's first residential parking program.

Introduced at Monday's City Council meeting, the legislation to create residential parking areas in the city was sponsored by Councillor Davis and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

"The residents in Ward Four who live near the Adams T Station have been frustrated for years by commuters parking on their streets and walking to the T station," Davis said. "This is program should help address those frustration."

The program restricts parking on streets near T stations to Quincy residents and their visitors. Davis said Ward Four residents are sick and tired of having commuters using their streets as a free parking lot access the Quincy Adams emails from neighbors complaining about commuters' cars taking up spaces on local streets."

Davis said he believes the problem has worsened due to the increase in T rider ship and the desire of commuters to save money by not parking in T garages.

"After the neighborhood meeting in February, it was my intention to introduce the legislation immediately" Davis said. However, the city's law department needed to sign off on the new restrictions.

The traffic and police departments will administer the program.

Once the legislation passes, Davis said he would host additional neighborhood meetings to assist neighbors with the implementation of the restrictions.

For more information about the meeting, contact Davis by phone at 617-834-3945 or email at jddavis@ci.quincy.ma.us.

Last February, Davis hosted a neighborhood meeting with residents to discuss the possibility of establishing a Residential Parking Area for Columbia Street, Intervale Street, Liberty Street, Plain Street, Rodman Street, Taber Street and Totman Street.

He said the program was well received by the neighbors.

"Since the meeting," Davis said, "I have received a number of phone calls and Starr, the mayor's office said, also declined the chief's job and Griffith indicated he would prefer to be a deputy chief instead of the chief.

The current Civil Service exam list is from 2006 and will expire next month.

Meanwhile Deputy Chief Joseph Barron, senior deputy, is serving as acting chief but is not on the current Civil Service list.

Mayor Koch has called for a new exam for a fresh list of candidates. "A clean slate will be the fairest way to handle it," he said.

Human Resources Director Stephen McGrath noted: "Civil Service rules dictate that the appointing authority (Mayor Koch) have at least three candidates to choose from. Right now, there is one."

Smyth is now that one candidate. Asked by The Sun if he is still interested in the chief's job, he said: "That's what I took the exam for."

He said he would have no further comment at this time.

Artificial Turf Possible For Field At New Track

Several new issues, including the possibility of artificial turf, were raised Monday when Gale Associate's Bill Seymour outlined plans for a $1.3 million high school track at Faxon Field with an enclosed 95,000 sq. ft. field.

Seymour displayed graphs and diagrams to City Council and some 40 residents with few changes from a similar presentation to Park Commissioners a week ago.

However, Councillor John Keenan asked for a contrast between artificial turf and natural turf as the base of the field planned within the track.

Seymour said the initial cost difference was significant, as natural turf would cost $400,000 and artificial turf, $800,000.

However, upkeep was, also, vastly different as natural turf would cost some $35,000 a year and the upkeep for artificial turf is negligible, according to Seymour who said, "The maintenance is peanuts."

City Council President Jay Davis said the use of artificial turf would allow much more extensive use of the inner field in early spring and late fall when the grounds are wet.

Both Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro and Councillor Joseph Finn said the council must schedule a public hearing on the issue before the council votes on the funding questions. Councillors agreed without a vote.

City Solicitor James Timmins suggested that Mayor Thomas Koch may not request track funds until after all environmental permits have been issued. Under that plan, the council's vote could occur in mid-January.

Seymour and his team said the track could be built and in use as early as next fall, but some listeners were not convinced.

"The council has approved three (different) tracks," Finn said of his six year tenure on the council while Maureen Keeley said, "I think it's pie in the sky to think it can be done by September."

Elks, BJ Members In Council May Lose Vote On Two Issues

Card-carrying Elks and B.J. Wholesale Club members may lose their right to vote on two zoning issues facing City Council.

City Solicitor James Timmins said he would ask the state's Ethics Commission for a ruling on whether B.J. or Elks membership should disqualify councillors from voting on issues affecting those organizations.

Timmins addressed the issue at the request of City Council president Jay Davis who acknowledged his wife is a B.J.'s member.

Davis then surveyed the council and at least three councillors said they or their wives were, also, members.

As for the Elks, it was unclear if many or any councillors were members.

B.J.'s Warehouse officials hope to develop property at Crown Colony for a new discount warehouse. Developers lost the first round in their bid when the Planning Board and Mayor Thomas Koch rejected their application.

However, the Lowe Trust is currently seeking the rezoning of the property to a Planned Unit Development, which would only require council approval.

Timmins did say if more than a majority had memberships, they probably could vote under an exigency ruling.

Safe Winter Heating Suggestions

Considering the cost of fuel and a less than stellar economy, let's review some heating suggestions, which will be conducive to a safer home this winter.

My first thought is to recommend that as this heating season approaches, all homeowners should comply with Nicole's Law. That law requires a carbon monoxide detector on each habitable level of the home. An unfinished basement does not require one while a detector is required on the first floor.

If there is no bedroom on this level, the detector can be installed anywhere, but if a bedroom does exist, the detector must be placed with 10' of the bedroom door. Likewise, if the bedrooms are located on the second floor, a detector must be placed within 10' of those doors, as well. All carbon monoxide detectors must be installed as per the manufacturer's instructions.

My second recommendation is that all oil burners should be cleaned and maintained at least once a year. At that time a technician will clean the inner chambers, tuning the burner as well, assuring a more efficient performance. The technician should clean the flue pipes and examine them and the entry into the chimney itself.

This visual inspection is important and the subsequent draft test will confirm adequate movement of combustion gases to the outside of the chimney. It is a prudent yearly effort to both optimize fuel efficiency and confirm an adequate flow of potentially dangerous combustion gases to the outside.

The same holds true for gas-fired furnaces, although I am less familiar with them. Although they appear to require less maintenance, assurance of an unblocked flue and chimney is essential. Make certain that products of combustion from heating appliances are venting outside of your home, not within it.

With the resurgence of wood stoves, it is also essential to assure a clean and unobstructed flue way where creosote, a tarry by-product of burning wood, which is combustible, can accumulate and occlude a chimney. Here too, that blockage can retard adequate ventilation from the heating appliance and cause chimney fires as well. Particularly if you are burning wood, reassure yourself by having a professional check your chimney.

Please to not be tempted to use propane or oil fired unvented space heaters within your home. It is unlawful to do so within a building used for habitation and with good reason. Where they are not adequately vented to the outside, combustion gases are directly vented into the living space of your home. While displacing oxygen, the resulting carbon monoxide and carbon dioxide will render an individual incapacitated, leading to eventual death. Therefore, do not be tempted to supplement your household heating efforts with an unvented fuel fired space heater.

If you use an electric space heater, make certain that it is UL approved. Place it on a firm surface a minimum three feet from combustibles. The heater should not be left unattended or used in a bedroom while sleeping. It should be kept away from water and if an extension cord is used make certain that it is not frayed and faulty and are appropriate for the electrical load required.

Stay warm and please be careful doing while doing so.

A Job Well Done

On Sunday, Nov. 2, 2008, at 10 p.m., Officer James

Flaherty, on patrol, pulled his cruiser into the parking lot of CVS at 42 Beale St., facing the store adjacent to Enterprise Rent a Car. While there, he heard the dispatcher call out, "Units respond to CVS in Wollaston for an armed robbery in progress."

Officer Flaherty radioed that he was out and needed more information right away. He was told that the suspect, a white male, was leaving the store going toward Clay Street. The officer approached the door and was met by a white man coming out of the store, so the officer drew his gun and ordered him to the ground. The male complied and the officer was able to get a pharmacist to come out, who stated that the man was not the suspect, that the suspect fled out the other door and used a handgun to rob them.

The pharmacist said the suspect ran out the door closest to Beale Street. The officer recalled that while he was holding the man at gunpoint, he observed through his peripheral vision a taxi pass directly behind him heading toward Clay Street. The officer set the man on the ground free and interviewed the pharmacist, who gave the officer a description of the suspect and then reviewed the videotape.

Dispatch then announced that a taxi driver was just held up at gunpoint and dropped the suspect off at St. Ann's Road. Units responded to the area and searched for the suspect, while the taxi driver was sent to the CVS store to review the surveillance video to confirm it was the same suspect who robbed the store. Once it was confirmed, Officer Flaherty notified officers that they were looking for just one suspect who committed both crimes. According to the pharmacist, the suspect approached the counter and pulled a "revolver" out of his pants, then pointed it at him and demanded all the Oxycontin. The pharmacist complied by opening the safe and handing over the drugs.

The suspect walked away, then abruptly turned around, jumped the counter with the gun still in his hand and removed the contents of the safe. The suspect then exited through the employee's counter entrance and fled the store. Officer Flaherty reviewed the video and noted that the suspect did have a handgun and carried the drugs in a plastic bag as he made his escape. Officer Mike Kelly, who was working a detail at Veteran's Stadium, radioed that he witnessed the suspect jump over the stadium wall.

Numerous Quincy police officers responded to the area and created a perimeter while others went into the stadium in search for the suspect. Officer Flaherty went to the rear of the stadium and met up with Detective Sean Biggins and they began searching in the marsh area outside the fence, which is densely covered by six foot high elephant grass. The search became very dangerous because the grass created low visibility and made loud noises when crushed as they walked through.

As the officers pressed further into the marsh, they heard a voice call out "I'm over here." The officers knew this was not a police officer, so Detective Biggins yelled out to the suspect, "get down on the ground." A reply came out, "I am." The officers still could not see the suspect, so they kept asking where he was.

The suspect kept responding back and additional Officers slowly approached the voice, until they came across the suspect lying in the prone position with his arms by his side. Officer Flaherty immediately recognized this man as the person in the video surveillance tape. As the Officers approached the suspect, he suddenly pulled both hands towards his front waistband.

Detective Biggins and Officer Flaherty feared he was reaching for the handgun, so Detective Biggins knelt the suspect in the right rear shoulder which distracted the suspect enough to let Officer Flaherty pull the suspect's left arm out from under his body and placed it behind his back. Detective Biggins pulled the right arm out from under the suspect's body and placed it behind his back. The suspect resisted arrest until Detective William Ward, who was trying to locate the voices, arrived on scene and assisted in handcuffing the suspect.

The suspect was frisked but the gun and drugs were not on him or in the immediate area. There was a white powdery substance around the lips of the suspect. When

FDIC Safeguards More of Your Savings

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation recently increased insurance coverage on bank accounts to $250,000. Until the increase, accounts were covered up to $100,000, except for retirement savings, which have been covered to $250,000 since 2006.

The increase, however, is temporary. The new increased coverage will run through Dec. 31, 2009, at which time the coverage will be reduced to the previous $100,000 amount.

The new insurance coverage is as follows:

- Single owner account: $250,000
- Joint account $250,000: per co-owner
- Trust Accounts $250,000: per owner per beneficiary

These amounts apply to the total amount that is deposited in a bank. For example, if you have both checking and savings at one bank, those amounts would be added together subject to the $250,000 cap.

If you're concerned about the safety of your present bank, consider spreading your money between multiple banks and account types, or investigate credit unions as an option to traditional banks. Credit unions aren't in business for profits, and most of them have been less likely to make the risky subprime housing loans that have been the downfall of banks across the country. Shareholders are the members, and having a credit-union account is a good way to get started in the credit world should you need a loan.

To keep credit unions on equal footing with banks, they have been included in the increased insurance coverage legislation. Credit unions aren't covered by the FDIC. Instead they are chartered by the National Credit Union Administration and covered by the National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund. No money has ever been lost in a credit-union failure because of the insurance.

Keep an eye on the FDIC Web site (www.fdic.gov) for press releases and the Consumers and Communities section for up-to-date information. Click on Industry Analysis and Bank Data and Statistics to check on a specific bank. You'll also be able to research comparisons between banks and individual bank ratings reports. The Failed Banks link will provide specific information about where accounts of failed banks have been transferred.

You can link from the FDIC site or go directly to www.myfdicinsurance.gov to see how much of your bank account balances are covered by the new legislation.

From Common To Customized - Add Value With Details

(ARA) - Whether you're selling your home or planning to live there for years to come, you can add interest and value using architectural elements. Customizing your kitchen, bath or master bedroom is a simple way to set your home apart and increase the "wow factor" of those particular rooms, which real estate agents say will houses.

Architectural elements are the unique details that form the architectural style of houses and buildings.

These include anything from stairways and fireplace mantels to columns and ornaments. Examples of architectural details are found in every design style from intricate Victorian gables to modern clean-lined ceiling domes.

Here are a few easy design tips that use architectural elements to bring your kitchen, bath or master bedroom from ordinary to extraordinary.

Kitchen -- From Lackluster to Luxury
• Stock cabinets can be plain and boring. Add decorative corbels (an architectural support bracket), panel and crown moldings to create a high-end, customized appearance.

• Add a ceiling medallion above the breakfast bar or table. Whether simple or elegantly embellished, a medallion will enhance any light fixture and create a focal point.

• Build an "oven nook." Using a shelf or fireplace mantel and some decorative corbels, you can create the look of a custom built-in cooking station found in model homes.

Bathroom -- From So-so to Spa
• Switch out the simple wood trim around doors for elegant casings and add a chair rail at mid-wall height. For a look featured in four-star hotels, paint the wall below the chair rail a muted, relaxing color and use a slightly lighter shade of the same color above the chair rail.

• Add a decorative shelf or mantel for display of art, plants or your favorite fragrance bottles.

• Add to the height of the bathroom by installing a round or elliptical dome. A dome will allow for a larger, more dramatic light fixture while adding depth like a tray ceiling.

Master Bedroom -- From Routine to Relaxing

• Trimming the bedroom with crown moulding shows attention to detail and complements rooms of any style.

• Add a niche to your wall for dramatic display space. Highlight special photos, keepsakes or a piece of art.

• Create a custom headboard using architectural plaques, ornate corbels and decorative swags. A custom headboard allows you to show your style and offers an elegant space to frame the room's largest piece of furniture.

Adding architectural elements to customize the spaces in our home doesn't have to be difficult or expensive. Lightweight, decorative moldings and other elements are available through companies like Focal Point Architectural Products, which specializes in closed-cell polyurethane products that won't rot or mildew. The pieces look like plaster and wood, but offer a cost-effective and time-saving alternative to traditional materials.

Is Aluminum Wiring Safe?

Q. I'll be closing escrow soon on a 1974 mobile home. I just had the home inspection done and found out that it has aluminum wiring. Is this common, and is this a safety hazard, especially being so old? Can you give me a quick education on aluminum wiring and any pointers that might help me? — Gail S., via e-mail

A. Small-gauge aluminum wiring was installed in about 2 million homes (and an unknown number of other structures such as mobile homes) built in the 1960s through the mid-1970s. The reason it is no longer used is that it was found to be less safe than copper wire.

The problem with aluminum wiring is that it tends to corrode at the connections (such as electrical outlet or appliance connections). This corrosion increases the resistance to electrical current, which leads to overheating at the connection, which can cause serious problems — including fire or electrocution. Circuit breakers are designed to trip (break) an electrical circuit before it overloads and overheats, but aluminum wiring had a tendency to overheat despite this protection.

According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, homes wired before 1972 with aluminum are 55 times more likely to have one or more connections reach "fire hazard conditions" than a home wired with copper.

In 1972, manufacturers introduced a new "alloy" type of aluminum wiring, as well as improved switches and outlets. However, some reports argue that the alloy wasn't much of an improvement.

One thing that was introduced in this same time period was a less-costly alternative to completely rewiring a home with copper. This is the COPALUM crimp connector repair, which splices aluminum wires with copper connectors to create a safer connection at the outlet or appliance.

It is one of just two recommended fixes for the aluminum wiring in your home (the other is to completely rewire with copper). The COPALUM fix was allowed through 2005. I don't know if it's still a permitted repair option, but a licensed electrician will know about it. At any rate, you should have an electrician double-check all electrical connections in the mobile home to make sure they are functioning correctly. For the repair work, be sure to get a written estimate and re-inspect after repairs are complete.

New Light For Outdoor Living Spaces

(ARA) - Home owners spend as much time outdoors as possible. Making outdoor spaces more livable not only increases the value of a home, but can make a house feel larger and allow its occupants to enjoy the best nature has to offer.

Americans will be spending a lot of their discretionary money updating their homes, according to the Home Improvement Research Institute (HIRI). As usual, kitchen and bathroom remodels are expected to be popular, so are projects that allow homeowners in need of more space to expand their living areas. But with budgets tight, not too many people will be doing additions this year. They are instead expected to focus their attention on outdoor living as a way to expand.

"Outdoor living is a lot more sophisticated, today, than it was as recently as five years ago. People now have outdoor kitchens and living rooms, and since they are decorating them a lot like they would an interior room it's getting hard to tell the outdoor living spaces from the indoor ones," says Joe Rey-Barreau, an associate professor at the University of Kentucky's School of Interior Design and the education consultant for the American Lighting Association (ALA). He travels the country tracking trends and one he's noticed lately is the focus on decorative accents outside.

"It doesn't matter where in the country I am; when I visit an outdoor living room these days, I will find decorative table lamps and chandeliers, even wall scones that are UL rated; and hanging from the ceiling are these beautiful fans. A far cry from the industrial-looking models of yesteryear," says Rey-Barreau.

Take, for example, the Bellaria Collection by Zionsville, Ind.-based Fanimation. "Fans in this collection are decorative as well as functional," says Tom Underwood, the company's national sales manager. "They look like indoor products by virtue of their detail, but are meant to be used outdoors."

The Bellaria fans feature a composite housing that is rust-proof, all-weather blades and wet-labeled light kits. They are available in seven different finishes ranging from white to aged copper.

The Emerson Ceiling Fan company of St. Louis, Mo., also has some strong offerings for the outdoor living market. "We've expanded our outdoor offerings quite a bit in recent years," says Steve Cox, vice president and general manager of Emerson Air Comfort Products. "Emerson offers all the traditional and contemporary designs you'd expect. Plus we have a lot of models with a tropical look."

Cox expects The Maui Bay line to do extremely well. The fan motors, which come in a corrosion resistant housing that is perfect for an outdoor deck or gazebo, and blades in this collection are sold separately, allowing home owners to create a look that is truly unique.

In the meantime, the designers at Regency Fans, which is based in Fenton, Mo., expect their Miranda collection to do well with the outdoor living crowd. "Our outdoor models have the same quiet D/C motor fans as our interior units do," says Kim Noerteman, Regency's product and marketing director. "Consumers can find regular ceiling hung fans, as well as wall, pedestal and decorative tandem models available for both the inside and out in this collection. The only real difference if you decide to go outside rather than in would be the more weather-resistant housing and blade options."

For more information about ceiling fans designed for outdoor use, or to find a showroom near you that carries them, log on to the American Lighting Association's Web site at www.AmericanLightingAssoc.com or call (800) BRIGHT-IDEAS (800-274-4484).

Ceramic Tiles Join The Green Revolution

(NAPS) - Much like other designers who have found they can do well by going green, many ceramic tile manufacturers are embracing a powerful design trend that finds inspiration from the environment, materials found in nature and other natural shapes.

The trend, which is called "Organica," is about pure, simple, organic lifestyle, and Tile of Spain manufacturers offer a full portfolio of "Organica" options.

For example, hygienic ceramic can be used in spaces designed for "healthy living." Also, simply selecting durable materials that will last the life of the home greatly reduces the demand for virgin materials as well as the amount of material sent to landfills.

Once installed, ceramic tile may last for a minimum of 40 years. Plus, indoor air quality, health and hygiene are a growing focus of sustainable design. Working with ceramic tile means that virtually no Volatile Organic Compounds (VOCs) are introduced into the indoor air environment.

Eco-friendly ceramic is made of natural ingredients as well as offering a "back to basics" look and material. A Tile of Spain branded manufacturer, Porcelanosa, offers the Yakarta series, a rectified porcelain tile available in a 12" x 35" format with grass cloth-like texture. Natural and inspired by the Sahara grasslands, this wall covering works effortlessly as a backdrop for primitive artwork and sculptures in the residential or commercial gallery.

Bamboo is the hottest eco-chic material as of late, and Tile of Spain branded manufacturer Keros created "Bambu," a series that could pass for the fibrous wood detailed with various floral listello borders, all very "Organica."

North Quincy's Bid For Patriot Bowl Over

By SEAN BRENNAN

The North Quincy Red Raiders made things interesting in final minutes of play against Middleboro High School last Friday night, but in the end, the Raiders could not overcome a 16-0 deficit, losing 16-13.

The loss officially ended North Quincy's chance to play in the inaugural Patriot League Bowl; a winner-take-all game scheduled for Saturday afternoon that will decide which Patriot League team will represent the league in the state playoffs.

Not to make matters worse, but if the Raiders had pulled out the home victory over Middleboro, they would have represented the Fisher Division in the Patriot Bowl against Duxbury High School. Instead, Hanover High School—a 7-0 winner over Rockland HS and a team the Raiders defeated 21-14 earlier this fall—will represent the Fisher Division on Saturday against Duxbury.

"The kids definitely hung in, they showed effort," said NQ head coach Jim Connor. "As far as the game goes Middleboro played great. They capitalized on our mistakes."

"You need to give the victors credit. They made the big plays and we didn't. Looking at the film, it was a total team loss. We just couldn't get that one big stop or play when we needed it."

Trailing 16-0 with just under five minutes left in the game, North put together one final push. On first and 10 from their own 45-yard line, running back Joe Vialpando broke tackle after tackle and eventually found daylight up the right sideline. His 55-yard TD run was followed by an unsuccessful two-point conversion. Score at this point was 16-6 Middleboro.

Looking to get the ball back fast, the Raiders attempted an onside kick. Placekicker Chris Evora's onside kick was recovered by senior Tim Stille and the Raiders were back in business. But four plays later the Raiders turned the ball over on downs.

Looking to run out the game clock, North's defense forced Middleboro to fumble the ball away. When North Quincy came up with the loose ball, new life came back to the Red Raiders' sideline, and when Stanton found Paul Reamer on a slant in the end zone with 13 seconds left to push the score to 16-13, Veterans Stadium went berserk.

The game and any hopes of a chance at a league title came to a close when Evora's second attempt at an onside kick sailed out-of-bounds.

"It was a tough loss," added Connor. "They (Hanover) took care of Rockland. We just didn't take care of our side."

North Quincy and Middleboro played a scoreless first quarter, but it was the Raiders who squandered the best scoring opportunity. At the end of the quarter, the Raiders, behind the play of quarterback Mike Stanton and the running of Pat Watkins, Vialpando and Brian Donaghy, drove all the way inside Middleboro's 20-yard line. On third down and long, Stanton had senior wide receiver Tim Stille wide-open in the end zone, but the pass rush of Middleboro and the lousy weather forced a high throw and on fourth down North Quincy turned the ball over on downs.

Middleboro used this defensive stand as a boost for their first scoring drive of the game. After ten plays and almost eight minutes of ball possession Middleboro scored on a six-yard touchdown run. The successful point after attempt made the score 7-0.

After Watkins returned the following kickoff to the NQ 34-yard line, Stanton botched a snap on first down. The loose ball was recovered by Matt Jay, but the fumble pushed the Raiders back to their own 24. On second and 20, Stanton fired a pass in the direction of Paul Reamer, but the pass was intercepted at the NQ 42.

The turnover eventually was converted into a half-time ending 23-yard field goal that gave the visitors a 10-0 lead at the break. Those three points turned out to be the difference when the final whistle blew to end the game.

The second half began with the Raiders picking up one first down before punting the ball away. Middleboro would give the ball right back. A fumble near mid-field was recovered by NQ at their own 40-yard line but after Stanton and the offense got as far as the Middleboro 23-yard line things went down the drain.

On second and 12 from the 23-yard line Terrence Staley was dropped for a seven-yard loss; on third and 19 Stanton's pass fell incomplete and on fourth down the Raiders punted the ball away. Opportunity missed.

Middleboro punted the ball right back but the North Quincy would fumble the ball away on their next possession and at the end of three quarters the score was 16-0 Middleboro.

The final blow from Middleboro came with 6:30 left in the game. With no quarterback behind center, Middleboro had a wide receiver take the snap. The trickery worked when the pass was caught 40+ yards downfield for a touchdown.

"It was a trick play and it worked," said Connor. "It wasn't like we had bad coverage, we did. It is one thing if the QB makes that throw, but for a wide receiver to make it is tough."

The Raiders will play Silver Lake HS on Friday night at 7:30 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Turnovers, Penalties Cost Quincy 3rd Straight Defeat

FOOTBALL Quincy - 14 Hingham - 25

Three second-half turnovers and a handful of costly penalties were the main reasons why the Quincy Presidents dropped their third straight game, 25-14, last Saturday afternoon against Hingham High School.

"It was a slugfest the entire game," said Quincy head coach Bill Reardon. "These two teams were evenly matched. If we make a couple more plays the outcome may have been different. But those three turnovers and those penalties cost us in the end."

"We have been fighting these last three games with turnovers and penalties. We still have a game this Friday to help us get back on track heading into our game on Thanksgiving."

The Presidents (3-5 overall, 1-4 in the Keenan Division) fell behind 3-0 in the first quarter, but when senior Anthony Raddatz returned the following kickoff back for a touchdown, and Quincy successfully converted a two-point conversion, the score was 8-3 Presidents.

After Raddatz scored, Hingham (4-5 overall) drove the field and punched the ball into the end zone to go back up 9-8. A successful two-point play pushed the score to 11-8 in the second quarter.

The 11-8 advantage did not last long for Hingham. Quincy, behind the running of senior Tim Lewis, took the ball back and scored. Lewis capped off the impressive scoring drive with a touchdown run, but the Presidents extra point try was blocked, putting the score at 14-11 Quincy.

This first-half slugfest saw one more scoring drive; this time it was Hingham that did the damage. The Harbormen took back the lead for good with a long drive to end the half. A touchdown with little time left before the halftime whistle ran the score to 18-14 Hingham.

"We played a nice first-half," added Reardon. "Raddatz continues to be a playmaker for us on offense and Tim Lewis has been running the ball great these last few games. We did have a point after attempt blocked, and that is something we need to work on, but overall it was a good half."

The second half was not as kind to Quincy. The Presidents had three possessions end in interceptions; killing any possibility of a comeback, and Hingham scored one final touchdown to put the game out of reach.

"We beat ourselves in the second half with the turnovers and penalties," Reardon said. "We had three possessions end in interceptions and that stopped any thought of coming back in the game."

"It is a long season and we as a team are banged up. But we will still keep fighting over these next two games and see if we can't fix some of our mistakes."

As part of a football double-header this Friday, Quincy will play Randolph High School at 4:15 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium. This game will be followed by the North Quincy-Silver Lake game at 7:30 p.m.

"We get to play Randolph on Friday as part of the Patriot Bowl weekend," said Reardon. "Once that game is finished we will focus on North Quincy and Thanksgiving."

The Patriot Bowl weekend will conclude on Saturday with the league championship game between Hanover and Duxbury High Schools at 5:00 p.m. at Whitman-Hanson High School.

After Preliminary Win Over Marshfield

Red Raiders Fall In First Round

By SEAN BRENNAN

This past weekend, playing in the Division I South Sectionals, the North Quincy Red Raiders tasted the sweetness of victory and the bitterness of defeat.

North Quincy opened the post-season with a hard-fought 2-1 victory over Marshfield High School at Veterans Memorial Stadium last Friday in a preliminary round game, but dropped a 3-2 game on Sunday to Dartmouth High School in a first-round match-up.

The victory over Marshfield represented the Raiders' first post-season win in almost 20 seasons; the team's appearance in the Division I post-season was the program's first visit to the playoffs in nine years.

Playing as the #13 seed, North Quincy, as a result of their win over Marshfield, traveled to Dartmouth on Sunday to play against the #4 seed.

Senior all-everything Shane Regan put the Raiders up 1-0 just 15 minutes into the first-round game. Regan scored on a direct kick. The goal represented Regan's 100th career varsity point and gave his team an early advantage.

But Dartmouth rallied back to score three-unanswered goals to take a 3-1 lead. North Quincy and Regan would get the score back to 3-2 with a late second-half score. Regan was assisted on his second goal of the game by senior midfielder Danny Russell.

"The team fought like hell," said NQ head coach Rich Hanlon. "But Dartmouth was too strong. They were bigger and faster, but my kids played their hearts out till the very end. This loss hurts but it does not take away from the success we have had this season."

Boys' Soccer

SHANE REGAN searches for open field during last Friday's preliminary round game against Marshfield. Regan scored once against the Rams and twice more versus Dartmouth. He finished his high school career with 101 points.

"The team graduated 15 seniors off last year's team (2007 edition). Most people thought this would be a rebuilding year for us, but we worked as hard as anybody to get to where we ended up."

The Raiders advanced to the first-round after an exciting and, one could say, revenge win over former Atlantic Coast League foe Marshfield last Friday. The Rams, a constant opponent for North during their time playing in the ACL, had defeated the Raiders 10-0 and 6-0 in 2006 and 2007, but this year's North team came out flying this time around.

A little more than five minutes into the game, junior midfielder Silas DeBus (an exchange student from Germany) found Russell open in the box. Russell put a good shot on net, but was denied. The Raiders continued putting the pressure on the Rams two minutes later when Regan took a direct kick from 18-yards out that was saved.

Marshfield quieted the home crowd moments after Regan's direct kick. The Rams' Andrew Sheridan found TJ Jordan open in the NQ box and Jordan buried a blast by Raider goalie Ryan Louis for the 1-0 lead.

That lead held up for less than four minutes. At the 31:00 minute mark, Regan forced another direct kick from just out side the penalty box and this time he delivered. His shot deflected off a Marshfield defender and tied the score at 1-1.

Both teams had scoring chances throughout the rest of the half, but neither team would capitalize. The Rams had the best chance late. With four minutes to play in the half, Marshfield missed an open net that would have pushed the score to 2-1. Instead, at the halftime break, the score was tied 1-1.

For the first 32 minutes of the second-half both teams went back-and-forth without scoring. The Rams saw several scoring chances go by the books-largely because of the stellar play of Louis in net-and the Raiders missed on quality chances as well. The best scoring chance for North coming on a header by Russell in the tenth minute that just missed its mark.

With the clock running down and the tension building on the turf, the Raiders finally hit that homerun they had been working towards all game. In the 32nd minute, junior Tim Gillis put a long-ball on the head of sophomore Nick Carbone, who flicked the header onto the foot of a wide-open and streaking Mike Prioli on the right side of the pitch. Prioli took the ball on a breakaway and buried his shot into the back of the net, giving the Raiders the late 2-1 advantage.

"It was a great pass by Tim to Nick and his header was perfect," said a jubilant Prioli after the game. "I just took the pass and put it in."

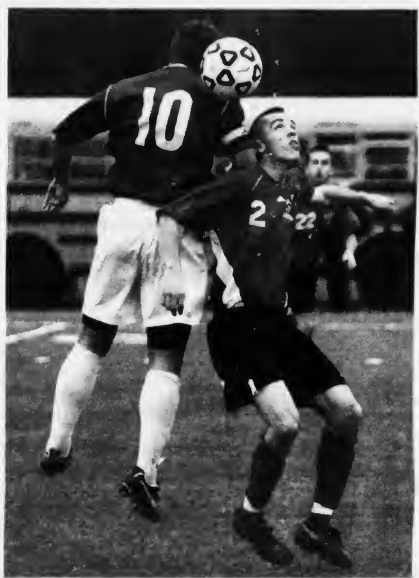

The Raiders, behind several late saves from Louis, rushed the field in celebration at the final whistle. A post-season win twenty years in the making will do that to teams.

"This was a huge win for our team," said Louis. "I am so proud of the whole team but especially our captains. Mike Prioli and Shane Regan-our thunder and lighting-came up big. It feels great."

"It is unbelievable," said Regan of the win. "We wanted to come out and beat these guys. Marshfield had defeated us the last two times we played them in the ACL. It is exciting to be moving on in the post-season."

For Coach Hanlon the victory was even sweeter.

"It's incredible," he said. "It was a hard-fought game and winning against the Rams is a little bit of a pay-back. I can't say enough about our captains. The whole team deserves credit for this post-season win, our first in 20 years."

The Raiders will graduate off this year's team, seniors Paul DeLucia, Alex Filippi, Florian Mustafaj, Vishal Kapadnis, Zack Omwenga, Parth Parikh, Dhiraj Tamang, Regan, Prioli and Russell.

The team will return starters Ricky Long, Kevin Therrian, Nick Carbone, Ryan Louis and Tim Gillis

Notes: Regan finished the season with 43 points. Those numbers place him at the top of the scoring list for all of Massachusetts in 2008... Regan finished his career with 101 points... Regan was named to the All-State team... The EMass Coaches Association named Coach Hanlon as the top Division I high school coach late last week... NQ ended the season with a 11-5-3 record.

Milton Hospital Adds Four New Physicians

Milton Hospital, a clinical affiliate of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center providing community-based health care, announces the appointment of four new medical staff members.

They are: Gastroenterologist Joseph A. Fiore, M.D., cardiologist W. Kin Fung, M.D., gynecologist Soheil Hanjani, M.D. and geriatrician Min Keun Song, M.D.

Gastroenterologist Joseph A. Fiore, M.D., joins the Milton Hospital staff and the practice of Drs. Christopher and Thomas Kenney, which recently opened a new location in Milton Hospital's Lintz Medical Office Building. A graduate of Tufts University and Tufts University School of Medicine, Dr. Fiore recently completed a Gastroenterology fellowship program at Tufts-New England Medical Center.

"The hospital is meeting the growing demand for endoscopic procedures such as colonoscopies with new and improved facilities and equipment," said Dr. Fiore. "The new Endoscopy Center facilities are state-of-the-art and I am proud to be part of the high quality care. Additionally, as a Milton resident, it is very important for me to connect with my neighbors and it is extremely rewarding to be part of the staff at Milton Hospital."

Joining the practice of South Shore Internal Medicine Associates is cardiologist W. Kin Fung, M.D. Dr. Fung was a cardiology fellow at Brown University and Rhode Island Hospital/The Miriam Hospital in Providence, RI. Dr. Fung provides cardiac care including stress testing, EKG, arrhythmia and lipid abnormalities diagnosis and treatment. He speaks English and Cantonese.

Soheil A-Hanjani, M.D., brings surgical gynecology expertise to Milton Hospital. Dr. Hanjani's area of services includes a full range of laparoscopic and hysteroscopic procedures, including use of the new da Vinci robotics surgical system, for hysterectomies.

"By using the da Vinci for hysterectomies, we are able to reduce pain, scarring and recovery time while shortening the length of the patients' hospital stay," said Dr. Hanjani.

Min Keun Song, M.D., MPH, board-certified in Internal Medicine, brings his expertise in the care of the elderly to the Milton Hospital team. Dr. Song, a Harvard-trained geriatrician, joins Dr. Virginia Cummings at Milton Hospital's Geriatrics Program, a joint service with Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center providing state-of-the-art care to elders on the South Shore. Both Dr. Song and Dr. Cummings are members of the Harvard Division on Aging and are on the faculty of Harvard Medical School.

Dr. Song provides primary care to frail elders, as well as geriatric consultation for age-related disorders including dementia, delirium, depression, functional decline, polypharmacy and pain. In addition to English,

Dr. Song is fluent in Korean. He welcomes new patients.

"Recent physician growth and retention is a direct result of new technology, such as the da Vinci robot, our affiliation with Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, improvements made throughout the hospital and the wonderful working environment that our staff creates," said Joseph V. Morrissey, president of Milton Hospital. "By having a strong and diverse medical staff in addition to the state-of-the-art facilities, Milton Hospital is well-positioned to serve the growing needs of the community for years to come."

Call Milton Hospital's DoctorLine at 617-696-8809 for information on contacting any of these new physicians.

Dieting Rebound And How To Break Through

(NAPS) - The only thing harder than losing weight may be keeping it off.

It's maddening, but weight-loss rebounds are engrained in our evolutionary biology.

The good news is that there has finally been a break-through. A double-blind study recently showed that a proprietary blend of green tea, caffeine, cayenne and the amino acid L-Tyrosine can keep the body's metabolism humming for eight weeks after initial weight loss.

"The human body is built to survive environmental exposure and scarcity of food due to seasonal changes and nomadic moves from one place to another," says Greg Grochoski, chief science officer for one of the nation's most respected dietary supplement companies, ISI Brands, Inc.

"An initial weight loss signals the body to go into a conservation mode as if it were winter or enduring a food shortage. Fat is conserved to protect the internal organs until spring arrives - but today, we don't need that protection mechanism."

A new product called Break Through by MetaboLife® contains a unique, clinically tested, patent-pending formula on the market that addresses this rebound effect and is designed to support your diet and exercise to help you maintain your success.

Great American Smokeout Nov. 20

(Weston, MA) - Thursday, Nov. 20, is the 33rd Great American Smokeout, and the American Cancer Society continues its legacy of providing free resources to help smokers quit.

The Great American Smokeout was inaugurated in 1976 to inspire and encourage smokers to quit for one day. Now, 44.2 percent of the 45.3 million Americans who smoke have attempted to quit for at least one day in the past year, and the Great American Smokeout remains a great opportunity to encourage people to commit to making a long-term plan to quit for good.

With all the resources available to help smokers quit, there has never been a better time to quit smoking, and the American Cancer Society is there to help.

If you smoke, make a plan and set the Great American Smokeout, Nov. 20, 2008, as your quit date. By calling the American Cancer Society Quitline® at 1-800-227-2345, people who plan to quit will be able to speak with a trained counselor and receive free, confidential counseling.

Studies have found that Quitline can more than double a person's chances of successfully quitting tobacco. Callers to Quitline can be connected with smoking cessation resources in their communities, social support groups, Internet resources, and medication assistance referrals.

Since its inception in 2000, Quitline has provided counseling support to more than 380,000 smokers.

The American Cancer Society offers other free resources - through Quitline and at www.cancer.org/GreatAmericans - that can increase a smoker's chances of quitting successfully, including tips and tools for friends, family, and coworkers of potential quitters to help them be aware and supportive of the struggle to quit smoking. Studies show the importance of social support in quitting smoking, as people are most likely to quit smoking when their friends, family, and coworkers are to quit smoking.

Popular online social networks such as Facebook and MySpace are also becoming support channels for people who want to quit, and American Cancer Society Smokeout-related downloadable desktop applications are available on these networks to help people quit or join the fight against tobacco.

"A recent study in the New England Journal of Medicine found that social networks are helpful in quitting smoking," said Janet McGrail, Massachusetts Vice President for Health Initiatives at the American Cancer Society. "Friends and family can help the most by being aware and supportive of the struggle to quit, and the American Cancer Society has resources to help them show support for their loved one who is trying to quit."

Tobacco use remains the single largest preventable cause of disease and premature death in the United States. Each year, smoking accounts for an estimated 438,000 premature deaths, including 38,000 deaths among nonsmokers as a result of secondhand smoke. Half of all Americans who continue to smoke will die from smoking-related diseases.

Also imperative in this effort to encourage people to quit smoking are smoke-free laws and higher tobacco taxes which make it harder for people to smoke, and protect nonsmokers from tobacco smoke. The majority of U.S. communities are now covered by smoke-free laws, while forty-three states, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico have raised tobacco taxes since 2000, including Massachusetts which after raising its tax by $0.75 in 2002 increased the excise by another $1 this past summer. It is estimated that the new Massachusetts tax will generate $154 million in revenue this year to support the Massachusetts Commonwealth Care Trust Fund in delivering health insurance to low-income residents. Currently, the state spends more than $1 billion through its Medicaid program to pay for treating people with tobacco-related illness.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

THE QUICK FIX FOR CHIPPED TEETH

The cosmetic restoration technique known as bonding is an answer to the prayers of patients who want a quick, effective, and relatively low-cost fix for chipped, stained, cracked, or eroded teeth. This bonding procedure involves the application of a composite resin material that, in effect, patches damaged tooth areas. The plastic resin is matched to natural tooth color, and the procedure usually requires only a single visit. The dentist first prepares the tooth for treatment by roughing and shaping the surface. Next, the tooth is prepared with solutions that ensure strong adhesion between the tooth and bonding material. The resin is then cured with a high-intensity light. Finally, the bonded area is smoothed and polished and provide a natural contour. Whether it's to repair chips, whiten and brighten dull or stained teeth, replace metal fillings or fill spaces, you can perfect your smile with our help. Our aim is to provide gentle, compassionate dental care of the highest quality. Because we are trained in the most advanced dental methods, we take pride in paying full attention to all facets of dentistry. If you would like to schedule an appointment, please call 617-479-8220. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we invite your questions about this and other oral health issues. We're currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Because the plastic resin used in dental bonding actually becomes part of the tooth's structure, the tooth emerges from the procedure stronger than before.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"Do not think that what your thoughts dwell upon is of no matter . . . Your thoughts are making you." - Bishop Steere

Yes, you can transform yourself and your life by renewing your thoughts. A negative, defeatist attitude toward life and its problems can only bring negative end results. A positive attitude toward life attracts positive results.

How you look at a problem makes all the difference . . . It is an interesting phenomenon how two people view the same situation so differently, according to how they think.

Have you ever thought about why some people say a day is partly sunny and others, commenting on the same day, will say it is partly cloudy? Or if a glass of water is half full, one person will think of it as half full; another person will think of it as half empty . . . Who's the optimist . . . who's the pessimist? . . .

Yes, how you look at a problem, how you look at life, determines whether it will be happy, full, and rewarding . . . or gloomy, depressing and unrewarding . . .

What are your thoughts on your life today? . . .

that the drugs may have been ingested, so an ambulance was called. Detective Gerard O'Rourke assisted Detective Biggins in carrying the suspect about 50 yards through the elephant grass to the awaiting ambulance. In the ambulance, the suspect identified himself to Detective Tom Cleary and Officer Flaherty.

When asked again where the gun was, the suspect didn't answer initially, but when Detective Cleary expressed concern about the proximity of St. Ann's elementary school and that all the children that would be in the area in the morning, the suspect said that the gun was in a yard near a fence to the left of a funeral home. Based on this information, police officers conducted a thorough search of that area but found nothing.

The search changed to where the taxi driver dropped off the suspect.

Officers found pill bottles consistent with what was stolen from CVS in the area of Oval Road. Following the trail of pills, Detective O'Rourke found the gun in a back yard. Back at the ambulance, Officer John McGowan brought the taxi driver to the back of the ambulance to look at the suspect and he stated he was 100% sure that the suspect was the same man who held a gun to his head in the taxi.

Officer Mike Duran brought two employees from CVS to the back of the ambulance (separately) and they both confirmed that he was the man who robbed CVS. Officer Flaherty interviewed the cab driver, who stated that he picked up the suspect earlier in the day in South Boston. He said that he had never met him before that, but gave him a number to call for a ride later that day. The suspect called the cab driver and set up a 10 p.m. pick up.

The suspect told the driver to go to CVS and once there, told the driver to wait. About a minute later, the cab driver saw a police cruiser (Officer Flaherty) enter the parking lot and park by Enterprise Rent a Car. The driver said that as the police car started moving toward the door closest to Clay Street, the suspect exited the store near Beale Street and hastily got in the taxi.

The cab driver stated he saw the officer draw his gun and point it at a man in the doorway as he drove by. The cab driver was unaware that a crime had occurred and the actual suspect was in his taxi. At that time, the suspect took out a gun, put it through the partition and put the barrel against the driver's head as he instructed him to drive. The cab driver said he drove directly behind Officer Flaherty but was afraid to stop because he was afraid he would be shot and killed.

The cab driver said the suspect got out of his cab at St Ann's Road and ran toward Oval Road, which is when he called the police. At the station, Detective Brian Coen assisted Detective Cleary in counting the recovered stolen narcotics, totaling 2,190 total pills, with an estimated street value of $24,000.

In addition, the suspect's gun had been reported stolen.

The suspect, a 30-year-old Dorchester resident, was charged with "Armed Robbery, Carjacking- Armed, Armed Assault with intent to Murder (2 counts), Assault by Dangerous Weapon (2 counts), Trafficking in a Class A substance, Carry Firearm w/o License, Resisting Arrest, Receiving Stolen Property over $250 and Firearm used in a felony."

"The situation is not the same for the reservists," he said. "These folks have to reacclimate themselves to a civilian lifestyle and a career that they put on hold for a year or more."

"What I find most impressive are the families. For someone on active duty that deploys, there is generally a support structure for the families already in place."

"There are other spouses from the unit that often live in the same neighborhood that understand each others' difficulties and can lean on each other."

"For the families of the mobilized reservist, this isn't necessarily the case."

"The other families in the unit can, and often do, live in other communities or even in another state and sometimes they can truly feel alone in their situation."

"These are the citizen soldiers from our community that are carrying a heavy burden and doing it quietly with incredible courage."

With the closing of the South Weymouth Naval Air

Station in 1996, the South Shore no longer has an active duty military population yet 90 reservists from Quincy are mobilized.

"People of Quincy, I ask you to reach out to the families of our deployed military members," said Orlowski. "Try to lend a helping hand."

"Just something simple, rake the yard, shovel the driveway or offer to watch the kids so Mom can finally get a much deserved day off."

"Most importantly, show you care."

Koch Promotes Three In Fire Department

BY LAURA GRIFFIN

Family, friends and fellow firefighters applauded Monday after City Clerk Joseph Shea administered the oath of office to three new fire department officers appointed by Mayor Thomas Koch.

Koch promoted Captain Paul Griffith to Deputy Fire Chief; Lt. Joseph Ceurvels to Fire Captain; and Firefighter George Wirtz to lieutenant.

Koch congratulated the appointees citing their success in their jobs and noting his confidence in their future accomplishments.

"We're in for challenging times," Koch said, referring to potential financial hardships ahead. "We're asked to do more with less."

"These positions are vital to the function of the department and necessary to maintain the same level of service," Acting Chief Joseph Barron said of the promo-

Could Bring $800,000

In New Revenue

Council Approves Increases In Fees And Fines

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Council Monday approved increases in city fees and fines that could bring an additional $800,000 to the city's coffers in fiscal year 2009.

All changes are effective "on passage" by the council's unanimous vote, according to Jim Fatseas, chief of staff for Mayor Thomas Koch who recommended the changes.

New revenue of over $200,000 could be added to this year's funds, according to Fatseas who warned that such figures are only estimates.

The more than 100 new fees and fines take a bite out of nearly all licensed and inspected activities except dog ownership.

Dog licenses remain at $10 while the cost of a marriage license will increase by $10 from $35 to $45 and business certificates, also, increase by $5 from $35 to $40.

It will cost twice as much to get buried, but the change is actually minimal with the approved $20 fee per burial permit for funeral directors versus the past $10 fee.

Parking offenders will likely think twice facing a $25 fine for overtime parking and 13 other violations, ranging from obstructing a driveway to double parking. Scofflaws who ignore those parking tickets will pay a $35 penalty for late payment and $50 if the fine payment is really late.

"These are appropriate fees," Fatseas said, noting that the new fees are in line with nearby communities of the same size. Fatseas presented a spreadsheet with fees charged by 36 cities and towns in the state.

In at least one instance, the new fee schedule is actually lower than in the past. A review of building plans will now only cost $50 versus a past charge of $150.

Department heads "were careful not to make fees higher than communities of the same size," said Fatseas who provided spreadsheets comparing Quincy's fee and fine schedule to a dozen other cities and towns.

City To Double Heating Assistance For Needy

Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday that the city will double its program providing home-heating assistance to Quincy families thanks largely to the Mayor's Cup Charity Golf Tournament, which raised $70,000 for the cause this fall.

The City Council on Monday approved a $100,000 appropriation for the program, double the city's usual expenditure for the program. But only about $30,000 will be paid from the city's budget, which is less than the last several years thanks to the charity fundraiser.

"This is a win for our families who will be in desperate need of assistance this winter, and it is a win because we are providing twice the assistance at almost half the cost to our taxpayers," Koch said. "I am incredibly thankful to all the businesses, community leaders, and residents who contributed to this effort."

The program will be run by the City and Quincy Community Action Programs, and all candidates must be qualified by QCAP to receive aid from the City. For more information, residents can call Tom Fabrizio in the Mayor's Office at 617-376-1990.

Major sponsors for the tournament were: National Grid, South Cove Community Health Center, Boston Scientific, Quincy Credit Union, Streetworks, Capitol Waste, Gilbane, Dan Quirk, Eastern Bank, State Street, Honeywell and Tishman.

Maher Attorney Considering U.S. Supreme Court Appeal

Does the revocation of retired Plumbing Inspector Ralph Maher's $37,000 pension after his conviction for breaking into City Hall violate the Eighth Amendment's ban on excessive fines?

Maher's attorney, Frank McGee of Marshfield, thinks it does and he's considering asking the United States Supreme Court to rule on it.

The 70-year-old Maher's final appeal through the state justice system was rejected Nov. 6 by the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court that found his crime could have harmed the public trust.

"If that is not an excessive fine, what is?" said McGee. "He could have robbed a bank next to City Hall, shot all the tellers, got life in Walpole and still get a retirement check every month.

"We're still trying to decide whether to take the case to the Supreme Court based on the Eighth Amendment."

In denying his appeal, the State Supreme Court said Maher's "crime could have undermined public confidence in the selection and appointment of officials in supervisory positions."

"At one point during the arguments one of the justices said, 'We have to send a message out if you get out of line this could happen to you. Courts are not in the message sending business.'"

The case began in December, 2001, when Maher and co-worker Daniel Keating broke into the personnel office at City Hall and removed parts of the plumbing inspector's personnel file.

He pleaded guilty to breaking and entering in the daytime, destruction of property and stealing personnel records and was sentenced to six months probation, a $500 fine and $393 restitution.

The Retirement Board revoked his pension in 2003 under a state law which says those convicted of a crime related to their jobs are not entitled to pension benefits.

McGee argued that the punishment was too much to strip a man with 37 years of public service and a wife who is not in good health of his pension rights and benefits that could total $576,000.

"The State Supreme Court did not agree with me," he said.

Koch Submits Preservation Budget

Mayor Thomas Koch has recommended approximately $1.6 million dollars in outlays from the Community Preservation Account (CPA).

An additional $296,800 would be transferred to the CPA reserves for future projects, bringing the total budget to $1.9 million.

The request was forwarded to the City Council Finance Committee.

The majority of Koch's funding requests involve $916,500 for debt service for the purchase of conservation properties in Ward 4 and Ward 1.

Equal amounts of $190,000 each would be assigned to affordable housing and historic preservation.

City Council President Jay Davis questioned a $66,300 item for park improvements and the administrative amount of $94,000.

He acknowledged that administrative costs were considerably higher when he chaired the CPA committee.

Davis said the committee needed legal and administrative help during the purchasing of the million-dollar properties.

Quincy Police Upgrade Community Bicycle Unit

The Quincy Police Department announce recent upgrades to the Community Police Bicycle Unit, including the addition of six new bicycles to the unit so officers can go where cruisers cannot.

Officers on bicycles can maneuver areas crowded with pedestrians, through narrow alleyways and into yards or parks. Most citizens find they are more comfortable approaching officers on bicycles, whether asking for directions, providing information on neighborhood issues or about criminal activity.

In 1992, when crime increased significantly in Quincy Center, the Quincy Police assigned two officers to bicycles to patrol the streets and hot spots in the downtown area. At the time, and with the assistance of the Special Operation Unit, numerous arrests were made and youths were moved off corners in an effort to clean up the streets and deter groups from hanging in this area of the city.

Today, the officers on bicycles are members of the Community Police Unit assigned throughout the city to monitor and handle a wide range of community related issues. Though there still remains an emphasis on enforcement in the area of Quincy Center, there is less crime there today than in 1992, according to Quincy police records. Community Police Officers patrolling on bicycle are highly visible and cover more ground than an officer assigned to a walking beat.

The bicycle patrol Officers are not intended to replace the walking beat or the area car. They do enhance patrol objectives and work with the beat officer to respond to incidents and monitor the various areas of the city prone to either traf-

Moments in time

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On Nov. 21, 1783, Jean-François Pilatre de Rozier and François Laurent make the first untethered hot-air balloon flight, flying 5 1/2 miles over Paris in about 25 minutes. On Sept. 19, brothers Joseph and Etienne Montgolfiers had sent a sheep, a rooster and a duck aloft in one of their balloons in a prelude to the first manned flight.
- On Nov. 23, 1859, the infamous Western outlaw known as "Billy the Kid" is born on New York City's East Side. Billy the Kid called himself William H. Bonney, but his original name was probably Henry McCarty. Before he was shot dead at age 21, Billy reputedly killed 27 people in the American West.
- On Nov. 19, 1907, Jack Schaefer, the author of "Shane," one of the most popular Westerns of all time, is born in Cleveland. Shane was the American version of the valorous European knight, who roams a lawless kingdom righting wrongs and striking down the evil oppressors of the common people.
- On Nov. 17, 1944, actor and director Danny DeVito is born in Neptune, N.J. A former hairdresser, DeVito made his stage debut in 1969. He spent five years playing cab dispatcher Louie De Palma on the TV sitcom "Taxi."

- On Nov. 20, 1952, struggling singer Frank Sinatra agrees to a screen test for a role in "From Here to Eternity." Sinatra was paid only $8,000, but the role and an Academy Award for Best Supporting Actor helped resurrect his career.

- On Nov. 18, 1966, Sandy Koufax, the ace pitcher for the Los Angeles Dodgers, retires from baseball. Koufax is perhaps most famous for his refusal in 1965 to pitch the first game of the World Series because it fell on Yom Kippur. Don Drysdale pitched instead, and gave up seven runs in the first three innings.

- On Nov. 22, 1980, actress and writer Mae West dies at the age of 88. In 1926, West produced her own play, "Sex," about a gigolo. West was arrested and spent 10 days in jail for obscenity. Undaunted, she continued writing racy plays until she finally scored a Broadway success with her 1928 play, "Diamond Lil."

Crowley Considering A Run

He isn't saying "yes."
He isn't saying "no."

But former Police Chief Robert Crowley acknowledges that he is considering running for the City Council in next year's city election.

"I haven't made a decision yet," he says. "I'll look at it after the first of the year."

CROWLEY

Crowley, as noted here last week, has triggered speculation that he might be a candidate by his attendance at City Hall and License Board meetings. Listening intently and taking notes.

And when he's not there, he's watching the proceedings on Quincy Access TV at home. He is also attending community meetings, like the ones on the proposed Asian market at the former Boston Gear Works site.

And he has also recently publicly opposed issuing a license to the Sportsmen' Den to sell firearms as he did as police chief.

"There's no need for a gun store in Quincy," he says. "Show me the need."

He notes that police departments in some communities sell confiscated guns to dealers who in turn sell them to the public.

He recalls while chief Quincy police had some 400 to 500 guns in the evidence room, which had been seized in various crimes.

A gun dealer offered him $82,000 to $100,000 for them. He and Captain Anthony DiBona listened to the offer and turned the dealer down.

"We took the guns to the state police to have them destroyed," Crowley says. "We weren't going to let them get back out on the street."

Crowley, who is 61, retired from the Police Department June 1, closing out a 38-year police career. He grew up in Quincy.

"I've always had an interest in the community and in the political field, too," he says.

Well, if he runs, would it be for councillor at-large or ward councillor. He lives in Squantum, which is in Ward 6.

"No, I'm going to pass on that for now," he says. But he does add:

"If I do run, I won't be just throwing my name in. I will be a very serious candidate."

SCHOOL COMMITTEE MEMBER Anne Mahoney is holding a Thanksgiving Kick-off fundraiser tonight (Thursday), 6 to 8 p.m. at the Best Western Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St., North Quincy.

Suggested contribution is $35.

Those attending are asked to bring along a canned good or non-perishable food item for the QCAP South-west Community Center Emergency Food Pantry.

MAHONEY

WE NOTED LAST week that Precinct 5 of Ward 6 (Squantum School) had the biggest voter turnout in the Presidential election with 82.97 percent.

But former Mayor Frank McCauley, defending his native Houghs Neck, takes issue with us on the runner-up honors.

We had Precinct 3, Ward 6 (former Beechwood Center) in second place with 72 percent.

Actually, that spot belongs to Precinct 5 of Ward 1 (Saint Thomas Aquinas Hall) with an 81.80 percent turnout.

And in third place was Precinct 1 of Ward 1 (Merrymount School) with 80.09 percent.

Frank, doesn't miss much. But wonder if he knows Ward 1 was the top ward in the city with a 75.30 percentage turnout. The city's was 71 percent.

SMALL WORLD DEPT: In another recent column I wrote about the destroyer that accidentally fired a torpedo at the USS Iowa with President Franklin Delano Roosevelt and admirals and generals aboard.

That ship was the William D. Porter. My destroyer, the USS Cogswell, the Porter and a third destroyer, whose name I could not remember, were escorting FDR to the Teheran Conference.

Well, I got a note from Frank Orlando of Hopedale Street, West Quincy, who tells me that the third destroyer was the USS Hall and he was a crew member at the time.

Frank had a sentimental attachment to the Hall. He helped build it as a shipfitter at the Boston Navy Yard. Then he joined the Navy-and was assigned to it.

PERSONAL: Thanks to Doug Menz for the Veterans Day card. Nice to be remembered, Doug.

Federal Grant Writing Workshop Friday

Congressman Bill Delahunt will sponsor an all-day forum Friday, Nov. 21, in Buzzards Bay to help non-profit organizations and municipalities better understand the process of writing federal grant applications.

The workshop is scheduled to run from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in Admiral's Hall in the Harrington Building at the Massachusetts Maritime Academy, 101 Academy Drive.

"With local organizations facing growing demands for services and fewer resources, every dollar counts," said Delahunt.

"Our workshop is designed to demystify the federal funding process by assisting local municipalities and organizations in putting together a winning application and help them identify potential funding resources using the latest on line resources."

The workshop will include personal instruction from staff members of Housing and Urban Development on accessing federal grant funds and grant proposal writing techniques.

The program is free but interested participants are asked to register at www.hud.gov/event_registration. For reservations and further details, call Delahunt's office at 1-800-794-9911.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1930's postcard view of Quincy Square just after the Granite Trust Company's building was built by its Chairman Theophilus King. He insisted that the U.S. flag fly every day from the top of the building as it does today. Not discernible is the sign over Howard Johnson's first restaurant on the left of the bank's entrance. King financed Johnson on the condition he open a restaurant in his new building. The old Quincy Savings Bank building in the center of the picture is home today to the offices of The Quincy Sun. Each bank's building entrance is made of Hitchcock granite known in the trade as "The Aristocrat." It came from the Hitchcock Quarry, on Quarry Street, that was owned by The Quincy Quarries Company of which King was President. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Lane And Ross Prepare For Battle

By FRANK McCAULEY

State Rep. Myron N. Lane and former Mayor Charles A. Ross were nominated for mayor in Tuesday city preliminary election.

Lane led the field of five candidates with 4,807 votes followed closely by Ross who had 4,478 votes.

Lane expressed his appreciation for his vote stating, "In return for this endorsement I intend to conduct a clean, vigorous campaign, confined to the real issues before us. If I am elected Mayor I intend to give the city the best municipal administration in its history."

Ross said, "The vote indicates ultimate victory. It reflects confidence throughout the city and is evidence of the approval of my pledge to continue the stability and progress and betterment of Quincy."

(Editor's note: Ross, who served as mayor during the 1930s, would win the election. The 1942 city election was for three-year terms for mayor and city election. The election ended the staggered elections in place in Quincy since 1920.)

BURGIN MADE NAVY LIEUTENANT, JENNESS WILL BE ACTING MAYOR

Mayor Thomas Burgin, who had announced that he would retire from office at the end of his term to enlist in the Armed Forces, said that he had been commissioned as full lieutenant in the U.S. Naval Reserve.

The First Naval Division announced later that Burgin had been assigned to the office of the supervisor of shipbuilding at the Fore River Shipyard. He reported for duty Monday, Nov. 16.

Ward One Councillor and Council President William W. Jenness would serve as acting Mayor for the balance of Burgin's term, which ends on the first Monday of January 1943.

Under the law, Burgin and Jenness will share the mayoral salary of $96 per week. Each received one-half ($48).

They Can't Be Wrong Or Can They?

How did I feel the morning after the Obama landslide? Very exhausted and hungry. Trying to figure out where to go from here. I'm gonna miss all those TV ads. What will I do without them?

Maybe I'll move up to New Hampshire or as I like to call it now, Little Massachusetts. I'll still need a couple of more jobs to support all those non-taxpayers accepting a tax break, free gasoline and pay their mortgages.

When I'm tired of working, I can sit back, kick up my heels, smoke a joint and raise a few retired greyhounds. Or I could retire to Texas, take my Massachusetts pension, buy a cheap house, forget about winter and pretend it's 1955 again.

Rescuing The Mother Of The Bride

Thank you, Thank you, Thank you to Fashion Quality Cleaners, 67 Billings Road, North Quincy.

Just as I was to leave for my daughters New Hampshire wedding I noticed some kind of stain all over the satin 'Mother of the Bride' dress that I was to wear within hours. I was not sure whether it was body lotion, hair conditioner or something else. Full of despair and stress, I went to Fashion Quality cleaners and they dry-cleaned my dry-cleaned my dress immediately attempting to remove the stains.

They called to tell me the stains didn't come out but they could try to wet clean it. That would take a couple more hours because it would need to air dry before it could be pressed. As I waited for the second and last chance for wearing a clean dress, I decided to go to the 4 o'clock Mass at Sacred Heart. Leaving church I turned on my cell phone and there was the message that the stains were out and to come and get the dress! I was so excited I went to leave without paying and then turned around to pay them. Mr. Lio said to me, "No, you go and have a good wedding day and consider it a gift from God!" He had worked on cleaning my dress all afternoon and did it for me free. I can't thank him enough!

There is the big advantage and difference in going to a locally family owned dry cleaners with onsite cleaning services as opposed to a chain or other cleaners where the clothing is sent out. They are there for you when you most need them.

Thanks to them I was NOT the Mother of the Bride in the stained dress!

God Bless the Lio Family.

Quincy Youths Tour the World Singing

Mark J. Hogan, Eric R. Jaukkuri and Joseph A. Principato of Quincy, students at Boston College High School, and their fellow Concert Choir members are no strangers to travel.

In the past two years, the group has visited and sung in Vermont, Prague, Ireland, and a Christmas concert at the White House. This past April, they continued their travels by taking yet another journey, a nine-day multi-city concert tour of Russia.

Under the direction of Dr. Marina Rozenberg of Quincy, herself a native of Moscow, the choir expanded its repertoire to include Russian folk songs and hymns, and even a song in the indigenous Russian language of Tatar.

The three young men and the choir made their way first to the town of Sergiev Posad, to sing a friendship concert with local musicians and students. In what was to become a recurring theme, the hosts rolled out the red carpet, interviewing them on local television stations, and putting their picture in local newspapers.

Returning to Moscow, the choir toured the Kremlin and Red Square, as well as the massive WWII Memorial, which commemorated the Red Army's defeat of the invading Nazis. Before leaving the city, they toured the US Embassy, and met with the US Ambassador to Russia, William Burns.

That night, the choir traveled by overnight train to Kazan, capital of the Republic of Tartarstan in central Russia. Over the next few days, they toured the city and prepared for the biggest concert of their existence: center stage at the Kazan State University International Choir Festival. There, the 18-member BC High concert choir would sing in the same venue as 80-member choirs from Moscow and Kazan.

Following Dr. Rozenberg's steady hand, the choir, accompanied as always by faculty basses Gene Holmes '72 and Jeff Toto '99, rose to the occasion, giving its best performance to date, singing hymns and love songs, spirituals and folk songs. Leaving the stage to thunderous applause from the crowd of music professors and professional musicians, the "little choir from Boston" gave interviews to more local reporters, and recorded an interview for the national broadcast network of Russia that was beamed across the country.

In the days that followed, the concert choir sang the Mass at the only Catholic chapel in Kazan, performed a friendship concert at an English-speaking high school, and toured the Russian Orthodox Raiphsky Monastery in Lavra, singing Russian hymns for the Bishop of Lavra himself.

In June, they represented the state of Massachusetts at the National Anthem Project in Washington, DC. Dr. Rozenberg with the choir will close their 2008 itinerary with a trip to Italy to sing at the Vatican for Mass at St. Peter's Basilica on November 28.

Mayor's Decision Awaited On High Rise Density

Mayor Thomas Koch has not yet announced his decision on a zoning change which would allow high-rise density for developments in Business C districts.

The zoning change was approved by City Council on Nov. 10 by a 6-3 vote.

In order to be official, Koch must sign off on all zoning changes.

The change would affect Business C parcels in such areas as North Quincy, Wollaston, Marina Bay, and on Adams Street, Quincy.

Opponents, Ward 5 Councillors Douglas Gutro of Ward 5, Dan Raymondi, Ward 2, and Brian McNamee, Ward 6 charged the change would adversely affect the city's neighborhoods, particularly in their wards.

The issue has been considered several times since last December after a motion by Councillor Michael McFarland.

Dozens of residents from the Marina Bay area opposed the measure which could allow an 80-unit development abutting Marina Bay and The Moorings.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said the issue was not only about excessive development near Marina Bay but, also, "much more" throughout the city.

McNamee and his constituents opposed the change because it could allow a high-rise development of 80 units, rather than 25, on a lot near Marina Bay.

Marina Bay residents have been litigating the issue in court for nearly four years and the judge in Land Court asked to be updated on the council's decision.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, also, opposed the zoning change as did Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro whose district includes a large Business C parcel on Adams Street.

Gutro has repeatedly warned that a dense high-rise development would negatively shadow the Adams Historical site and impact the neighborhood known as Hospital Hill

The largest parcels of undeveloped Business C zoning are in Kevin Coughlin's Ward 3 district on Newport Avenue and off Squantum Street.

Coughlin said he'd like to see several neglected areas developed.

Councillor Michael McFarland proposed the change last December and resubmitted it this year.

Councillors discussed the proposal at least five meetings before Monday's final vote.

North Quincy Supermarket Hearing Continues Nov. 24

City Council will continue a public hearing on a proposed supermarket on Hayward Street Monday, Nov. 24, at 7 p.m. in North

The supermarket planned at the site of the former Boston Gear Works would specialize in Asian foods, according to Attorney Chris Harrington who represents

C-Mart.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro and Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee held several meetings in recent months regarding the proposal.

At those meetings, opponents voiced fears regarding heavier traffic on the main road, Hancock Street.

"We think there's absolutely a need (for an Asian supermarket)," said Harrington who believes the Asian population in North Quincy is probably 30 to 40 percent.

Harrington said that the proposed supermarket would be, roughly, half the size of the Hannafords Supermarket on Hancock Street and a quarter of the size of the Super Stop & Shop on Newport Avenue. Quincy High School auditorium.

In efforts to accommodate critics, Harrington said that C Mart has dropped plans for a restaurant and food court and, also, supports an additional traffic signal at Hayward Street.

The new traffic signal would be synchronized with the signal lights at the Hancock Street entrance to Hannaford's Supermarket and at Billings Street.

Harrington, also, said that C-Mart has offered to allow Quincy Medical Center to use a portion of the property rent-free for three years for a neighborhood clinic.

Under the plan, the Medical Center would use the area originally planned for a restaurant for clinic.

Harrington believes there have been "huge misconceptions" about the proposal which has drawn hundreds to neighborhood and City Council meetings since September.

Harrington also said that supermarket proponents outnumbered opponents at City Council hearing with as many as 400 persons favoring the proposal and 100 opposing it.

The formal proposal includes a 23,000 sq. ft. supermarket with 91 parking spaces.

Plans for the project may be reviewed at City Hall during business hours.

fic, pedestrian congestion or high incidents of crime.

In addition to two officers assigned to the Quincy Center area, every ward in the city has a community Officer assigned specifically to that area.

"The intention of the Community Police Unit is to monitor areas of the city in which they are assigned, interacting with residents and business owners, keeping visible to deter crime and acting as a liaison between the community and the police department," said Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan.

"These officers get to know the many faces in our community, and in several cases, they are able to assist in identifying potential suspects who they've seen while patrolling in their sector of the city. Not only is this a huge benefit for the City of Quincy and our department, but to the Officers, who keep fit and healthy by utilizing bicycles as a means of patrol," Keenan added.

Anderson Bicycle of Quincy provided the Fuji brand specialized Police bicycles and maintains them for the Police Department. Paul Anderson, the owner, recently donated a bicycle rack to the department.

Council's Public Hearing On Tax Rate Dec. 1

The preliminary real estate tax rate will likely be announced Monday, Dec. 1, at 6:30 p.m. when the City Council has scheduled a public hearing on the city's 2009 tax classification.

Mayor Thomas Koch and his administrative team will prepare the recommendations which must be approved by the council and will determine next year's real estate tax rate.

The tax rate will then be approved by the state Department of Revenue.

Tax bills should all be in the mail by the end of December, according to Chief Assessor Marion Fantucchio who warned that all requests for abatement must be filed in her office by Feb. 1 or must have a Feb. 1 or earlier postmark.

No one has estimated the new tax rate, but, on Monday, councillors discussed what several called the "dire" state of finances and the possibility that state aid to cities and towns could be drastically reduced.

city is expecting a $4 to $5 million budget break due to reduced costs of employee and retirees' health insurance, but that can only help so much.

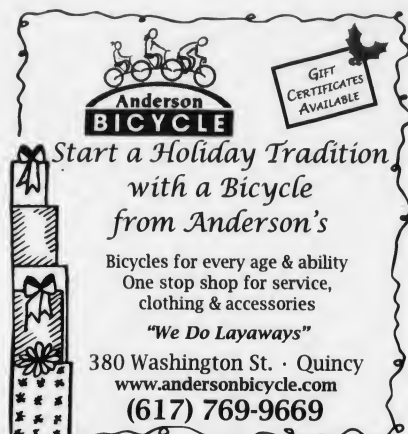

Currently, real estate values are going down, according to Fantucchio who told councillors Monday that "Generally, speaking, values have all gone down."

ues have not gone "to the extremes" of other communities or other states.

Fantucchio said that homeowners will be able to access updated real estate values on the city's website within weeks. When real values go down, tax rates must increase.

passed an ordinance submitted by Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro which could aid as many as 800 senior citizens.

Another proposal submitted by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin would help families with active members of the Armed Forces.

Call 617-376-1959 To Report Graffiti

Public Works Commissioner Larry Prendeville has set up a telephone hotline for citizens to report graffiti to his office.

Residents may call 617-376-1959 and leave information as to the date and location of graffiti and Prendeville has promised a speedy response.

Reports are forwarded to individuals, utility companies or city departments for action. The police document and investigate serious instances of such vandalism.

Markings on city property are removed with a specialized city-owned machine or painted over.

Prendeville said that Post Office officials have "been very responsive" to reports of property damage and vandalized mailboxes and have pledged to continue.

However, graffiti is a never-ending struggle and he said that the DPW will continue working with the police department, the T, and the schools, according to Prendeville who said the public's cooperation is essential.

Prendeville said graffiti is photographed and documented and officials keep records and photographs in efforts to track down serial taggers who travel from place to place leaving a specific marks.

South Coastal Bank Employees Participate In Habitat For Humanity Team Build Day

South Coastal Bank employees recently spent the day helping South Shore Habitat for Humanity build a home in Hingham.

Volunteers from the Bank previously helped construct Habitat houses in Braintree, Marshfield, Duxbury and Scituate.

During this year's Habitat Team Build Day, the South Coastal Bank crew worked on a two-story dwelling being built for Amanda Ellis, Marc Van Patten-Steiger and their daughters Samantha and Madison. The house is South Shore Habitat's third one in Hingham.

The volunteers from South Coastal Bank included Paula Clough, assistant vice president and loan operations manager; Adam Conrad, Scituate assistant branch manager; Tricia Dandrow, vice president and commercial lending officer; John Duggan, teller; Susan Lincoln, executive vice president and director of retail banking; Kirk Small, vice president, area sales and business development manager; Daniel Taylor, vice president, area sales and business development manager; Lucille Wear, Braintree assistant branch manager; and Fran Wong, marketing and public relations officer.

In addition to donating employees for the Hingham build, South Coastal Bank made a $1,000 contribution to South Shore Habitat for Humanity.

Accused Church Thief Pleads Innocent To Robbery

A 44-year-old Everett man, who police say specializes in church robberies, has pleaded innocent to charges of stealing a wallet and assaulting a woman outside Covenant Congregational Church on Whitwell Street.

Leon Hatfield, who was arrested by Boston police on outstanding warrants on Oct. 3 and sent to Bridgewater State Hospital for psychiatric evaluation was ordered held in $25,000 bail for hearing Dec. 9.

Judge Mary Orfanello in Quincy District Court ordered him to stay away from the Covenant Congregational Church and the Seventh Day Adventist Church in Braintree where he is suspected of stealing a woman's purse.

Quincy police allege that he is the same man who made off with the keys to the Rev. Mary Louise Gifford's car while the minister of the Wollaston Congregational Church was preaching on the Ten Commandments.

"Earlier, Hatfield appeared in Dorchester District Court to face charges of driving with a suspended license and failure to stop or yield for a police officer and was released in $500 bail.

In the Whitwell Street robbery, he was accused of stealing the wallet from a purse (unarmed robbery) and elbowing a woman out of the way when she tried to stop him (assault and battery).

He is a person of interest in at least eight church thefts in Quincy and others in Braintree, Weymouth, Cohasset and Milton.

Reverse Mortgage Explained

Mikayla's 'Lock Of Love' In Memory Of Her Aunt

Six-year-old Mikayla Kennedy recently got a haircut after two years without even a trim.

That neat, bouncy haircut made a lot of people happy.

Mikayla's brother Alex, 7, thinks his little sister new do is "cool," but he knows the haircut is very special for many reasons.

His sister's hair will help someone, somewhere who has not hair.

Mikayla began growing her hair two years ago for a very special reason--- to honor the aunt she never knew and the aunt for whom she was named.

If her hair grew long enough, Mikayla knew it could be cut for a wig just like the wig that her late aunt, Michelle Kennedy, was given so many years ago.

Her aunt's wig was made of real hair donated by people of ages and the wig concealed her baldness, the side effect of her chemotherapy treatments.

Over the past two years, Mikayla's chestnut blonde hair grew long enough for a ten-inch donation of thick healthy hair earlier this month to "Locks of Love."

"Locks of Love" provides real hair wigs for cancer patients who have lost their hair due to chemotherapy treatments.

MIKAYLA KENNEDY'S golden hair, 10 inches long, thick and shiny, will be donated to the "Locks of Love" wig project in honor of her late aunt, Michelle Kennedy, who died in 1994.

Unfortunately, Mikayla never met her aunt, Michelle Kennedy who died in 1994. Mikayla's parents, Sue and Scott Kennedy, say she has the same vibrant spirit.

Mikayla, a kindergarten student at the Montclair School, has a seven-year-old brother, Alex. Her grandparents are Jim and Vikki Anderson of Quincy, Lee Kennedy of Norwood and Michael Kennedy of New Hampshire.

Davis Requests Improvements To I93 Traffic At Furnace Brook Parkway

Ward 4 Councilor Jay Davis has asked the Council's Public Work's Committee to set up a hearing to investigate traffic improvements at the Interstate 93 Southbound exit at Furnace Brook Parkway.

The traffic exiting the highway significantly impacts the local traffic on Willard Street, Furnace Brook Parkway and neighborhood side streets.

Davis said he expects representatives from the City's Traffic Department and Mass Highway to be present at the committee to hear neighbor's concerns and discuss possible remedies. Davis has also contacted Governor Deval Patrick, Lt. Governor Tim Murray and members of the City's State House Legislative delegation asking for their support.

Davis said rush hour traffic exiting Interstate 93 does not slow down as it passes Ricciuti Drive and enters the Furnace Brook Rotary. In turn, this directly impacts the ability of West Quincy residents to travel neighborhood streets.

"During the last few months I have been meeting with West Quincy residents including those who live on Ricciuti Drive, Willard Street, Furnace Brook Parkway, Beverly Court, Malden Street, and Douglas Street," Davis said. "The area of the Furnace Brook off-ramp is dangerous and needs attention."

Davis said he envisioned a stop sign or traffic signal at the end of the ramp, similar to the stop sign that exists at Exit 6 off of Route 3 Southbound. "I have been encouraged by the cooperative efforts of the State and City officials to work with West Quincy Residents to address this problem," Davis said.

The date of the committee hearing, which is open to the public, will be scheduled in December. For more information on this project neighbors are encouraged to contact Councilor Davis at 617-834-3945 or jdavis@ci.quincy.ma.us.

Adams Academy Topic For Historical Society Nov. 20

The heritage of Adams Academy, home of the Quincy Historical Society, will be the subject of a program presented by Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, executive director of the QHS, Thursday, Nov. 20, at 7 p.m.

The free program will mark a century since the Adams Academy closed as a school after nearly a half century preparing boys for life with an education of a class with Andover and Exeter.

Dr. Fitzgerald will discuss John Adams' decision to endow the school and how that decision reflected Adams's ideas about education, his native town and the nation he helped to found.

He will also note the creation of the academy in the years after the Civil War, the achievements of the school and the enduring architectural contribution the building makes to the city's streetscape.

QHS President James Edwards, a architect himself, will speak on the major projects that are currently underway, with the help of the city and the state, to preserve the academy building for future generations.

Note that the 7 p.m. starting time is a half hour earlier than most of the Historical Society's programs.

Council In Tribute To Deputy Joseph Jackson

City Councillors dedicated Monday's City Council meeting to Joseph C. Jackson, the retired Fire Department deputy chief who died Friday at his home in Middleboro, as requested by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond.

Raymond eulogized Jackson, calling him a true role model and "the gold standard" among men. He cited Jackson's ethics in all aspects of his life as an example for all to follow, particularly public figures.

Councillors noted, with sadness, that Jackson's wake was being held at the same time as this week's meeting.

The following morning, hundreds of firefighters attended Jackson's funeral services Tuesday at St. Agatha Church, Milton, and the flags throughout the city were flown at half-staff in his honor.

Jackson served as a Marine during World War II, joined the fire department in 1950 and retired after 42 years of services.

A complete obituary notice is on page 30.

EDAN: 'End Drug Addiction Now'

His Battle Against Drug Abuse Started As A Nightmare

By TOM HENSHAW

The nightmare began for Dale Freeman eight years ago when his 18-year-old daughter, Danielle, broke her coccyx (tail bone) and a doctor prescribed the drug Oxycontin to kill the pain.

Everything went downhill after that.

"Our lives have been sheer hell," said Freeman. "She has been in and out of drug treatment centers and mental hospitals. She has attempted suicide. Her addiction degenerated into using heroin."

Freeman had his daughter arrested for stealing checks from the family business. She was given a choice of two years in jail or drug court. She picked drug court and is now in rehabilitation.

"If you do the crime," said Freeman, "you do the time. She is on the right track now."

"But I worry about my two sons who are 14 and 11 years old. I am aware of serious drug problems here in Quincy. It was reported that we are 60 per cent above the state average for narcotic overdoses."

He joined Families Anonymous, an organization formed to support families and friends of alcohol and drug addicts, but it was not enough for the relentless Freeman.

The result was EDAN (End Drug Abuse Now), an organization designed "to create a safe, drug-free community through outreach, training and support," now a keystone in Mayor Tom Koch's fight on drugs.

"When I discovered my daughter's addiction," said Freeman, "I didn't know where to turn. We just don't understand addiction. We think it only happens in the ghetto. Not so. It happens everywhere."

"I got angry. The drug dealers are running around with impunity. The cops' hands are tied. No one talks to them about it. They are afraid to get involved."

One message delivered by EDAN via community awareness meetings, information booths, fliers, mailings and word of mouth is this: Do what you can to aid police by dropping a dime on illegal activities.

"If you think drug addiction is a personal problem, you're wrong," said Freeman. "The impact on society is terrific. When the police, firemen, ambulances, trial and jail time are involved, one addict can cost a million dollars."

"The average cost of a recovery center is $80,000."

EDAN approached then-Mayor William Phelan about a possible drug problem in Quincy, said Freeman, "but he denied there was one." Koch, for whom drugs in the city played a major role in his campaign, was receptive.

Freeman, Nancy Holler and Kathy Deady, all members of EDAN, are also on Koch's Drug Task Force.

Right now, EDAN is working with the Quincy Police Narcotics Division, helping them acquire two drug-sniffing dogs and providing an anonymous avenue for residents to notify police of illegal drug activities going down.

They also assist parents and addicts find beds for the addicts in crisis from a data base list of more than 100 detox centers, rehabs and halfway houses.

Members of EDAN are trained to teach drug awareness in Quincy schools, targeting different age groups, teaching them how to resist peer pressure and avoid the stigma of snitching.

The group also has been recruited to help acquire 1,500 square feet of industrial space to house a 60-bed Oxycontin and heroin addiction detox center. The prospective owner has a $1.2 million budget for the purchase or lease.

Eventually, Freeman and EDAN would like to do something about those addicts who come out of rehab and relapse into their old ways. Their goals are high.

"A lot of the kids have dropped out of high school," he said. "If you don't have a high school education, you can't get a good job. They're depressed. Pretty soon they are back to the old habits, back to using drugs."

Freeman's ideal is the Delaney Street Program, begun in San Francisco 37 years ago by Dr. Mimi Silbert, a onetime Quincy resident, which is run by and for recovering substance abusers, ex-convicts "and others who have hit bottom."

Starting with a trucking company, Delaney Street now owns a Christmas ornament company and a restaurant and is 70 per cent self-supporting. Clients sign up for two years; most stay nearly four.

"They learn skills," said Freeman. "Those who lack social skills have to talk to people. After Delaney Street, they're ready to work outside. These people are not trash. We've got to save them."

Volunteers Sought For Norfolk County RSVP

The Norfolk County RSVP Volunteer Program is conducting a countywide survey to identify needs for volunteer services in each community.

Non-profit community organizations which utilize, or wish to utilize, volunteers in their work are encouraged to contact Norfolk County RSVP with information about the organization, population served and services needed.

"We are here to serve all age groups throughout the county. From pre-school children to aging seniors," said Francis O'Brien, chairman of the county commissioners.

"But very often, community organization in need become so busy they don't have the time or the staff to recruit additional volunteers; our office can help recruit potential volunteers."

RSVP helps recruit and place volunteers 55 years and older in programs such as reading tutors, emergency preparedness and other identified community needs.

To become an RSVP volunteer, contact Elizabeth Larkin at 781-329-5728.

Wollaston Garden Club Honors Businesses For Beautification

The Wollaston Garden Club recently honored eight local businesses for outstanding civic beautification efforts at their business sites, while club members and friends cleaned, pruned and beautified public and historic sites in preparation for winter.

Committee Chair Jo Costello said the eight businesses have set a high standard for civic beautification in Quincy and raised the goals for all businesses throughout the city.

Beautification in business areas has long been a particular interest to Garden Club members who hope to inspire others to improve the visual impact at their shops and office buildings.

"Too many Quincy businesses lack visual harmony and simplicity by overloading their windows with signage of various fonts and colors," said Pat Artis, president.

ident.

Artis said that, too often, there is trash on the sidewalks in business areas and owners fail to add natural materials, such as perennial plants and shrubs.

The Club's 2008 Award-Winning Business are as follows:

- Century 21 Annex, design, choice of plant materials and side plot
- Common Market, seasonal plantings and window boxes
- Fox & Hound, landscape design and interesting plant materials
- Hancock Tavern, lush window boxes, cleanliness and maintenance of busy sidewalk
- Great Chow, simple harmony and ever-present orchids in the windows
- Keohane Funeral Home, their business site and care of Fenno and

Hancock Street intersection

- The Fours, seasonal plant displays and excellent maintenance
- Shabu, new, modern and zen-like landscaping

The businesses were chosen from sixteen nominees judged for over-all aesthetics, harmony, simplicity, cleanliness and maintenance as well as the use of perennial plant materials.

Beautification committee members are Artis, Costello, Kay Borek, Valarie Roe-Burrows, Jan Clifford, Ruth Griffin, Janet Lynch and Leah Shea.

Members from Historic New England Volunteers and community volunteers, also, worked with garden club members and community volunteers at the Josiah Quincy House during a morning of pruning the ground shrubs recently.

Thanking Those Who Came Before Us

Years ago while still within my school years, I'd frequently return home hearing the laughter of houseguests within our dining room. There'd be Herbie Rourke, Bill Barron, Joe Jackson and their wives socializing with my own parents, as they would frequently do in those days. The three men mentioned here were deputy chiefs on the job back then.

Entering the home I'd pass by the room to share hellos, knowing that I'd have to walk the gauntlet of fire department humor as a did so. Too young, and not on the fire department at that time, that was a daunting task, and a relief to have met it when completed.

Years later, after my own father retired, these were the deputies I worked with then. While I'd be rehearsing and practicing the basic firefighter skills, these were the gentlemen who earned their ranks, and demonstrated the composure at a fire scene that one only earns through time and experience. These were the gentlemen you'd look at with confidence, responding to their direction while acting in full trust of their judgment. We were never left disappointed by them.

Through the likes of them and my own father, you knew what commitment meant through their example. You learned through them the importance of conveying confidence to the public under the stress of an emergency setting and the importance of bringing a sense of control during an otherwise frantic scene. By their actions, you came to understand that the example you show as a firefighter, not only affects the public's perception of you and other firefighters, but also reflects upon those who came before you, and those who will come after you retire.

From these gentlemen and their example, you learned the importance of giving the best you have to give, while honoring the pledge you made when you first came on the job.

Retired Deputy Chief Joe Jackson just passed away recently. A good friend of my father for years, he is another connection to the past that has moved on as well. I was always grateful to bump into him and others while they'd relate some story of my own father who passed some 12 years earlier. The acknowledgement would somehow bring the past into the light of the present with a resulting smile as if my father was somehow still among us for that moment.

I am therefore writing to convey how grateful I truly am to retired Deputy Chiefs Joe Jackson, Herbie Rourke, Bill Barron and my own father, Captain Lyons, for laying a foundation of commitment for me and others who have been impacted by their example. I for one consider myself fortunate to have gained from their tutelage, but where do you search for example, if the best in those who have come before us is lost?

Joe Jackson gave this City the best he had to give while setting the finest example for those who knew him and still remain. While the burden now rests with those of us left behind, it will be a daunting task to run the course and meet the standards set before us by Joe and others. At the same time, it has been an honor to learn from their example.

It is now our responsibility to bring their past into the light of the present as well, sharing that example. I am grateful to them for what they have given us.

FOOT NOTES

Diplomat, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomat, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

TOENAILS THAT HURT

An ingrown toenail is a condition in which the corner or side of a toenail grows into the soft flesh of that toe. The result is pain, redness, swelling, and sometimes infection. An ingrown toenail usually affects the big toe. If the pain is severe or spreading, the podiatrist can take steps to relieve the discomfort and help avoid complications. If the toe is infected, the doctor may recommend using topical or oral antibiotics for treatment. Common causes of an ingrown toenail may include wearing shoes that crowd the toenails, cutting the toenails too short, and an injury to the nail. Left untreated, an ingrown toenail can infect the underlying bone and lead to a serious bone infection. Ingrown toenails often occur from improper trimming, but poor foot structure, heredity, injury, and infection can be contributing factors. Whatever is causing your feet to hurt, we'd like you to know there is experienced, dedicated, professional foot care available here in the Quincy area. We offer foot care for the family in an atmosphere of calm, compassionate concern. Our office is located at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Call 781-986-3668 for appointment. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

P.S. Diabetics are at greater risk of complications from an ingrown toenail.

When 'Trash' Is Still Useful

By CHERIE DEWAR

It is astonishing to see numerous useful items set curbside for trash pickup around Quincy. It is a shame to see these items disposed of when they could still be useful to someone else. Giving these items to charity is a form of recycling. It can be tough to find the time to have a garage sale or to haul useable materials to Goodwill, so here are two less time-consuming options where pickup service comes to you!

Vietnam Veterans of America: If you don't want your discards cluttering your house long after you have sorted them out, this organization has weekly pickup dates you can choose from, and pickup is rain or shine. They have a wide net of items they accept which include stereos, TVs, all bedding, clothes, shoes, toys, tools, small furniture and rugs, etc. They do not accept large furniture or upholstered leather or vinyl items (see below for another option).

To schedule a pickup go to www.clothingdonations.org or call 800-775-VETS (8387). Be sure to mark your items with a "VVA." This organization assists veterans from the Vietnam War era.

Big Brother, Big Sister: Their motto says it all: Clean Up Clutter for a Good Cause. This organization's mission statement is to help children reach their potential through professionally supported, one-to-one relationships with mentors.

Scheduling a pickup is easy! They often send postcards to local residents stating the date they'll be in your area, which is every seven weeks, but even if you don't have a postcard, someone can contact you with a pickup date. To sign up, go to www.bbbsfoundation.org and click "Schedule a Pickup," or call 800-483-5503. Simply mark the items with a note saying "BBBS."

Large furniture like couches, tables, and entertainment centers are accepted by this group, arranged through a special pickup by emailing donate@bbbsfoundation.org or calling 774-776-7200. Some items they will not accept are large children's outdoor toys, encyclopedias, textbooks or magazines, skis and exercise equipment, cribs, mattresses, bed pillow or sofa beds. Plan ahead as pickup for furniture may have a two-month waiting period.

Goodwill: Goodwill at 625 Southern Artery in Quincy, 617-745-4144, accepts a wide range of items at their attended drop off door at the back of the building. They do accept furniture (except sofa beds, mattresses or baby furniture). Sports equipment, toys, clothing, dishes, working radios and TVs, books and much more are accepted. See their website for details: www.goodwillmass.org.

Got Books?: Books, CDs, DVDs, audio books and videos can always enrich someone else's life and are easily kept from the waste stream with Got Books? They provide free pickup from your house-go to www.gotbooks.com or call 978-327-7600 to schedule a pickup. They accept anything in basic functional condition, even textbooks, but not encyclopedias, magazines, newspapers, and catalogues but these items are recyclable in your blue containers through Capitol Waste.

Books for Troops and Books for Teachers are two programs that receive items from this organization.

Engaging in charitable giving keeps useful items out of our landfills, saves the city disposal fees and helps fund the organizations you give to. An added bonus is that the estimated value of your donated items to Big Brother/Big Sister and the Vietnam Veterans of America is tax deductible!

Friendly Visitors Sought At COA

The Quincy Council on Aging is seeking volunteers to call on the elderly who live alone and would welcome a friendly visitor.

The COA is also seeking seniors who live alone and would like a friendly visit themselves.

Call the COA at 617-376-1508 and ask to speak with Lena Trough, the friendly visitor coordinator.

The Council is mandated by law to do background checks on all volunteers.

ABIGAIL'S CAIRN SHIPSHAPE. Six months after Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi urged repairs for the century-old landmark, the cairn at Franklin and Viden St. has been totally rebuilt with an opening (on the right) for a 2008 time capsule. Mayor Thomas Koch and the Quincy Historical Society plan to install an updated capsule in the cairn at a later date.

Dollars and sense

by David Uffington

Squeeze Every Dollar Out of Home Budget

Stretching every dollar in the family budget isn't enough now. Finding spare change, a few cents at a time, among the household expenses has become a necessity for many folks.

Here are some ways to find that spare change in the kitchen:

- Look for recipes that allow you to add less-costly ingredients to stretch meals further. Oatmeal flakes, for example, can be added to hamburger to make a meatloaf. Use leftovers or rice to stretch soups into an additional serving or two.

- If the menus at home have become a bit slim, reverse the day — give the kids grilled cheese sandwiches for breakfast and eggs for dinner.

- Check grocery-store sales flyers, and use coupons when planning your weekly menus. Don't let the coupons lead to impulse buying, however.

- When you find a good food bargain, make meals ahead and freeze them. Having a freezer full of meals will help avoid the temptation to eat out or buy convenience food when you're short on time or energy. Be sure to package the meals well and label with the contents and date prepared.

- Use up leftovers. Search for Internet food sites that you list the ingredients you have on hand and then provide you with a recipe using those ingredients. Learn how to freeze vegetables or fruit before they go bad, or make casseroles, or bake bread.

- Learn new ways to stretch common ingredients or make substitutions to use what you do have.

Not all of your savings are to be found in the kitchen.

Check the Internet for ways to create products you need out of inexpensive ingredients. Drain cleaner, laundry soap, oven cleaner, hand soap, window cleaner, bath and shower products, fabric softener and bath and tile cleaners can all be made with a few simple ingredients. Many of them consist of varying amounts of vinegar, baking powder and an inexpensive dishwashing detergent.

Give up as many paper products as you can. Paper towels, diapers and dinner napkins all have cloth alternatives.

Before you buy at all, sign up on sites such as Free Cycle [freecycle.net] to give away what you no longer need and ask for what you do. Check the Free section on Craig's List for your area [craigslist.org] for items being given away.

Remodeling Hints For A Tough Real Estate Market

(ARA) - If you're selling your home, you're not just competing against the house down the street anymore. You're mixing it up with desperate new-home builders with pockets deeper than yours, banks willing to sell foreclosed homes at a loss, and buyers who know that sellers are at a disadvantage. You definitely need an edge.

Remodeling remains one of the best ways to set your home ahead of the competition. Upgrades to outdoor areas that expand the living space and add curb appeal can help sell your home faster and for a better price. Homeowners seeking to improve their living spaces are not making the traditionally popular - yet costly - upgrades to kitchens and baths. Instead, they are adding to the curb appeal with outdoor structures or landscaping if they are planning to sell.

But did you know that using high-quality materials throughout your home can also improve value and salability? Homeowners need to make the whole package appealing, which means it has to be long-lasting, low-maintenance and visually attractive.

"Cheaper materials may save money at the outset of a renovation project, but in the long run they reduce the potential value of a home," says Richard White, an architect who specializes in custom homes.

In fact, in homes that increased in value by at least 100 percent, owners spent 2.5 times more on improvements than in homes where the value increased by less than 50 percent, according to a study by Harvard University's Joint Center for Housing Studies.

White offers the following insight into using high-quality materials to enhance the value of your home:

Choose timeless, not trendy. Often, trendy building materials can't compete with traditionally popular ones for staying power and durability. Choosing traditionally popular materials for your renovation can help ensure your house is appealing to a wide range of buyers through years of evolving fads.

"People trust building materials they know," White says. "If I grew up in a home with Western red cedar siding, I know the qualities of the wood and what it will do for my home."

Long a traditional favorite, Western red cedar has a number of qualities that make it a preferred, quality material for decking, siding, and the increasingly popular outdoor living spaces that can enhance a home's value, White says. Natural preservatives in the wood make it very durable for outdoor uses, even in more severe climates, according to Web site realcedar.org. Its texture and coloration give it a rich, natural beauty that enhances interiors as well, in features such as interior paneling, vaulted ceilings, trim and boxed-in beams.

One trend worth tapping, however, is the movement towards more eco-friendly homes. Many buyers are looking for homes that incorporate recycled materials or new ones drawn from renewable sources, energy-efficient design and a minimal carbon footprint. When choosing products for your remodeling project, consider the steps the product took to reach your home.

Curb appeal projects can be as simple as sprucing up the landscaping with a Western red cedar arbor, trellises, or adding a wood fence to increase privacy; or they can take the form of a pergola or even a gazebo or deck to expand the outdoor living space. From the smallest project to the grandest, Western red cedar's versatility can add beauty to the outside of a home.

Synthetic materials such as vinyl and plastic are manufactured with non-renewable materials. Minerals making up cement, stucco and metal are mined from the earth and not replaced.

Woods such as pine, fir, and Western red cedar are renewable resources, grown and harvested sustainably. The environmental costs of wood production are also much less than mineral or synthetic materials. Production of concrete requires 70 percent more energy than wood building products and releases 67 percent more pollution into the air.

"Wood has a lower environmental impact throughout its life cycle than other building materials" says Paul Mackie of the Western Red Cedar Lumber Association.

Even if you have no immediate plans to sell, and are remodeling to improve your enjoyment of your home, remember that someday you may want - or need - to compete for buyers in a tight market.

Staging Your Home For A Quicker Sale

(NU) - Foreclosures and high maintenance costs mean that new homes go up for sale faster than you can say "down market." And what is great for buyers - more homes to choose from - means that sellers need to distinguish their properties from the rest of the crowd.

Home staging, or temporarily redesigning a home to appeal to buyers, can give homeowners an edge in an overcrowded market. Staged homes look bigger, newer and warmer. They invite buyers to see themselves living in the home.

Staging projects include inexpensive tasks, from rearranging furniture, to renting contemporary living room sets. Here are some tips for staging homes:

- Declutter. When buyers see overcrowded bookshelves and wrinkled towels, they focus more on the dingy details than the architecture. But staging means more than a thorough cleaning: sellers should also remove personal items, like family photographs. Buyers should picture their families living in the home, not yours.

- Make things look new. A little paint can go a long way. Light colors make rooms look larger and brighter, so use them to make your home appear spacious. Wooden floors and cabinetry make big impressions, so make sure that they shine. If any wood looks dry or dirty, apply an orange oil for a quick restoration job. Touch of Oranges Cleaner and Restorer hides small scratches and removes build-up, fingerprints and grease from cabinetry, wood floors and fixtures.

Hard water stains on glass shower doors and windows look unattractive, so remove them with a specialized product like Bring It On Cleaner, which uses oxygen bleach to clean minerals from glass and tile.

- Add small details. In the kitchen, bowls filled with fresh fruit create an attractive, colorful eyepiece. Place vases filled with fresh flowers in the bedrooms and dining room. Put candles in the bathroom. Small touches make homes feel more inviting.

Great Outdoor Lighting Brightens The Season for Holiday Guests

(ARA) - From twinkling candles glimpsed through a window to trees and shrubs decked in brightly colored strands, light can be the warmest welcome for your guests during the holidays. And if you've been thinking about enhancing the lighting above and around your front porch or door, the holidays are a great time to put that thought into action.

"People spend more time than ever before in the outdoor spaces of their homes," says Rick Seidman, president and chief executive officer of Quoizel Inc. of Goose Creek, S.C. "The front and back entry areas have become living spaces frequented by friends and family. This has led to consumers wanting to decorate and light these areas with the same importance as the inside of their home."

Attractive exterior lighting not only enhances your enjoyment of your home, it adds curb appeal and value, and can welcome guests with a feeling of warmth and security all year round. Good lighting is especially important during the holidays, when more guests will be coming to your door, the experts agree.

Homeowners thinking about upgrading their exterior lighting should keep some basics in mind, including scale, style, visibility and planning.

"Frequently, you see homes with outdoor lanterns that aren't large enough for the home or the area it's lighting," says Rick Wiedemer, Jr., certified lighting consultant and president of Hinkley Lighting in Cleveland. "When choosing a lantern to hang above your door, consider viewing your home's entry from the curb or coming up the driveway as a guest would."

A good rule of thumb for choosing a right-sized lantern is to pick one that is at least a third the size of the door, says Mark Rottner, president of Artistic Lighting and Designs in Norcross, Ga. "That means if your door is 7 feet high, your lantern should be 27 to 30 inches long," he says. "If you decide to go with a lantern on either side of the door, then each should be about 25 percent of the door's height."

Appropriately sized lanterns not only provide ample illumination for the area you're trying to light, they also impart elegance to a façade, says Joe Rey-Barreau, education consultant for the American Lighting Association (ALA) and an associate professor at the University of Kentucky's School of Interior Design. "They really are a show of confidence."

The style of the lighting is also important, the experts agree. The style of your outdoor lighting should match both the design of your home's exterior and the lighting design inside the house.

"Lighting should be selected to accentuate the architecture, not detract from the beauty of the structure," says Jeffrey R. Dross, senior product manager with Kichler Lighting in Cleveland. What's more, he adds, "it's important the entryway lighting has a relation with driveway lights, landscape lighting, deck lighting and the rest of the lighting on your home. You want to avoid the 'flea market' approach where all the pieces are different."

If your home is colonial, Victorian, traditional, craftsman or contemporary, be sure to look for lighting that pairs well with the architectural style. For example, if the exterior color palette is warm, then brown or bronze light fixtures may be more appropriate, Dross points out.

Don't be afraid to incorporate some trends into your exterior lighting design. Some hot exterior lighting trends include the addition of crystals to different style fixtures, and - for upscale homes - natural gas lanterns in copper or brass. Layering several types of lighting at an entry is also popular, Wiedemer says. For example, if your door has an overhang, you may place recessed lighting in the overhang, paired with decorative lanterns on either side of the door and path lighting leading up to the door, he says.

"There's more variety than ever in outdoor lighting," Rey-Barreau says. "Pluralism is the trend."

Homeowners looking to temporarily enhance their outdoor lighting for the holidays have a host of options as well. Rottner likes the idea of putting exterior lights on a dimmer to create a warm, comforting mood. Wiedemer recommends adding low-voltage landscape lighting, which is easy to install and can be moved or added on to in the future.

Attractive outdoor lighting can be a great way to welcome your guests at the holidays, the experts agree. "A warm glow by your front door indicates your personality, and the personality of your home," Rottner says.

Cedar or Vinyl Siding?

Q. I have a 31-year-old raised ranch with cedar shake siding. The south side of the house gets all the sun and the shakes are dilapidated. To re-side with vinyl on all sides, the estimated cost is $10,000. Is it advisable to try and replace the shakes only on the one side? Will this reduce its resale value? — Punyada B., Middlebury, Conn.

A. That's a tough call, because siding material is such a personal choice. I know for sure that the damaged and deteriorating siding is affecting the value of your home, and that a quality repair will maintain or raise that value.

My question to you is this: If it will cost $10,000 to sheathe the entire house in vinyl siding, what will it cost to just redo the cedar shakes on the one side? If the cost is less or comparable, then consider going with new cedar shakes.

There are at least an equal number of benefits to cedar. You're maintaining the house, which will maintain its value. Cedar is a "green" choice of material (it's renewable and has less environmental impact), and it lasts just as long as vinyl siding when properly cared for. New cedar will look strikingly different in color from the older shakes on your home, but there are methods to "weather" it so it will blend a bit better. Plus, there are homebuyers who will specifically want all-cedar siding, rather than a mix of siding materials. Learn more about cedar siding by visiting <http://www.cedarbureau.org>.

If you decide to use vinyl siding on that one side, make sure the contractor knows his material and knows how to prevent deterioration at the corners where the vinyl meets the cedar siding on the rest of the house. Certain materials will speed up deterioration of the wood shakes, and colors leaching from the shakes could stain the edges of the siding. A good buffer material will be needed between the two.

If you redo the entire house in vinyl, then read up on the care and maintenance of vinyl siding. While it does need less maintenance than wood siding or shakes, vinyl siding is not repair- or maintenance-free. It must be protected from extreme heat (such as barbecue grills) and corrosive chemicals, and should still be cleaned on a regular basis.

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, Nov. 8, 2008, at approximately 5:25 p.m., Officer Matt Patten responded with several other Quincy Police units to the area of Stop and Shop on the Southern Artery on a report of an unarmed robbery that just occurred.

While enroute, Quincy Police communications informed responding units of the suspect's description who had stolen a woman's wallet and fled on foot towards Roxie's market and the McDonald's restaurant. Upon arrival, Officer Daniel Church was flagged down by a male in the McDonald's restaurant lot, who identified himself as one of the loss prevention officers from Stop and Shop. He told the Officer that he followed the suspect into McDonald's and he was standing in line now.

Officers Church and Patten went inside the restaurant and approached the suspect, who glanced over at them then immediately looked in the opposite direction towards the exit. Fearing the suspect was going to flee the restaurant, the Officers led the suspect over to a secluded area of the restaurant. The suspect then began to resist by pulling away and was guided to the ground and placed in handcuffs. The suspect regained his composure and was advised of his Miranda warnings by Officer Church. As the suspect was lying on the ground, Officer Church conducted a pat frisk of the suspect and located a woman's wallet in his front right pocket and a black case containing a digital camera in his left front pocket.

As the suspect was led out to a Police cruiser, he voluntarily stated, "I took that wallet from the woman's bag. I have a drug problem. I wanted to get high."

The suspect then unfolded the events.

He said he was in Stop and Shop when he spotted a woman shopping with her purse in the child seat of the shopping cart. The purse was open and he could see the wallet, so when the woman looked away, he reached into her purse and removed her wallet, then put it in his pocket and walked away. When asked if he took the camera too, the suspect stated that he did not, but could not provide an explanation as to why he had a camera with him.

Officer Mike Duran interviewed the loss prevention Officer while enroute back to the store to locate the victim. The loss prevention Officer said that he used security cameras to observe the suspect reach into the woman's purse and remove something, then leave the store. The loss prevention Officer exited the security office and explained to the woman what had transpired and advised her to wait the arrival of the Police, then followed the suspect over to McDonald's restaurant.

Officer Duran met with the female victim, who stated that it was her camera that was taken from her purse. Officer Duran found identification in the purse and had the store make an announcement requesting the owner of the purse come to the service desk. Minutes later, this (second) victim appeared.

This woman was unaware she had been victimized, but was sure that she had her wallet in her purse when she entered the store. She could not recall anyone in close proximity to her or her purse while shopping. During the booking process, Officers located the Massachusetts driver's license of the second victim in the suspect's clothing. The stolen property was photographed for evidence and then returned to the victims.

A copy of the security surveillance video clearly showed the suspect reach into the purse, remove an item and quickly walk out the store. This tape was placed into evidence for court purposes. The suspect, a 48-year-old homeless man, was charged with two counts of "Larceny from a Person."

Nice Work!

In this case, both victims provided an opportunity for the thief, but leaving their purses unattended and exposed. By taking an item out of the purse rather than the entire bag, the victims wouldn't catch on until much later, giving the suspect a greater chance to distance himself from the scene of the crime. The suspect in this case didn't even leave the immediate area, helping himself to the McDonald's menu with someone else's cash.

Remember: two important considerations; Do not bring a purse/pocketbook when you go shopping. Other than keys, your license, a credit card and/or cash, nothing else is really needed when shopping. Items stolen in a pocketbook may be credit cards, checkbooks, license and other personal information that will all have to be cancelled or re-issued. This is often the first step a criminal takes to steal another's identity.

Other items may be sentimental and never be replaced. Secondly, leave your pocketbook in the car out of sight. Put it under the seat or in the trunk so that it is in a secure place.

Quincy Snaps 3-Game Skid In Convincing Fashion

By SEAN BRENNAN

A 26-6 thrashing of Randolph High School last Friday afternoon at Veterans Memorial Stadium puts the Quincy Presidents (4-6 overall, 2-4 in the Patriot league) in a position to end the 2008 season on a two-game winning streak. Quincy concludes its year with the annual Thanksgiving Day rivalry game against North Quincy (Nov. 27, 10 a.m.).

Quincy scored all of their points in the first two quarters and jumped out to a 26-0 halftime lead against the Bulldogs. This lead would hold up as the Presidents defense held Randolph scoreless until the fourth quarter. The Bulldogs' garbage-time touchdown put the final score at 26-6.

Quincy and Randolph, playing in the first of six crossover divisional Patriot League games (Keenan Division vs. Fisher Division) over the weekend, a slate of games that made up the first-ever Patriot Bowl Weekend, started the game in rainy and windy conditions, but the bad weather did not seem to cause the Presidents any trouble early.

On their first possession of the game, Quincy's offense methodically drove down the field setting up the first scoring chance of the contest. Senior running back Zach Manning broke the 0-0 deadlock when he scored on a 24-yard run. Senior placekicker Mark Gilbody successfully converted on the point after attempt (PAT) and after five minutes of play, Quincy took a 7-0 lead that they would never relinquish.

After the Presidents' defense forced the Bulldogs to punt the ball away, the offense, and especially the running game, took advantage.

FOOTBALL
Quincy - 26
Randolph - 6

Senior Tim Lewis capped off Quincy's second possession of the first quarter with a 10-yard touchdown run of his own. Gilbody's PAT was unsuccessful and after a quarter of football the Presidents led Randolph 13-0.

The second quarter was more of the same for Quincy. Another three-and-out on Randolph's first offensive possession gave the ball back to Quincy. Looking to spread the wealth on offense, this quarter saw the Presidents' passing game get some love. Junior quarterback Lance Peterson (2 TDs) connected with senior wide receiver Anthony Raddatz on a 13-yard touchdown. A failed two-point conversion run put the score at 19-0 Quincy.

Peterson's right arm fueled another Quincy scoring drive later in the quarter. This time around he found Gilbody open along the sidelines for a 35-yard touchdown pass. Gilbody would connect on his PAT attempt for the 26-0 halftime lead.

"That win was like a breath of fresh air for the team," said head coach Bill Reardon. "We ran the ball well in that first quarter, but give Randolph credit, they adjusted to our running game in the second quarter. But that opened up some passing lanes and we got that part of the offense working well in the second quarter."

For the rest of the game, Quincy played a game of keep away, never letting the Bulldogs get into any type of rhythm on offense, and controlling the ball when they had possession. Randolph's

Ricky Igbani did score on a fourth quarter 5-yard touchdown run, but by that point the outcome of the game had long been decided.

"Having the 26-0 half-time lead allowed the coaching staff to give some of our starters a rest and allowed us to give some other guys reps," Reardon said. "With Thanksgiving coming up next and because you never know when injuries will pop up, it was good to get everyone some time on the field."

The 26-6 victory over Randolph helped to snap a season-high three game-losing streak for the Presidents. Their last win was a 3-0 victory over Whitman-Hanson on Oct. 17, which at the time gave Quincy a 3-3 overall record.

"There was a sigh of relief after this win," added Reardon. "We had lost three straight, but against Randolph, we went back to playing Quincy football. We were physical and that is more our style."

"The team had hit a little lull, but this win gives us some momentum heading into the game against North Quincy."

Notes: Quincy's 4-6 record (not including the Thanksgiving Day game versus NQ) is a one-game improvement over last year's 3-7 finish... Duxbury HS defeated Hanover HS, 47-13, Saturday night at Whitman-Hanson HS to win the inaugural Patriot League Championship between the Keenan and Fisher Division winners. Duxbury (10-0) will represent the league in the state playoffs... The first Patriot League Championship will be the last. Next year, according to league coaches, both the Fisher and Keenan Division champions will earn a spot in the state playoffs.

SENIOR TIM LEWIS (#31) follows the blocking of his offensive line to pick up a first down against the Bulldogs.

Thanksgiving Day game.

The contest last Friday night pitted the two teams, North Quincy and Silver Lake, who had finished in second-place in their respective divisions of the Patriot League. The Raiders finished behind Hanover HS in the Fisher Division as a result of their 16-13 loss to Middleboro HS on November 7. The Lakers finished in second place in the Keenan Division behind eventual league winner Duxbury HS.

Against the Lakers, the only offensive score for North Quincy came when junior running back Terrence Staley scored on a short touchdown run. The Raiders did not convert on the subsequent two-point conversion attempt.

North Quincy now has a week to prepare for Quincy. These Raiders, with their strong and balanced offense and hard-hitting defense, have a chance to end the record nine straight wins that Quincy has racked up since starting the winning streak with a 21-13 victory in 1999. The Raiders have come close over the years, losing 12-7 in 2001, 12-7 in 2002 and 10-7 back in 2006. Last year, North Quincy entered the game as the better team record-wise on paper (6-4 record) but dropped a 28-7 decision to the Presidents (2-7 overall).

The 6-4 record that North has at this point in 2008 matches the 6-4 record they had at the same time in 2007. The goal this year will be to pick up that elusive seventh victory.

Retired Quincy Teacher Kathleen Bertrand Inducted Into New Agenda Hall of Fame

Kathleen Bertrand, of Lakeville, MA, a former Health and Physical Education teacher in the Quincy Public Schools for 35 years, was recently inducted into the New Agenda: Northeast Hall of Fame at a luncheon on Nov. 2 at the Woodland Country Club, Newton.

New Agenda: Northeast is an organization that endeavors to promote the advancement of girls and women in sport and which recognizes the accomplishments of girls and women in sports throughout New England.

This year, Bertrand was selected for the Hall of Fame for her contributions as a 35-year Health and Physical Education teacher in Quincy schools. She fought for equal pay for women in the 1970s. A Bridgewater State College graduate with BS and MS degrees, she went on to get a MA in Critical and Creative Thinking from UMass-Boston in 1996.

She is currently retired from teaching and as a staff writer for the All-American Girls Professional Baseball League Newsletter where she had interviewed all living members of the league for personal stories of what happened in their lives after the women's baseball league folded in 1954.

At present, Bertrand writes an informational column titled "Yesterday's News" for the newspaper; the column includes fun facts and news about the players and the league.

In 1977, she was a convention speaker at the Massachusetts Association of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance. She spoke about the "Poly-Arts" approach to Physical Education and presented the Poly-Arts Program, "Peter Pan," that included a cast of over 60 students.

She is co-founder of the business "Gals in Sports" with Linda Lundin. Since 1995, the purpose of "Gals in Sports" has been to honor and promote the achievements of women in sports.

In her speech to the group at her induction, she cited Amelia Bloomer's efforts in creating bloomers because she wanted to enjoy the independence that came with the invention of the bicycle. She also noted the struggle of women who played for the love of sports despite the social stigmas thrown at women athletes regardless of their skill.

Bertrand credits the passage of Title IX in the 1970s, as a legislative milestone that calls for the equal treatment under law for girls and women in sports.

She said:

"As an advocate for Women in Sports I believe that the continuing struggle for equality for women in sports today is a part of a larger life struggle for women to be recognized for their achievements and to be rewarded with leadership roles."

Safer Ways To Keep Little Ones Healthy This Winter

(ARA) - Concerns over children's cold remedies have many parents thinking twice before opening the medicine cabinet to treat their little one's cough or cold. With the FDA now recommending parents not give over-the-counter medicines to children younger than 4, more parents than ever are looking for ways to proactively support their children's respiratory health and immune systems.

"Evidence shows that over-the-counter cough and cold medicines likely don't work for very young children, and can, in fact, create potentially lethal side effects," says Dr. Bob Sears, a noted pediatrician. "Overdosing and side effects of cough and cold medicines send about 7,000 children to the emergency room each year."

So how can parents help their infants and young children stay healthy through long winter months? Sears offers some simple advice:

First, wash their hands. Once they learn to control their hands, babies' fingers head straight for their mouths. Use a fresh, alcohol-free cleansing wipe to clean your baby's hands repeatedly throughout the day. Youngsters old enough to wash hands on their own, or with light supervision, should be taught to wash with soap and warm water. If your toddler or preschooler rushes through hand washing, slow him down by asking him to sing the entire ABCs song while he washes.

Next, use natural illness-busting foods like whole grains, dark greens and antioxidant-rich fruits to help kids stay healthy. For breakfast, serve up whole-grain cereal with blueberries. Take kids grocery shopping and encourage them to pick out their favorite color vegetables, Sears suggests. Do give healthful, all-natural dye- and preservative-free daily multivitamins as well.

Keeping kids healthy requires diligence during the fall and winter months. Here are some tips:

Run a vaporizer or humidifier in your home, especially in the child's room. Cold viruses thrive in dry conditions, plus dry air parches mucous membranes, which can lead to a stuffy nose or scratchy throat. For a stuffy nose, a simple saline flush can help relieve congestion. Offer plenty of fluids to help loosen congestion and prevent dehydration.

Prop children up slightly to help them sleep better. For infants, place a pillow under the crib mattress to help elevate the child; never place a pillow or anything else in the crib with your baby as this can pose a suffocation risk.

The nutrients and vitamins in chicken soup really do seem to relieve cold symptoms, research shows. And honey is a great all-natural cough suppressant for children 1 and older.

"To keep kids' sinus and respiratory health at its best, look for herbal remedies, like Sinupret for Kids syrup, that promote healthy drainage in the upper respiratory tract, improve airflow through the nose and support healthy mucous clearance from the nose and sinuses," Sears says.

"While natural, herbal remedies have been in use around the world for generations - Sinupret has been a staple in Europe for 30 years - they are just coming into their own in the United States," he says. A natural remedy for healthy sinus, respiratory and immune support in children ages 2 to 12, Sinupret for Kids does not contain stimulants, caffeine, ephedra, pseudoephedrine, codeine, steroids, narcotics or gluten.

"Parents are looking for a natural and safe approach for their kids," Sears says. "Herbal remedies have a long track record of effectiveness and lack of any harmful side effects."

Sinupret for Kids syrup is now available in more than 20,000 retail locations across the country, including Wal-Mart. Visit www.SinupretForKids.com to learn more about Sinupret, and visit www.CDC.gov, www.WebMD.com, www.Parents.com or www.Health.com for more advice on how to keep your kids healthy.

Supplements Can Serve As Stress Buffer

(NAPS) - When it comes to reducing stress, many believe following the right diet and taking nutritional supplements can often be a big help. Experts say when people are stressed, they do not always eat as much or as well. Here are some tips:

- Eat smaller meals more frequently to maintain stable blood sugar levels. Make sure protein and fiber are part of every meal.

- Exercise. It burns calories and helps to fight stress.
- Look for a natural-food multivitamin containing B vitamins and minerals to help convert food to energy. B and C vitamins to help support the body's ability to handle stress, chromium to promote stable blood sugar levels, and iodine to support healthy thyroid function and metabolism. Antioxidants are also found in natural-food multivitamins and help to protect tissues and cells from damage caused by stress as well as exercise.

Some say this type of natural whole-food multi-vitamin - as well as herbal supplements, probiotics, omega-3 fish oils and antioxidants, such as CoQ10 - from a reliable source, such as The Vitamin Shoppe, can help to guard against deficiencies.

This can help ensure that other aspects of health and fitness - such as hair, skin, nails, the immune system - are not sacrificed during times of stress.

Most People Use Too Much Salt

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Sodium, sodium, sodium! Medical people continually tell us to cut down on it. How much is too much? Many packaged meals contain 10 percent to 40 percent. What does that percentage mean? What are the limits you suggest? — S.W.

ANSWER: Most people use too much sodium (salt, sodium chloride). The upper limit on sodium isn't my suggestion. It comes from a panel of experts, and often different panels come up with different limits. One group sets the upper daily limit at 2,400 mg of sodium. Another would like people to use less, somewhere in the range of 1,200 mg to 1,500 mg.

The 2,400 mg amount is equal to one teaspoon of salt. That doesn't mean you're allowed to fill up a teaspoon with salt and use that whole teaspoon on food throughout the day. It indicates total sodium intake. People get 77 percent of their total daily sodium from processed and restaurant foods, things like commercial soups, frozen foods and luncheon meats. Another 12 percent comes from the sodium found naturally in foods. Six percent comes from salt sprinkled at the table, and 5 percent from salt added during cooking. You can cut 11 percent of your sodium intake by eliminating the last two sources. For salt added during the processing of foods, you have to read labels.

The percentage of sodium listed on labels indicates the percent of the recommended daily sodium intake found in a serving of that food.

The booklet on sodium and potassium discusses these minerals in detail. To obtain a copy, write to: Dr. Donohue — No. 202W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

NEW ORAL BACTERIA IDENTIFIED

It may surprise you to know that more than 600 bacteria lives in the human mouth. As you might imagine, these bacteria have the potential to cause various problems, from tooth decay to bad breath to gum disease. With this in mind, it is important to identify unrecognized species of mouth bacteria if we are to find more effective ways of preventing and treating oral diseases. Thus, it comes as good news that British researchers have identified a new species of bacteria that may be associated with tooth decay and gum disease. In fact, the researchers found three new strains of Prevotella histocola bacteria inside the fresh lining of the mouth. The new finding may help combat periodontitis.

This column on "oral bacteria" has been brought to you in the interest of better oral health. Our office provides a full range of services which can be tailored to your individual needs. We are dedicated to your comfort and satisfaction. We recommend regular checkups, periodic cleaning, and x-rays when needed. ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although your energy level is high, be careful not to commit to too many projects at this time. You'll do better focusing on just a few tasks rather than spreading yourself too thin.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your heart might be leading you in one direction, but pay attention to your keen Bovine intellect. I'm cautioning you to think things through before making any commitments.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your "serious" Twin has been dominant in your life for quite a while. It's time now to let that "wilder" half take you out for some good times — perhaps with someone very special.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Career aspects are high for Moon Children who make a good impression. Show people not only what you can already do, but also how you can be more valuable to them in the future.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Things start to brighten for the Lion's immediate financial future. But be careful to resist the urge to splurge. You need to tuck something away to help you through another tight period.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Having to do too many tasks in too short a time could lower your mood to just above the grumbling level. But if you handle things one at a time, you'll get through it all soon enough.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your usually carefully made holiday plans could be subject to change later this month. Use this week to prepare for that possibility by starting a Plan B just in case you need it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Be careful about joining a colleague's plan to solve a workplace problem. Investigate it thoroughly. Otherwise, you could find yourself in a predicament with other associates.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Slow down that high-paced whirl you've been on. Spending quiet time alone or with people you care for can be both physically and spiritually restorative.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Make suggestions, not demands. You'll be more successful in getting people to follow your lead if you exercise quiet patience instead of strong persuasion to get your ideas across.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You still need more facts before you can make an informed career choice. One note of caution: Be careful about whom you ask for that information; otherwise, you could be misled.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Changing situations through the end of the week could lead to some challenging opportunities for those perspicacious Pisceans who know how to make them work to their advantage.

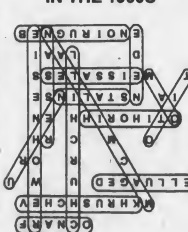

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of being both daring and cautious, traits that could make you a research scientist or maybe even a rocket-ship designer.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It's not a choice most people like to think about, but the selection of a funeral home is a key decision for a family in bereavement. Nothing can erase the loss of a loved one, but it eases the burden when the arrangements are carried out by trained professionals who are sensitive to the needs and concerns of bereaved people. Many people now make such choices by electing to purchase pre-need plans.

We, at the Deware Funeral Home, invite you to learn more about the thoughtful advantages of pre-planning and funding the funeral service. Our pre-arrangement literature will be helpful to you, as well as those close to you. In quiet privacy we shall be pleased to provide informed counsel and attentive answers concerning pre-arrangement.

Any discussion is in the strictest of confidence and under no obligation, of course...

tions which fill existing positions vacated by retirement.

Barron congratulated the appointees, calling them "three great guys who worked very hard."

Deputy Chief Griffith, a 21-year veteran of the department, was promoted to lieutenant in 1996 and captain in 2002. He is a graduate of Massachusetts Maritime Academy.

Captain Ceurvels, a former Marine, joined the department in 1977, and has been a Quincy resident for more than 30 years.

In his formal recommendation of Ceurvels, Acting Chief Barron noted, "His grasp of emergency incident priorities is outstanding."

Ceurvels served in seven fire stations, has been a leader at the Wollaston fire station where he completed safety renovations at that station.

Lt. Wirtz has been a firefighter since 2003 and, according to Barron, "an effective team member."

Koch will be appointing a new chief for the fire department after he receives the results of a new Civil Service examination.

The former chief, Timothy Pettinelli, resigned July 15.

Koch said the process requires that he have at least three applicants for the position before making an appointment.

Deputy Chief Gary Smyth is the only known candidate for the position at this time. Smyth tied for first place with Deputy George McGonagle who declined the job.

Also on the last Civil Service list was Griffith who indicated he would prefer to be deputy chief and Deputy Chief Jeffrey Starr who declined the chief's job.

Deadline For Nominations Dec. 31

Nominations Open For Sun 'Citizen Of The Year'

Nominations are now open for The Quincy Sun's 24th annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Robert and Gloria Noble were honored for their service to worthy community causes for more than a half century. They are the first husband and wife team – and the 24th and 25th recipients – of the award.

The Nobles were selected for the honor by a panel of judges from among 44 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process

Nominations will close Wednesday, Dec. 31. After nominations close, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from nominations submitted.

If you know someone you would like to see recognized with the 2008 award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address by Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for the their nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor, friend or community activist who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Those nominated in the past are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, each nominee has an equal chance of being selected regardless of the number of nominations received. Anyone nominated just once has the same chance of being the award recipient.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Nov. 28, 1582, playwright William Shakespeare, 18, and Anne Hathaway, 26, pay a 40-pound bond for their marriage license in Stratford-upon-Avon. By 1592, Shakespeare was well-established in London's theatrical world as an actor and playwright.

• On Nov. 30, 1886, the Folies Bergère in Paris introduces an elaborate revue featuring women in sensational costumes and quickly gains a reputation for its spectacular nude shows. The theater-staged revues featured as many as 40 sets, 1,000 costumes and a crew of some 200 people.

• On Nov. 26, 1922, in Egypt's Valley of the Kings, British archaeologists become the first to enter King Tutankhamen's tomb in more than 3,000 years. Inside Tutankhamen's sealed burial chambers was a collection of several thousand priceless objects, including a gold coffin containing the mummy of the teenage king.

• On Nov. 24, 1932, the first FBI crime lab officially opens in Washington, D.C. The lab, which was chosen because it had the necessary sink, operated out of a single room and had only one full-time employee, Agent

Charles Appel, who began with a borrowed microscope.

• On Nov. 27, 1942, French Admiral Jean de Laborde sinks the French fleet to keep it out of German hands. Laborde ordered the sinking of two battle cruisers, four heavy cruisers, two light cruisers, one aircraft transport, 30 destroyers and 16 submarines.

• On Nov. 29, 1963, President Lyndon Johnson establishes a special commission to investigate the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. The Warren Commission report concluded that there was no conspiracy. However, in 1978, the House Select Committee on Assassinations concluded that Kennedy was "probably assassinated as a result of a conspiracy."

• On Nov. 25, 1980, Sugar Ray Leonard regains boxing's welterweight title when his opponent, reigning champion Roberto Duran, walks away from the fight in the eighth round. After the match, his doctor reported that Duran had eaten too much too quickly after the weigh-in and had a stomachache.

It Still Bothers Me – And Always Will

It still bothers me and I guess it always will.

It's been 48 years now and I can't stop wondering about President John F. Kennedy and the Secret Service.

Was the Secret Service really doing its job the night of Nov. 10, 1960 in Hyannisport? And, in Dallas, Nov. 22, 1963?

The 45th anniversary of Kennedy's assassination Saturday brought me back to that night three years before in Hyannisport-and still wondering if the Secret service was lax in its duty to protect him.

I was standing in the living room of former Ambassador Joseph Kennedy's home in the Kennedy compound waiting for the President-elect to appear.

Where was the Secret Service, I wondered? I wasn't even supposed to be there but no one questioned that.

Word was that 18 Secret Service agents had moved in swiftly to protect the next President of the United States after Richard Nixon conceded after a night of see-saw election results.

But if they were around the house-inside or outside-they were invisible. They weren't checking on me or anyone else. I could have had a gun in my pocket.

I've written this story before. And I think it's worth another look on this 45th anniversary of JFK's assassination.

Let's go back to Nov. 10, 1960.

I was a Boston Traveler reporter covering the election at press headquarters in the National Guard armory in Hyannis. With me were Dave Farrell of the Boston Herald and photographer Frank Kelly of Quincy, taking photos for both papers.

We were at the armory all election night checking the returns until Nixon finally conceded in the early morning.

We were informed that Kennedy would hold a press conference later in the morning at the armory, his first as President-elect.

Out of that conference came such headlines as:

"Hoover, Dulles To Stay," "Kennedy Says Election Reputates No One"... "Ike Asks JFK Meet Him Soon On Takeover."

The whole Kennedy clan seemed to be there: Jacqueline, 31, radiant and expecting John John in a few weeks; parents Joseph and Rose Kennedy; brothers Bobby with wife, Ethel, Ted, sisters Eunice Shriver, Jean Smith, Pat Lawford and in the background brother-in-law Peter Lawford.

Kennedy made a brief victory statement that was a hint of the theme of his coming Inaugural Address:

"The election may have been a close one. But I think there is general agreement by all of our citizens that the supreme national effort will be needed in the years ahead to move this country safely through the 1960's."

(Inaugural version: "Ask not what your country can do for you. Ask what you can do for your country.")

Word was passed that Kennedy would host an informal, off-the-record party for the press in his father's home that night. It was for the press that had traveled with him through the campaign.

But three party-crashers-Farrell, Kelly and myself-got there, too. It was too good to miss and we weren't going to miss it.

The bus to take the press into the Kennedy compound was parked outside near the armory. We stepped aboard. No one asked to see our press credentials. We rode inside the compound and walked into Joseph Kennedy's house. No one checked on us.

Maybe, as I look back, anyone could have gotten on that bus that night. Maybe even someone like Lee Harvey Oswald.

None of the Kennedy's were in sight when we arrived so the invited members of the press and the three party crashers started browsing around.

On the living room wall were framed letters written by President Franklin Delano Roosevelt to Ambassador Kennedy.

On the fireplace mantle was a model of the USS Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr., the destroyer named after the oldest son who was lost on a dangerous World War II mission. He had plans for a political career.

The living room connected with the dining room. On the dining room table was a punch bowl and cups. Someone said to help ourselves. So we did and wandered back into the living room.

PRESIDENT-ELECT John F. Kennedy and Quincy Sun publisher Henry Bosworth chat at Barnstable Airport in Hyannis, Nov. 11, 1960. Kennedy was leaving for Palm Springs, FL after his election. Behind them are aides Kenneth O'Donnell and Pierre Salinger.

I was returning my cup and was the only one in the dining room when a screen door swung open and in stepped John F. Kennedy.

He walked over to me and we shook hands. "Congratulations Mr. President," I said. It wasn't correct protocol. He was still a Senator and President-elect. But he seemed to like being called "Mr. President" and smiled.

We were alone for a few moments. The other reporters then spotted him and we were soon surrounded.

Kennedy looked tired from the strain of the campaign and those final agonizing hours when the election seemed like it could go either way.

One reporter asked him what he thought made the final difference.

"He (Nixon) stayed around too long in the South," Kennedy replied. (Stayed wasn't the exact word he used.)

Soon, other members of the family joined us: Jacqueline, Rose, Bobby, Ted, sisters Eunice, Jean and Pat and brother-in-law Sargent Shriver.

Kennedy said he was flying to Palm Springs, FL the next day to relax and "maybe play a little golf."

"But don't mention golf," he laughed.

He didn't want the country to think it was getting another golfer like Dwight Eisenhower for President.

I got to chatting with Rose Kennedy who wanted to know about Quincy born Presidents John and John Quincy Adams. I told her as much as I knew and said I would ask Quincy Historian Bill Edwards to send her more information. (And he did.)

Someone produced gift-wrapped bottles of liquor from a cabinet in the kitchen.

And then a sight you couldn't forget: the next President of the United States pouring drinks for members of the press.

It was a night to fondly remember – and cherish.

The next day, the Kennedy family flew out of Barnstable Airport aboard the family plane "Caroline," named for daughter, Caroline, who looked like a young, Shirley Temple back then.

I got one more chance to talk with Kennedy before the plane took off.

"Good luck, Mr. President," I said to him.

"Thank you," he replied, breaking into a grin at being called "Mr. President" for the second time.

I later told Farrell and Kelly that someday I would write the story about how we crashed the Kennedy compound and the party. But not until Kennedy was out of office. Which I figured would be eight years because he surely would be re-elected to a second term.

I remember also telling them:

"I'm going to write how we got by the Secret service that night."

And, kiddingly added:

"And I'm going to write about how I could have shot the President of the United States over the punch bowl in the dining room of his father's house."

But who could have imagined then the tragedy that waited in Dallas?

I just can't help wondering about the Secret Service that night in Hyannisport. And that day in Dallas.

It has bothered me all these years.

And, I guess, it always will.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920's real photo postcard view of the old Pfaffman Oval, now known as Veterans' Memorial Field on Hancock Street. The Southern Artery had not yet been built. The field was named for members of the Pfaffman family who had extensive nurseries along what is now Fenno Street and also served as Park Commissioners in the late 19th century. This view is from the yard of the old Eastern Mass car barn. The chimney of the old MDC pumping station in Merrymount Park is in the right distance. The Pfaffman nurseries were just beyond it. During the 1930's the WPA build the red brick wall around the field along with concrete spectator stands. In 1938 the upgraded facility was dedicated as Quincy Memorial Stadium. To many it is still known as the 'stadium' although in 1951 city officials changed the name to honor Quincy's Veterans. The game being played here was probably Quincy High since North had not yet opened. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Urges Mayor To Veto Zoning Ordinance Amendment

(A copy of following letter was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication.)

Dear Mayor Koch:

On behalf of the 125 Quincy families living at the Seaport Condominiums at Marina Bay, I am writing to request that you veto an amendment to the city's zoning ordinance which the City Council passed on November 10, 2008. This measure would allow the construction of an oversized apartment house here in Marina Bay.

The zoning change would result in greater crowding and denser residential development in our neighborhood than is allowed under existing law, contributing to a reduction in the quality of life and the impairment of housing values not only at the Seaport, not only in Marina Bay, but potentially in other similarly-zoned areas throughout Quincy.

The City Council's vote was particularly disappointing because of its timing. The City Council had previously deferred action on this message because the Seaport and the Chapman's Reach condominium have been engaged in a lawsuit on this project. The judge in the case had indicated his intention to issue a decision in October, but delayed his decision until December 10 at the request of the defendants in our lawsuit. The vote sends an unfortunate signal to the court and could effectively render the decision moot, wasting the 4 1/2 years of time and legal fees we have committed to this lawsuit.

The action is doubly premature, coming as it does before the completion of the ongoing citywide review of zoning and the opportunity for public discussion of the appropriate zoning for our neighborhood.

By taking this action, which would benefit on a single developer, is not needed at this time and cannot be justified on any grounds, the vote would effectively deny us our day in court, waste our time and money and cause irreparable harm to our neighborhood. I strongly urge you to veto this amendment, and would be pleased to discuss it with you or your representative. I may be reached at (617) 479-2544.

Zoning Amendment Doesn't Benefit 'Single Developer'

(A copy of following letter was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication.)

Dear Mayor Koch:

This is to briefly respond to the correspondence, dated November 14, 2008, that you received from Alexander Elles, Chairman, Board of Trustees, Seaport Condominiums at Marina Bay.

I realize that Mr. Elles does not agree with the recent action taken by the Ordinance Committee of the City Council and the more recent City Council vote concerning the Business C Zoning language discrepancies, but the fact remains that this change is not for the benefit of a "single developer."

Although there has been an amazing amount of debate and litigation concerning this matter, the City Council vote simply clarifies the prior interpretation of the Business C Zoning Ordinance language.

Mr. Elles' frustration with "wasting . . . years of time and legal fees" on this matter is clearly not justification to not vote the ordinance change into law.

Stuffing And Sweet Potato Pecan Casserole

Here it is Thanksgiving Day again and so soon. Through the years, I've always tried to make things easier, and even when I don't have Thanksgiving day at my house, there's always something that I bring.

This year, we are all heading to my son Dom's house. I plan to make extra stuffing because that's the first thing that goes. And sweet potato, pecan casserole, plus some dessert. Today's recipe will be for the easiest stuffing ever and the sweet potato casserole. You may add anything else you prefer in the stuffing.

And the best thing is both of these recipes can be made ahead of time.

EASY STUFFING

- 2 stalks of celery (chopped)
- 1 medium onion (chopped)
- 1/2 loaf bread (any kind soaked)
- 1 box of stuffing mix
- 2 tablespoons Bell's seasoning
- enough water or chicken stock for liquid
- 2 tablespoons either olive or vegetable oil

In the hot oil, sauté the celery and onion until tender (I leave a cover over it). Add the soaked bread (I used a day old Italian bread) and stir until well blended and the bread is all well mashed. Then add a little water or chicken stock and pour the stuffing mix into the mixture. Mix until well blended and place in a slightly greased baking dish until ready to bake. When ready to cook cover the dish and place in a 350 degree oven for about 20 minutes.

SWEET POTATO CASSEROLE

- 6 large sweet potatoes (boiled and mashed)

- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 3 tablespoons cream
- 1/2 pound pecans (chopped)
- 3 tablespoons unsweetened coconut flakes

- 1/2 stick butter (melted) for the pecans

1/2 stick butter for the potatoes
Mash the sweet potatoes, add the butter, vanilla and cream. Set aside. In the melted butter, sauté the pecans and the coconut. Add to the sweet potatoes and bake in a buttered casserole dish in a 350 degree oven for 15 minutes. It is so different and delicious. Sometimes sweet potatoes aren't that sweet. If they need added sugar, add what your prefer.

Happy Thanksgiving!

'Salem Witch Judge' Author To Speak At Historical Society

Author Eve LaPlante will discuss her latest award-winning book, Salem Witch Judge: The Life and Repentance of Samuel Sewall, at the Quincy Historical Society meeting, Thursday, Dec. 4 at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Academy, Quincy Center.

Of all the judges who presided at the 1692 Salem Witch Trails, Samuel Sewall was the only one who later publicly repented his actions. He later spoke out against slavery and for the rights of women. Of particular local interest, Sewall's wife was the granddaughter of the first Edmund Quincy.

LaPlante, a ninth-generation direct descendant of Samuel Sewall, will recount her ancestor's remarkable story. LaPlante is also the author of American Jezebel, about Anne Hutchinson, from whom LaPlante is also descended, a book that she discussed at the Quincy Historical Society a few years ago. Salem Witch Judge has been awarded the 2008 Massachusetts Book Award for nonfiction.

The public is welcome to attend. There is no admission charge. A book signing will follow the talk.

Marines To Collect 'Toys For Tots' During Parade

U.S. Marines will continue the tradition of collecting "Toys for Tots" along the Quincy Christmas Parade route Sunday, Nov. 30 which begins at 12:30 p.m.

The custom of collecting the distributing toys for needy children began on a nation-wide basis 60 years ago.

On Sunday, local Marine reservists will walk along the approximate 3-mile parade route placing toys in the vehicles provided.

In Massachusetts last year, more than 450,000 toys were distributed to children in the Greater Quincy area.

Due to the call-up of Marine reservists, the need to donate and collect these gifts for the Toys for Tots program is greater than it ever has been.

To donate to the Toys for Tots program, the public is invited to bring new, unwrapped, non-violent toys to the parade where they will be picked up by the Marines and placed in trucks passing along the three-mile Hancock Street parade route.

The Quincy Christmas Festival Committee members, organizers of the 56th Quincy Christmas Parade are hopeful this year's spectators will show the same "Semper Fidelis" spirit that they have shown in the past, playing a role in the continuing success of this Marine's Toys for Tots program.

THIRD GRADERS in Quincy have received a total of 2256 dictionaries for their personal use, thanks to the Elks Dictionary Project members, volunteers, and friends, such as those shown above. This year, the Quincy Lodge of Elks delivered 792 dictionaries to all third graders in the city.

Elks Donate 792 Dictionaries To Third Graders

All 792 third graders in Quincy have a dictionary all their own now, thanks to the Quincy Elks Lodge.

This is the third year that the local lodge has presented dictionaries as part of their ongoing Dictionary Project.

To date, Elks members have distributed 2256 dictionaries to third graders.

Elks members see the program as a way of expanding the world for the youngsters through the 'wonder' of words." Through the program, each child now has his or her own valuable resource.

Exalted Ruler James Folk

chaired the committee.

'Toys For Tots' Drive At City Hall

City Hall employees will again sponsor a "Toys for Tots" drive in the lobby of City Hall in the weeks leading to Christmas.

Residents are encouraged to drop off a new, unwrapped toy in the "Toys for Tots" receiving area at City Hall during regular business hours. The last day to drop off a toy will be Dec. 19.

Jack Hathaway New Executive Chef At Neighborhood Club

Jack Hathaway is the new executive chef at The Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

He has worked at Finians and Gazelle, in Quincy, Barretts on Boston Harbor, and the Blue Hill Country Club in Canton.

He has mastered his culinary career of the cooking process; prep, pantry, fry, and sauté. He defines his liking to cooking as a "kid in the kitchen" and defines his style of cooking as "classic with a modern spin."

Hathaway admits that the biggest challenge for almost any chef is keeping their menus healthy and heart smart; gone are the days of heavy creamy or buttery sauces.

He acknowledges that it is very pleasant to have the opportunity to personalize a menu for a member's special occasion; and allows him to feel part of so many

First Night In Quincy Falls Victim To Economic Woes

After 16 years of yearend fun and frolic, First Night in Quincy has been done in by a faltering economy.

Mayor Tom Koch's office announced last week that the New Year's Eve events that once drew upwards of 20,000 revelers to Quincy Square has been cancelled for 2008.

"The event has really run its course," said Christopher Walker, spokesman for the mayor. "Attendance was down and programs have been cut back over the last several years."

"With the economic conditions right now, the city is trying to focus on the basics. To that end, all of our Christmas Festival events will be held as planned."

The demise of First Night in Quincy was apparent as early as a year ago.

The events that once enthralled audiences for five hours were cut to three, the two fireworks displays that ended the night became one; the number of performers dropped from 24 to 12.

The budget went from $100,000 at its most generous to $45,000, with $20,000 coming from the cash-strapped city.

Private donations began to dry up and the city decided it wasn't worth the $350 fee to First Night International, the New York-based company that owns the rights to the First Night logo.

First Night in Quincy became FamilyFest Celebration 2007.

Mayor Koch is reluctant to continue to ask businesses for more contributions, said Walker, especially since they donated more than $70,000 for the Mayor's Cup Charity Golf Tournament.

Money from that event will pay for home heating assistance for Quincy families this year.

City Will Enforce Ordinance Against Scrap Metal Scavengers

Scrap metal scavengers will face the full brunt of a new ordinance prohibiting the unauthorized collection of so-called "white goods," according to City Solicitor Jim Timmins who said that offenders will face a $300 fine for each offense.

Timmins said Tuesday, "There are no glitches. We're working through the process."

"We have to come up with a framework (for implementation)..." said Timmins who added his office is preparing a program for "citations for the fine" and working closely with the police department.

Timmins said the city may have to develop a sticker program for residents disposing of "white goods," such as washing machines, water heaters, and dishwashers.

Last month, City Council approved the ordinance submitted by Ward 2 Councilor Daniel Raymondi after Raymondi outlined the tens of thousands of dollars lost to the city and the city's contractor due to unauthorized "white goods" scavengers.

All are welcome.

Raymondi Wants City Prepared For Bad News

What happens to Quincy's municipal budget for Fiscal 2009, now half spent, if the promised state aid already budgeted is reduced seven months into the year?

Whatever happens, Ward 2 City Councilor Daniel Raymondi wants newly named Municipal Finance Director Warren Sproul to prepare the city for it post haste.

Raymondi filed a resolve in the Council directing Sproul to provide the Council with a schedule of spending reductions that could be made if worse comes to worse.

DAN RAYMONDI

"The Governor has made no reductions this year because the Legislature is not in session," he said. "But the Legislature comes back in session in January."

"Quincy needs to be prepared to make significant reductions in the budget for the year we're already in. We may find out seven months into the fiscal year that there are cuts."

The purpose of Raymondi's resolve is to have the director of Municipal Finance provide in increments of $500,000 a prioritized list of possible cuts for the Council.

"This is the proper way to plan for what may be bad news," he said. "We have to be proactive if we are to make intelligent decisions."

Happy Holidays 2008!

This is a column written last year at this time. Our concerns for the holidays haven't changed from a year ago and this column pretty much highlights those concerns. Decorative lights, candles, parties with drinking and smoking, and the start of heating season, all increase the probability of fire. Therefore, kindly adhere to the following safety recommendations.

Make certain that all lighting has been approved by a testing agency such as Underwriters Laboratory (UL). Do not overload electrical outlets or power strips. Discard any extension cord or decorative lighting sets with frayed cords or broken plugs. Do not leave extension cords beneath rugs where they can fray resulting in a short circuit.

Unattended burning candles account for 60% of all candle fires. Statistically, December has almost twice the number of home candle fires compared to an average month. Stay in the room with burning candles. Be sure to snuff out candles before falling asleep, going out, or leaving a room. Burn candles inside a one-foot circle of safety giving them ample free space from combustibles that can come in contact with flame. Use candles out of the reach of children and pets. Burn candles on a noncombustible surface such as a ceramic saucer or plate.

If there must be smoking within the home, provide smokers with large, deep ashtrays. At the end of the party I suggest that you collect those ashtrays and place them within the sink, not immediately discarding them in the trash. Meanwhile 33% of residential fire deaths are caused by carelessly disposed of smoking materials igniting upholstered furniture, mattresses or bedding while alcohol use is typically a contributing factor. Be mindful of discarding smoking material safely.

Cooking equipment is the leading cause of home fires. Unattended cooking is the principal behavioral factor behind these fires. It is too easy during season to begin cooking and become distracted with other holiday matters. If you must leave the kitchen, bring a potholder with you as a reminder of your efforts.

If you are using a live Christmas tree this year, install it away from fireplaces, heat sources and exits. You're all aware of the potential fire hazard with a dry tree while distance from heat sources will help retard the drying process. Make certain though that the stand contains water and is checked daily. An ignited tree can become an immediate inferno so access to unobstructed exits is imperative. It is especially imperative to adhere to the recommendations above regarding electrical wiring and decorative lighting on live trees. Make certain the potential for sparking or short circuits is eliminated.

Household fires seem all the more tragic during the holiday season. So please remember and consider the above issues during this year's holidays. Prevention can lead to a season of celebration without incident, which is a gift in itself. Happy Holidays!

A Job Well Done

On Monday, Nov. 17, 2008, at approximately 5 p.m., Officers Declan Breslin, Matt Miller and Tom Ford were on bicycle patrol in the Quincy Center Business District. While traveling southbound on Hancock Street, they observed two males, one an adult, the other a juvenile, familiar to them from past criminal incidents standing in front of a computer store on Hancock Street.

LT. DAN MINTON

The officers stopped to engage in a conversation and told the juvenile that they recently had conversation with his juvenile probation officer, who informed the officers that the juvenile had an 8 p.m. curfew and it was something that the officers would be monitoring.

The officers asked what they were up to and the adult male said he was picking up his computer that was being repaired. Officer Breslin asked him what was wrong with the computer and he said he wasn't sure. While Officer Miller and Ford continued their conversation, Officer Breslin walked into the store and confirmed that the male was having a computer fixed. The male dropped the computer off in the morning, wanting the password removed. The employee said that the male called several times during the day but the work was not completed.

Officer Breslin then returned to the adult male who brought the computer in and read him his Miranda rights, and after he (now a suspect) consented to speak, he was asked where he got the computer. The suspect initially said that he did not want to tell because he did not want to get anybody in trouble. When asked again, the suspect said that about a week ago he took the computer off the wall at the Galleria, located at 1250 Hancock Street.

Officer Breslin contacted Communications Dispatcher Mike Bowes and asked him to research past calls of computer thefts and incidents at the Galleria. A short time later, Dispatcher Bowes confirmed there was a larceny of a computer on Nov. 7th and the report identified the victim. The suspect was placed into custody and transported to the Quincy Police Station.

At the station, Officer Breslin spoke with the victim, who stated she is a student at the Woodwood School for Girls, and on that day they were standing outside the Galleria. She placed her computer down on the wall and went over to the Quincy Center T Station. When she realized that she left it behind, she immediately returned to the area but the computer was gone. She confirmed the description of the computer as a black Acer with a black carrying case, valued at $598.

The suspect, a 20-year-old Boston resident, was charged with Larceny over $250.00 (felony). Photos were taken of the computer for court purposes and then returned to the student/victim.

Nice Work!

RECENT SCAM: Beware of an old scam surfacing, where a caller states one of your family members has been in a car accident, usually out of country and needs you to forward a large amount of money via a money order to cover insurance bills. Asking simple questions can usually uncover that this is a scam. Remember, criminals continue to use this scam because it works enough for them to make a considerable profit!

A Debut Hit At Hedlund Motors

When The Tucker Torpedo Roared Into Town

By SEN. ROBERT L. HEDLUND, JR.

This past summer, when Apple released its latest edition of its popular iPhone, the news was filled with stories about lengthy lines of eager consumers waiting for their chance to check out and purchase the latest must-have gadget.

But it wasn't an unprecedented event. In fact, 60 years ago this week a similar event happened in Quincy: it was the week the Tucker Torpedo came to town.

In 1948, our postwar nation was hungry for new car designs. Detroit, which had converted its automobile factories for the war effort, was rolling out state designs based on early-1940s models.

It was during this time period that Preston Tucker burst onto the scene with a visionary new automobile. Tucker, who had spent years in the automobile industry before putting his talents to use for the war effort (he developed a mobile gun turret, which became a standard feature on B-17 and B-29 bombers) captivated post-war America with an entirely new product that featured many auto-industry firsts, such as aerodynamic styling, fuel injectors, overhead valves, disc breaks, and a number of safety innovations including pop-out safety glass, a perimeter frame, and a "crash chamber." The most unique feature was a 3rd "Cyclops" headlight that turned along with the steering wheel. While many of these features would later become standard features in Big 3 autos, they were revolutionary at the time.

Tucker secured a 93-acre factory in Chicago (then the world's largest), but needed funding to start production. He conceived a (then) clever funding method of selling dealer franchises, as well as public stock offering, in advance of production.

My grandfather, John Hedlund, who was employed as a union electrician at the Local 103, found little work during the Depression. He stumbled into the car business by taking a job unloading cars from freight trains in the Lechmere section of Cambridge. After World War II, having had "experience" in the "car business," my grandfather was, like many, captivated by Preston Tucker, his dream, and his new car.

My grandfather and his brother, Carl, pooled their life savings, and secured a Tucker Auto franchise. They purchased a plot of land on Quincy Avenue, and in 1948 opened their new auto dealership: a one-car showroom with two service bays.

With just a few dozen prototypes being built, Tucker had to ration-off his Torpedoes to the franchisees. My grandfather's turn came for a week in late November 1948. He hitched a ride out to Fitchburg to pick it up and then drove it 60 miles back to his dealership in Quincy, managing to earn a speeding ticket during the return trip.

"It performed like a race car, rode like a Cadillac, and was priced like a Chevy," my grandfather would tell me years later after I started working at his shop. Even after working in the auto and truck business for 45 years he insisted it was the best car he ever drove.

Its arrival at 330 Quincy Avenue caused a stir. Lines stretched out of the show room for a week, wearing down the dealership's new linoleum floor tiles. A number of people placed orders on the spot, including Quincy police chief, fire chief, and city council president, according to my grandfather.

The Tucker, despite all the attention and promise, however, would never make it. The Securities Exchange Commission, prompted by politically powerful friends of the Big 3 automakers, who felt threatened by the Tucker's popularity, launched an investigation into the automobile company. Tucker was never convicted of any wrongdoings, but the scrutiny did cause financing to dry up, and the company folded.

My grandfather was forced to return all the deposits plunked down during that frenzied week in November. He was able to adapt, switching his focus from a dealership to a repair shop. Later, thanks to a recommendation from former Quincy Fire Chief Tom Gorman, Sr., Hedlund Motors became the New England service representative for Seagrave Fire Apparatus.

In 1988, the movie "Tucker" was released, starring Jeff and Lloyd Bridges, bringing renewed interest in the history of the Tucker. Both the director and producer of "Tucker," Francis Ford Coppola and George Lucas, were Tucker collectors. And one of the 46 surviving Tuckers sold last month for more than $1 million!

Although my grandfather lost a significant amount of money investing in the failed automobile, he never regretted his gamble, as he believed in the product. He did feel Preston Tucker was victimized by the status quo, who were threatened by his product. He was glad his gamble led to his own business in the city he was grew up in and loved.

As I launched my political career in 1990, I was surprised by the number of people who would ask about my connection to Hedlund Motors, and then tell me about how they still remembered their fathers "taking them to see the Tucker" at Hedlund Motors.

Benefit Raises $11,000 For Quincy Animal Shelter

Donated Red Sox memorabilia helped boost fundraising recently for Quincy's Animal Shelter.

A raffle for a baseball bat autographed by Dustin Pedroia and an official Red Sox shirt worn by Jonathan Papelbon helped raise $11,000 for the shelter at this fall's wine-tasting benefit, according to Lynda Southerland who chaired the event.

The Third Annual Wine-Tasting benefit for the shelter brought some 200 friends out in driving rain recently to Masonic Hall, Hancock Street.

Southerland said the raffle for the Red Sox articles raised $4000 of the $11,000 total. She noted that the raffle was held before Pedroia was named 2008 Most Valuable Player of the American League.

The funds will be used to defray expenses at the all-volunteer facility which focuses on dogs and cats in the Quincy area. The no-kill shelter can accommodate about 12 dogs and 20 cats.

Shelter volunteers work in conjunction with the city's Animal Control Officer Don Conboy, but the group receives no public funding.

Sandra Morris is Director of the shelter.

"All funds are raised privately," said Lynda Southerland who chaired the event "The whole shelter is 100 percent volunteer."

Some volunteers work at the shelter while other volunteers act as foster families for kittens awaiting adoption. Area veterinarians donate their time for preliminary examinations of shelter animals.

At this time, the volunteers need funds to purchase a new washer and dryer for the shelter, according to Southerland.

For more information about the shelter, call 617-376-1349 or visit www.quincyanimalshelter.org.

THE SUCCESSFUL FUND-RAISER for the Quincy Animal Shelter brought smiles to Margaret Kinsella, Sandra Morris, Director of the Shelter, and Kit Burke.

Checklist For Winterizing Your Home From The Better Business Bureau

With a tough economy looming like the Grinch over this year's holiday season, many people are looking for ways to ensure their homes are ready for the cold winter months in an effort to save money through energy efficiency. Your Better Business Bureau is offering a checklist for homeowners to safely prepare their homes for winter and perhaps save a few dollars in the process.

According to the Energy Information Administration, home heating costs this winter are expected to rise by 23 percent for homeowners who rely on heating oil, 18 percent for homes relying on natural gas and 10-11 percent for homes heated by propane or electricity. Luckily, homeowners can fend off some of the rising energy costs by winterizing their home before the harshest weather takes hold.

"As if people needed some more bad news about high prices, high heating costs are the next hurdle for cash-strapped consumers, and yet another reason for homeowners to take steps to winterize their homes before the cold sets in," said Paula Fleming, vice president of communications and marketing for BBB. "Winterizing a home makes good economic sense because a small up-front investment can pay dividends for months by increasing the energy efficiency of a house and reducing overall heating costs."

Following is a BBB home winterizing checklist for consumers to consult when preparing for the cold months ahead:

- Furnace. Furnaces older than 15 years might be due for a replacement. For younger furnaces, BBB recommends making sure the furnace filter is clean, the thermostat is working properly and the pilot light is functioning. Homeowners can also hire an inspector to do the job and make sure the furnace is in safe working order.

- Heating ducts. Ducts should be cleaned once every two years. Homeowners should also consider adding insulation to any exposed ductwork. According to the U.S. Department of Energy, a home with central heating can lose up to 60 percent of its heated air before that air reaches the vents if ductwork is not well-connected and insulated, or if it travels through unheated spaces.

- Chimney. Before lighting up, homeowners planning on using their fireplace come winter should have the chimney inspected for animals, debris and leaves that may have fallen in. BBB also recommends installing a screen over the chimney opening.

- Gutters and ridge vents. Gutters should be cleaned to prevent any clogs that would cause rainwater to back up and freeze, making the gutters expand and crack. The ridge vents need to be cleaned as well in order to allow the house to "breathe" correctly. Otherwise, air will stagnate and create an unhealthy environment.

- Smoke alarm and carbon monoxide detectors. BBB recommends testing smoke alarms and carbon monoxide detectors and installing fresh batteries. Homeowners should consider replacing smoke alarms older than 10 years.

- Caulking and Weather Stripping. The average American home has air leaks that amount to a nine-square-foot hole in the wall, according to the EarthWorks Group. To prevent leaks, homeowners should inspect the caulking around windows and doors and check for cracking and peeling. In addition, BBB recommends ensuring that doors and windows shut tightly and no cold air is coming in due to worn down weather stripping.

- Seasonal equipment. Homeowners won't need their spring and summer equipment for a few months, so BBB recommends draining the water from garden hoses and air conditioner pipes and the gasoline from the lawnmower and other garden tools. It's also time to pull out the snow shovels and plows and ensure they are in good repair.

- Emergency kit. When a winter storm strikes, an emergency kit should have all essential materials in one handy place. An emergency kit should include flashlights, candles and matches, a first aid kit, bottled water, non-perishable food and a battery-powered radio. BBB recommends creating the same emergency kit for the car as well, including a couple blankets.

10 Tips For Healthy Living

(ARA) - With busy schedules and lifestyles, keeping your mind, body and soul healthy can be a major challenge. However, don't let the hectic pace of life keep you from living yours to the fullest. There are simple steps you can take that will leave you feeling energetic and upbeat. Consider these 10 tips to help you live a happy, healthy, safe and balanced life.

Get Physical

Exercise not only helps you build muscle and lose weight, giving you more self-confidence, but it's vital in maintaining a healthy heart. And don't think you need to spend hours at the gym to achieve a new physical you. From strength training and cardio workouts, to walking the dog or taking the stairs -- anything that gets your heart pumping will benefit your health.

Stress is a Mess

Over time, stress can lead to serious health issues such as obesity, depression and even death. When you start seeing red, instead think blue. As in blueberries. Antioxidants found in the tasty fruit fight stress hormones. Also, don't forget to breathe. Inhaling a deep breath for five seconds, then exhaling for another five seconds, can help clear your mind and enhance blood circulation.

Get a Grip on Safety

Think bath safety products are just for older generations? Think again. With wet, hard surfaces, the bathroom is your home's biggest danger zone. So, get a grip on safety by adding a few stylish and safe products to your ensemble, such as grab bars, tub grips, bath-tub tread strips, shower chairs or transfer benches. HomeCare by Moen offers a wide assortment of stylish, stable and durable bath safety products at Lowe's. Visit homecare.moen.com for more information.

LOL Laugh Out Loud

Build your immune system through laughter. Health-increasing hormones, such as endorphins, are released through your body when you laugh. Additionally, laughter works your abdominal muscles and boosts your state of mind. Web sites such as www.Fun-LOL.com can be a quick fix for a downer day.

Eat Healthy

We know we should eat healthy, and with new on-line tools it's a no-brainer. The new MyPyramid program, www.MyPyramid.gov, developed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, allows you to choose the ideal proportions of foods and food groups to eat according to your body size and structure.

Get Plenty of Zzzzz's

Between work, family and extra activities, it's sometimes difficult to get the necessary six to eight hours of sleep per night. Be sure to avoid caffeine or exercise right before bed. Instead try reading a book or meditating. And, if you still need extra help to unwind, Bath and Body Works offers the Aromatherapy Sleep Collections, featuring chamomile bath salts and a warm milk and honey pillow spray to aid in a good night's rest.

What's Up, Doc?

Going to the doctor only when you're sick isn't going to cut it. For both your physical and mental well-being, it's wise to have a routine annual physical examination. Especially if your family has a history of health problems, such as heart disease, diabetes or high blood pressure, getting regular check-ups can help prevent or detect serious health issues.

Yoga-ta Do It

Yoga, an ancient practice of stretching and breathing techniques, has become a popular exercise for both men and women. In addition to releasing positive energy, yoga prevents injuries, promotes flexibility and can add relief to a stressful day. In fact, according to the book, "Real Men Do Yoga," PGA golfer David Duval practices yoga every day. So, if it's good enough for professionals, it may be an excellent addition to your weekly stress-relief routine.

S.O.S. - Save Our Skin

As the largest organ of the human body, your skin's health is vital. Luckily caring for your protective layer can be easy and enjoyable. Try a trip to the spa, or even create a spa at home. There's no better way to start your day than with an invigorating, spa-like shower. Try a multi-function showerhead, such as Moen's Inspire showerhead at Lowe's, that will envelop you in a variety of massaging or refreshing sprays. Finish off your pampering shower with your favorite body cream to lock moisture in your skin.

Your Right for Recreation

You schedule meetings and appointments each week, so why not schedule time for recreation? Be sure to set aside time each week for activities you enjoy. Whether it's dinner with family and friends, or taking the phone off the hook and curling up with a good book, be sure to block out time on your calendar with activities that you enjoy and will rejuvenate you.

It doesn't take a radical change in your behavior to start living a healthier lifestyle. By following these simple tips, you'll be on the road to a happy, healthy, safe and balanced life.

Protect The Skin You're In

(NAPSA)-While most people recognize the importance of applying sunscreen at the beach or the pool, many don't realize the value in wearing sun protection every day of the year.

Experts say about 80 percent of a person's sun exposure occurs during daily activities-walking to the car, sitting in front of a window-and that one year of incidental sun exposure is like spending a week at the beach without sunscreen.

To keep skin healthy and protected throughout the day, incorporate a moisturizer that contains SPF into your daily skin care routine, as hydration and sun protection are key elements for maintaining healthy skin.

Skin that is dry may be unable to perform its primary function, which is to protect your body from environmental damage, such as free radicals, pollutants and the sun's UV rays.

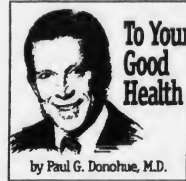

Additionally, skin that is dry has a difficult time renewing itself from sun damage, leaving it vulnerable to premature aging, including wrinkles and age spots.

Look for a nongreasy moisturizer with sunscreen, such as Aveno Daily Moisturizing Lotion with SPF 15, which combines the natural moisturizing benefits of colloidal oatmeal to soothe dry skin with Active Photobarrier Complex, a sun-protection technology that is specifically engineered to deliver very high, very broad and photo-stable UVA and UVB protection.

The moisturizer also contains rich emollients that provide 24-hour moisturization, leaving skin soft, smooth and healthy looking.

Shingles Tied to Chickenpox

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please explain the proper care of a person who contracts shingles. Is it contagious? My doctor didn't want me in his office. Other doctors say it's not contagious.

I received the drug Famvir at the start. Now I take Lyrica and Percocet. I am miserable. How long is recovery? I have a mild case. I pity anyone with a difficult case. — E.B.

ANSWER: When the shingles rash is brand-new and consists of many small, fluid-filled blisters, virus is present in those blisters. It is theoretically possible for an adult or a child who has never come in contact with chickenpox to catch chickenpox, not shingles, from the blister fluid. The possibility is slight, but it does exist. Most adults — more than 90 percent — have been exposed to chickenpox, so adults are not in great danger. Newborn and young infants, before they've received the chickenpox vaccine, are at a little greater risk. You do realize that shingles is the reawakened chickenpox virus that lives in the body from the time of infection to the time of death.

You don't have shingles now. You have the dreadful shingles complication — postherpetic neuralgia. It's pain coming from the nerve that the shingles virus traveled down on its journey to the skin. You are getting the appropriate medicines. The pain is usually gone in months, but it can linger for years.

The shingles vaccine was developed to prevent shingles and postherpetic neuralgia.

The shingles booklet describes this illness and its treatment in detail. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 1201W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Walking for Exercise Has Fringe Benefit

Now that cold weather is here again, my mall walking group has had to move indoors. Three mornings a week we meet at the local shopping center where management opens the doors early for us. The level floors and good lighting make it a safe environment, and if we follow a certain route, we end up walking a mile. Having a warm location (as well as benches to sit on if we need to rest) has even allowed one of our members who's on oxygen to join us for part of the time.

Walking for exercise comes with all kinds of benefits, most of which have been proven by studies. When we walk, we lower our risk for cancer, boost our brain power, increase bone strength, reduce the risk of dementia, promote better sleep and generally live longer, healthier lives.

I've found that the best thing about walking, however, is how I feel afterward. There's something about getting those "feel-good" endorphins going that seems to put a feeling of well-being on the whole day. (Which is why I prefer to walk in the mornings.) Endorphins act like nature's painkillers.

Just when I thought I knew all there was to know about walking, along comes something new: Chi Walking. Chi (pronounced "chee") Walking incorporates proper posture, especially of the spine, shoulders, hips and knees. Relaxed movements appear to be the key to getting more benefits from walking. If you want to know more about it, look at www.chi-walking.com or call 1-866-327-7867 for information. There are even workshops across the country and a link to instructors in your area.

If you aren't already walking for exercise, ask your doctor for suggestions before you begin.

SIDE NOTES

An estimated 30-40 million Americans grind their teeth when they sleep. Not only does bruxism (tooth-grinding) raise a ruckus, it causes premature tooth wear. In addition to the biting surfaces of grinding molars wearing down, as one might expect, bruxism can also cause tooth loss on the sides of teeth. This bruxism-related loss of tooth material at gum level is caused by "abfraction," which involves flexing of tooth structure. As the affected teeth grind, the force creates tension on one side of the tooth and compression on the other. As a result, notches develop as enamel is lost. Addressing this problem involves using a night mouthguard to prevent tooth-grinding followed by restoration of the lost tooth material that bruxism caused. It is well known that stress and anxiety play the major role in causing bruxism. By carefully monitoring and controlling the stress you can often dramatically reduce bruxism. Oral health is a long-term commitment we share with each patient and we encourage you to make us aware of any special needs you may have. We provide excellent clinical skills and state of the art equipment. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our goal is to help you preserve your natural teeth for a lifetime. We offer the services of anesthesia with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Notches in teeth related to abfraction can be effectively restored with dental bonding.

North Quincy Seeking First
Thanksgiving Win In 10 Years

Red Raiders Ready For Redemption

By SEAN BRENNAN

The North Quincy Red Raiders are ready to pull out all the stops tomorrow. Nine straight losses on Thanksgiving will do that to a team.

Entering the 76th annual showdown between the Red Raiders and the Quincy Presidents, this so-called rivalry game has become anything but. The Raiders, following last year's 28-7 loss, have not enjoyed a Turkey Day victory since a 21-6 win all the way back in 1998. But since the 2006 season these Red Raiders have slowly transformed into a different team, a team that expects to win these types of games. The days of being the city second-best team are a thing of the past.

North Quincy finished their regular season with a 6-4 record. The team came within one win of capturing a Fisher Division title, in just their first season playing in the ultra-competitive Patriot League, and with a balanced attack on offense, defense and special teams these Raiders are ready to walk off the turf at Veterans Stadium as winners.

"A win tomorrow would accomplish three things," said NQ head coach Jim Connor. "First and most importantly, a win would give us seven victories, which is something a NQ team has not accomplished in a long time. Secondly, a win would end the streak of nine straight wins for Quincy and thirdly, a win would make this game more interesting. The last few years' things have been lopsided and not too much of a rivalry. It is always a big game and we will be ready."

The significance of the "Game" is not lost on Connor or his team. They understand the history behind it and they are ready to feed off the atmosphere. But they will not be intimidated by any streak.

"The history behind this game is special," said Connor. "It is an exciting day with the large crowds. There are always former players that come back and some of the players who are playing this year have had brothers and parents play in it. The last few years we have left feeling frustrated and sad emotionally, but if we stick to what has made us so successful this season, we should be ready."

"It is bigger than your average game, but we need to head into it with the same attitude we have played with all season. Saying that, nine straight losses could have an effect on the team. The weight of the streak could play a role, but I don't see that happening with this team."

These Raiders have certain things working in their favor that could finally put an end to the losing streak. They have an excellent offense, a stingy and physical defense and good special teams play.

On offense, North possesses an All-League quarterback in junior first-year starter Mike Stanton, a stable of running backs led by seniors Pat Watkins (six rushing TDs, one receiving TD), Joe Vialpando (four rushing TDs, one receiving TD) and Brian Donaghey (two rushing TDs) and junior Terrence Staley (five rushing TDs) and North has an offensive line that has played shoulder pad to shoulder pad for the last two years. Seniors RJ Barden, Chris Bergeron, Joe Benoit and juniors Mike Benoit and AJ Morfe anchor the O-Line.

Seniors Tim Stille and Matt Jay and junior Paul Reamer (two receiving TDs) are also serious threats on offense. North averaged 18.1 points per game.

"At the quarterback position Mike Stanton is the proto-typical signal caller," said Connor. "He is a tall pocket passer who can move around and find his open receiver. He completes the passes he should complete. He hits open receivers and that is so valuable at the high school level."

"But we also have great senior leadership on offense. With our running backs all playing so well running behind the offensive line it has been exciting. This group of seniors stepped in two years ago and changed the culture

Quincy Eyes 10th Straight Holiday Win

Presidents Prepared To Put Streak On Line

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents just may be the most dangerous 4-6 team to ever play for a city championship. Under the direction of first-year head coach Bill Reardon Quincy comes into tomorrow's Thanksgiving Day football game looking to complete a decade of dominance.

For the last nine seasons, the Presidents have left Veterans Memorial Stadium as the victors. Last year, in coach Bob Noble's last season manning the sidelines, Quincy entered the "Game" with a 2-7 record only to blow the doors off North Quincy, 28-7. Coach Reardon and his team know the importance of this game and they know what it takes to win and they have no intentions of walking away with a loss.

"I knew what to expect in terms of preparation for the week ahead," Reardon said. "I knew from working with Bob for all those years what to expect. He was very organized, he had an itinerary that we have been using since 1999, we changed some parts, but it has been very helpful in getting prepared for North Quincy."

Reardon, who attended Quincy High School from 1987-1991 and played for the Presidents on Thanksgiving during the 1989 and 1990 seasons and went 1-1 in those games, understands as well as anyone the significance of this game, and he doesn't take it lightly.

"It is absolutely a different type of game. You are talking about playing against kids you have grown up with your whole life. You are not playing some stranger from Duxbury, you may be playing some kid you shared Oreo cookies with in fifth grade.

"It is that type of game. The records go out the window because there isn't that unknown factor. It makes it easier for motivational purposes because you have an idea of what to expect playing against friends and people you know from living in the city.

"This is a game these kids will be talking about years from now. Every player gives a little more when they play on Thanksgiving. It is a separate season all together."

Quincy's 4-6 record is deceiving. The Presidents opened the season with two straight one-point losses in games that were there for the taking. In the season-opener Quincy lost 28-27 to Cohasset in overtime and in Week Two lost 8-7 to Canton on a fumbled punt in the end zone. On Halloween, Quincy fell to Scituate 14-13.

"We have tried to build on these losses," said Reardon. "The Scituate game was tough, we thought we may be able to pull it out in the end, but the kids, to their credit, have been building on these losses. We just have to try and not make stupid mistakes."

Quincy ended the regular season with a convincing 26-6 trouncing of Randolph High School, a win that stopped a three-game losing streak and kicked the Presidents' offense and defense back into high gear.

On offense, Quincy has a number of weapons at its disposal. Unlike in previous seasons under Noble, Reardon has gone away from the shotgun/spread offense in favor of a more traditional offense centered around ball control and clock management, but that doesn't mean Quincy doesn't have any homerun threats.

Junior quarterback Lance Peterson completed 49.6% of his pass attempts, threw for 958 yards and had 10 TDs and eight INTs. He also is 1-0 on Thanksgiving. Peterson's favorite target was senior wide receiver Anthony Raddatz. Raddatz, an Honorable Mention All-Star selection, caught 27 passes for 526 yards. His ten touchdowns (nine receiving) led the team.

"Lance has played in one of these already so I don't expect him to be rattled," said Reardon. "I am counting on Raddatz to have a big game. He just catches the ball. Anthony believes that

North Quincy Red Raiders vs. Quincy Presidents

6 Raiders, 3 Presidents Patriot League All-Stars

The North Quincy Red Raiders and the Quincy Presidents, both playing in their first season in the Patriot League, after playing for many years in the Atlantic Coast League, had a combined nine players named to the All-League and Honorable Mention all-star teams.

A panel of the league's 12 coaches meet last week and made the all-star selections.

The Raiders (6-4 overall, 3rd place in the Fisher Division) had three athletes named to the Patriot League All-League team. Junior quarterback Mike Stanton, a first-year starter behind center, senior captain RJ Barden, a defensive lineman and team leader on defense, and junior Paul Reamer, defensive back, were selected to the All-League team.

The Presidents (4-6 overall, 5th place in the Keenan Division) had one player named to the All-League team. The league's coaches selected senior Tim Lewis, a stalwart on the defensive line and a solid running back on offense. Lewis finished the year with two rushing touchdowns; eight quarterback sacks, an interception and 55 tackles.

North Quincy's Joe Vialpando (RB, five TDs), Joe Benoit (OL/DL) and Matt Jay (DB) and Quincy's Anthony Raddatz (WR, 27 receptions, 526 yards, 9 touchdowns) and Sean Gray (LB, 82 tackles, INT, two forced fumbles, two fumbles recovered) were named to the Honorable Mention team.

1947 Game Drew Largest Crowd

As the 76th annual football game between North Quincy and Quincy approaches tomorrow, the debate about which of the previous seventy-five affairs drew the biggest crowd comes down to either the game in 1946 or 1947.

It appears the 1947 game had the largest paid attendance, reported to have been 18,003. In 1946, the paid attendance was 16,065.

Many estimate that close to 25,000 saw the 1947 game, if you count those who watched from the walls and trees, and those who lined the bus yard where the MBTA garage now stands.

The biggest previous crowd prior to 1946 was the 15,000 who watched the 1939 game.

NORTH'S PAT WATKINS, shown here fighting for extra yards against Middleboro, led the Raiders in scoring this season. Watkins finished the year with six TDs.

QUINCY'S ANTHONY RADDATZ, shown here catching a punt against Randolph, was the Presidents' leading scorer this season. Raddatz finished the year with 10 TDs.

North Quincy's Patrick Watkins, Quincy's Anthony Raddatz Leading Scorers

The North Quincy Red Raiders and the Quincy Presidents head into tomorrow's 76th annual football game with one goal in mind: Win.

The Raiders will take a 6-4 record into the game and will be looking to come away with a victory for the first time since they won 21-6 in 1998.

Quincy, under first-year head coach Bill Reardon, will be aiming for their tenth straight victory in this game. Quincy won 28-7 in 2007.

Both teams will lean on their respective leading scorers. For North Quincy, senior captain Patrick Watkins (RB/DB) leads his team with six touchdowns scored, five rushing and one receiving. Watkins' best game this season was a two-touchdown game against Pembroke (Oct. 11, 32-0 win). He scored single TDs in games against Randolph, Whitman-Hanson, Sharon and Plymouth South.

Senior Joe Vialpando (RB/DB) scored four rushing TDs and one receiving TD. His most impressive TD was a 55-yard run in the fourth quarter against Middleboro on Nov. 7.

Junior Terrence Staley (FB/LB) finished the season with five rushing TDs. Staley scored twice against Hanover in a huge 21-14 win on Oct. 24.

Juniors Mike Stanton (QB) and Paul Reamer (WR/DB) and senior Brian Donaghey (RB/LB) all scored two TDs this season.

Quincy's leading scorer was senior wide receiver Anthony Raddatz. Raddatz, an explosive offensive threat, scored 10 touchdowns this year including nine receiving and one rushing. Raddatz scored a huge touchdown in last year's 28-7 win over North.

Senior Mark Gilbody (K/RB/DB) finished the year with one receiving TD, five successful point after attempts (PATs) and two field goals. Gilbody's biggest kick this season was a game winning 38-yard FG on Oct. 17 in a 3-0 win for Quincy over Whitman-Hanson.

Senior Tim Lewis (RB/DL), an All-League selection, scored two rushing TDs. Senior Zach Manning (RB/LB) scored one rushing touchdown and senior Max Devoe (RB/DB/K) kicked three successful PATs.

Raiders 3-3, Presidents 4-2

NQ, Quincy Played Six Common Opponents

The North Quincy Red Raiders and the Quincy Presidents played six common opponents this season as both high schools began their first year playing in the Patriot League.

The Raiders played in the Fisher Division of the PL and the Presidents played in the Keenan Division of the PL. North Quincy competed in the Fisher Division against teams from Hanover, Middleboro, Rockland, Pembroke and Randolph while Quincy competed in the Keenan Division against teams from Duxbury, Silver Lake, Scituate, Hingham and Whitman-Hanson.

The six common opponents played both by North Quincy and Quincy included Patriot League foes Scituate, Whitman-Hanson, Rockland, Randolph and Silver Lake and non-league opponent Plymouth South, a former annual opponent from the Atlantic Coast League.

The Red Raiders posted a 3-3 record in these games with wins over Plymouth South (12-7, Sept. 26), Whitman-Hanson (21-0, Oct. 3) and Randolph (34-6, Oct. 30) and losses to Scituate (24-0, Sept. 12), Rockland (23-14, Oct. 17) and Silver Lake (23-6, Nov. 14). Overall, North Quincy enters the Thanksgiving Day game with a 6-4 overall record.

The Presidents posted a 4-2 record in these games with wins over Plymouth South (13-0, Sept. 19), Rockland (7-6, Oct. 3), Whitman-Hanson (3-0, Oct. 17) and Randolph (26-6, Nov. 14) and losses to Silver Lake (21-10, Oct. 25) and Scituate (14-13, Oct. 31). Overall, Quincy enters the Thanksgiving Day game with a 4-6 overall record.

North Quincy earned its first victory of the fall on Sept. 20 with a 28-0 pasting of non-league opponent Sharon HS, avenging its season-opening loss to Scituate on Sept. 12. The Raiders followed the Sharon win with consecutive victories over Plymouth South, Whitman-Hanson and Pembroke (32-0, Oct. 11). After losing a heart breaker to Rockland on Oct. 17, North rattled off wins over Hanover (21-14, Oct. 24) and Randolph (Oct. 30). For the month of October, the Red Raiders finished an impressive 4-1.

But November was not as kind. A 16-13 loss to Middleboro on Nov. 7 eliminated North Quincy from winning the Fisher Division outright (Hanover was the division champion and lost to Duxbury in the league championship game Nov. 15) and the 23-6 loss on Nov. 14 to Silver Lake dropped the team's record to the current 6-4 mark it holds.

Quincy dropped its season-opener 28-27 to Cohasset in a non-league game on Sept. 5. The Presidents lost its second game of the year on Sept. 12 following an 8-7 defeat to Canton in a non-league game. Quincy finally earned its first victory on Sept. 19 with a 13-0 non-league win over Plymouth South and followed that win with a 7-6 victory over Rockland on Oct. 3.

The Presidents lost to league champion Duxbury, 18-0, on Oct. 11; beat Whitman-Hanson, 3-0, on Oct. 17; lost to Silver Lake, 21-10, on Oct. 25 and lost to Scituate, 14-13, on Oct. 31.

Quincy dropped a 25-14 decision to Hingham on Nov. 7 before knocking off Randolph, 26-6, on Nov. 14. That win gave Quincy, for the moment, a one-game improvement over last year's 3-7 finish as the team will play on Thanksgiving with a 4-6 overall record.

Hanging Of The Greens Dec. 7 At United Methodist Church

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will hold its annual Hanging of the Greens at the 10:30 a.m. morning worship service Sunday, Dec. 7.

"Evergreens have a very long symbolic history," said the Rev. Dr. Susan Jarek-Glidden, church pastor. "Since ancient times they have represented life and rebirth. This was especially true in those areas of the world where the winter months were long, dark and cold."

"The church adapted this ancient symbol and gave it new meaning, teaching that evergreens represent eternal life. At some point in time," Dr. Jarek-Glidden continued, "someone literally brought evergreens into a church building, but precisely how and when that happened we just don't know; such developments are much more complex than they might seem."

"Over time, decorating churches became a tradition, and evolved into the Hanging of the Greens."

Many different versions of the Hanging of the Greens service exist.

The one used at Quincy Community United Methodist Church combines readings from Scripture and songs, and was written by Dr. Jarek-Glidden.

The focus of the service is participation.

Before the service begins, everyone is invited to help decorate the sanctuary with greenery. Then, at a certain point in the ceremony, the volunteers are asked to carry out their part of the decorating.

"The decorating is in informal and lots of fun," said Dr. Jarek-Glidden, "and that makes the Hanging of the Greens a great service for families and kids."

Everyone is invited to begin the holiday season by participating in the Hanging of the Greens.

The church is located diagonally across the street from the Wollaston T station.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We all have many things to be grateful for at Thanksgiving time... especially in this time of world turmoil and unrest. Freedom, our most precious gift, we take for granted most of the time... We can say what we want, go where we please and worship as we please. More than half the world cannot exercise these privileges.

Yes, Thanksgiving is truly an American holiday and we should not only give thanks for our bountiful blessings, but be willing to share what we have with those less fortunate than ourselves... not only in material blessings, but in giving of ourselves.

Our earliest settlers in 1620 knew this and after that first terrible winter when many died, they planted their food and had a successful harvest. They gave thanks to God for their bounty and shared it with the Indians.

Today, this tradition must continue more than ever. Let us not only give thanks for our own good fortune, but share with others our blessings. This is the true meaning of Thanksgiving...

Raiders Ready For Redemption and stopped the bleeding. Instead of being disappointed with a loss they are disappointed if we don't play well in a win."

On the defensive side of the ball, it is Barden, another All-League selection, who is the team leader. Playing linebacker, Barden anchors a defense that allowed just 9.9 points per game. Barden is supported in the defensive backfield by Reamer (All-League, eight INTs) and Jay (four INTs). But it is the defense as a unit that has done the job all season long.

"RJ has had a long career at North Quincy," said Connor. "He has really matured and is a rock on defense for us. But the whole defense has stepped up this year. They play fast and physical. Our defense has won us games all year long."

At one point this season, the defense went four games (16 quarters) allowing only one touchdown. North Quincy went 4-0 during that stretch.

The Raiders will have a tough opponent in Quincy. Don't be deceived by their 4-6 record. The Presidents could very easily be 7-3 as they were on the short-end of three one-point losses.

"The coaching staff has been keeping an eye on Quincy all year long," added Connor. "The play in a tough division (Keenan). This may be the best Quincy team I have seen in my five years coaching at North."

"They are well-rounded on offense, they are well-coached and they have the best defense in the league (12.4 points per game allowed). Plus they hold that Thanksgiving Day edge over us. It will be a tough game to win."

On defense the Raiders will have to deal with a productive QB-WR combination. Junior QB Lance Peterson (1-0 against NQ) has put up quality numbers (62-for-125, 10 TDs, 958 passing yards) this season. His favorite target has been senior WR Anthony Raddatz (27 catches, 526 yards, 10 TDs). Seniors Mark Gilbody (TD), Tim Lewis (two TDs), Zach Manning (TD), Stefon Davis and Max Devoe are joined by juniors Ed Jolicouer (two TDs) and Kenny Nguyen as potential threats.

"We are going to have to keep that offense contained," said Connor. "They have some dangerous players that can break open a game. We know Peterson can win on Thanksgiving and Raddatz is one of the best wide receivers in the league. It is all going to be about controlling the line of scrimmage against them."

On offense the Raiders need to keep an eye on All-League defender Tim Lewis (55 tackles, eight QB sacks). Lewis should receive help from fellow seniors Sean Gray (82 tackles, INT), EJ Louis (three QB sacks) and Zach Manning (sack) and juniors Ngozi Aguguo (three INTs) Kenny Nguyen (two INTs) and James Nguyen (four forced fumbles).

"Their defense is phenomenal," said Connor. "Very fast and physical. They can be a handful. We will need to try and wear them down. Quincy is a better team than their record indicates."

The Raiders' 6-4 record is a result of two straight losses to end the season. One, the 16-13 loss to Middleboro on Nov. 7 eliminated them from winning the Fisher Division, and the other was a 23-6 loss to Silver Lake on Nov. 14. Although they have dropped two in a row, Connor is not worried about his team losing focus against Quincy.

"One thing this group has going for them is that they will do whatever it takes to win. We take what is given to us and work off that. The loss to Middleboro hurt but we played hard and against Silver Lake it was close until the fourth quarter. I am not worried about us coming out flat against Quincy."

"These kids are all on the same page. They have all bought into the coaching staff's philosophy and the results have been positive."

Since Connor became head coach back in 2006 his teams have finished 1-10 and 6-5. This year's team, with a win, will finish 7-4. But the one constant has been the attitude and sportsmanship of his teams.

While playing in the Atlantic Coast League in 2006 and 2007, North was recognized by the league's coaches and awarded the Team Sportsmanship Award. In the first year in the Patriot League, North was again recognized and awarded the Team Sportsmanship Award by the league's coaches.

"It is something we are proud of," Connor said. "That is now 22 teams that have honored us for our sportsmanship on the field the last three years. It is good to see with success we have remained good sports on the field. But our focus right now is on Quincy and hopefully coming out Thanksgiving with a win."

every ball thrown to him he'll get and his has an uncanny ability to break tackles. He has good football instincts and is so explosive. Those two work well together."

Senior Tim Lewis, an All-League selection on defense, is also a threat on offense. Lewis has scored two TDs this fall. Seniors Mark Gilbody (TD, two FGs), Sean Gray, Zach Manning (TD), Bryan McGee and Max Devoe along with juniors Kenny Nguyen and Ed Jolicouer (two TDs) will pose challenges to the Red Raiders' defense as well.

Quincy averaged 12.0 points per game on offense this season.

On defense, the Presidents, behind the play of Lewis, held opponents to just under 13 points per game. Lewis (55 tackles, eight QB sacks) is supported on defense by senior captains Sean Gray (82 tackles) and EJ Louis (three QB sacks), seniors Zach Manning, Stefon Davis, Taylor Radcliffe, Pat Fernandez, Derek Andrews, Mark Gilbody, Bryan McGee and Raddatz.

Underclassmen Ngozi Aguguo (three INTs), Kenny Nguyen (two INTs) and James Nguyen (four forced fumbles) had an impressive junior class on defense.

On special teams, Reardon has no problem sending Mark Gilbody out there to kick in a pressure situation. Gilbody's 38-yard field goal at the tail end of the first half against Whitman-Hanson ended up being the difference in the game. Quincy won 3-0. Gilbody finished the season 2-for-4 on field goals tried.

When Quincy takes the field tomorrow they will be looking across the field at a different North Quincy squad. The Raiders possess a balanced offense, a great defense and a strong determined will to end this nine-game losing streak.

North has an All-League quarterback in junior Mike Stanton, four running backs who scored at least two touchdowns and a solid receiving core.

Stanton has thrown four TDs and rushed for two more while running backs Pat Watkins (six TDs), Joe Vialpando (five TDs), Brian Donahay (two TDs) and Terrence Staley (five TDs) have churned out yards and points at a rapid pace. Paul Reamer leads the team with two TDs from the wide receiver position.

North Quincy averaged 18.1 points per game on offense.

"We have definitely scouted them up," Reardon said. "I can tell you that Stanton is one heck of a quarterback. We can't let him be comfortable because he will kill us. They have two very good running backs in Watkins and Vialpando and even Staley is productive. We have to make sure we make tackles. We have to pursue the ball and hopefully keep them in check."

"They have a good offensive line but we have to create pressure and make Stanton move around. If he has time in the pocket we could be in trouble."

When Quincy and Peterson have the ball they would be smart to keep an eye on the Raiders' defensive backfield and linebacking core. Senior RJ Barden, an All-League selection on defense, is a beast at the linebacker spot and junior Paul Reamer, also an All-League choice, intercepted eight passes. Senior Matt Jay had four INTs.

Other Raiders who play major roles on defense include seniors Terrell Staley, Watkins, Nick Lawless, Vialpando, Joe Benoit, James Budukiewicz, Tim Stille and Chris Bergeron.

Juniors Joe McGee, Mike Benoit, Tommy Pettiti, Owen Kilcullen, Pablo Quinones, Dan Cedrone, Wesley McDonald, Terrence Staley and Trevor Richardson will also see time on defense.

The Raiders' defense pitched three shutouts this season and at one point played four straight games (16 quarters) and allowed just one offensive touchdown in that stretch.

"North has a very good defense and offense," said Reardon. "We can not turn the ball over against them and they do a good job forcing teams to do just that. We can't have stupid penalties and when we are on defense we can't miss tackles otherwise it could be a long game."

When it comes to the nine-game Thanksgiving Day winning streak, a streak that Reardon had been a part of before this year as QHS' defensive coordinator, he says the pressure is not on North Quincy but on his Presidents.

"If you ask my opinion I would think that they would have an advantage because they have that extra motivation. It has been nine years. But it doesn't matter, like I said earlier, the records and past performances do not apply. Whichever team plays mistake-free ball will win."

"It should make for an exciting game."

Average Homeowner Faces $500-Plus Tax Bill Increase

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Council Monday postponed action on the 2009 tax levy until Dec. 15, but the inevitable is looming and it's bad news.

The average homeowner faces at least a $500 plus minimum tax bill hike starting in January, according to testimony at the City Council's public hearing on the 2009 real estate tax.

According to the city's statistics, the average home in Quincy is valued at $347,000 and the tax increase will be about 15% or $582 under the current calculations.

Between now and Dec. 15, councillors plan to work with Mayor Thomas Koch to cut the budget by $2 million, but any cut will be minimal at best.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian

McNamee said if the council's best scenario becomes a reality, the tax bill increase for the average homeowner will be $534, and reduced by only $48.

City Council does not set the actual tax rate, but sets the percentage of the local tax levy for each class of real and personal property and the residential factor.

The state's Department of Revenue then uses all the data from the city and, in fact, calculates the tax rate.

The 2008 tax rate is $10.83 per $1000 value and the anticipated 2009 rate would be approximately $12.75 for single family homeowners.

The tax rate for commercial, industrial and business property is $22.22 and the anticipated tax rate for 2009 will be approximately $26.23.

"I fully understand the gravity of the economic situation we face and I know families are struggling," Koch said Tuesday, when discussing the proposed tax hike.

However, he added, "I believe we have a responsibility to provide the education, public safety and public services that are the hallmark of this community..."

Resident Carol Fischer of Wollaston doesn't see the tax problem that way.

Addressing councillors at the public hearing Monday, Fischer said the time to worry about the tax rate is when the budget is being prepared.

"I started shaking. I'm nauseated," Fischer said describing her response to the proposed $500 plus real es-

Takes Issue To Civil Service Commission

Smyth Files Complaint On Fire Chief 'Bypass'

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Deputy Fire Chief Gary Smyth's attorney filed a complaint Tuesday with the Civil Service Commission charging that Mayor Thomas Koch deliberately violated Civil Service rules when he bypassed Smyth for the fire chief's post.

"This is a very serious situation," said Attorney Betsy Ehrenberg who represents Smyth and outlined her charges at the City Council's Public Safety Committee Monday.

Ehrenberg charged that Koch broke or skirted the law repeatedly in the past months as he dodged promoting Smyth who, with another candidate, topped the current Civil Service list which does not expire until March 2010.

"It certainly won't be the first time that Civil Service blasts the City of Quincy," said Ehrenberg.

Ehrenberg suggested that Koch discouraged eligible candidates from accepting the fire chief's position in order to eliminate the current list and request a new Civil Service list with different candidates.

In early November, Koch called for a new Civil Service list when the number of eligible candidates dwindled from four to two and then only Smyth.

Smyth and Deputy Chief George McGonagle, originally, shared the top spot on the original list.

McGonagle outscored Smyth by a tenth of a point, but he declined the position as did Deputy Chief Jeffrey Starr after both determined they would not take the promotion.

Smyth was never offered

City Council Votes Tax Break For 'Citizen Soldiers'

City Council Monday unanimously approved a tax break for Quincy's "citizen soldiers" serving in foreign countries as proposed by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

The act must now be approved as a home rule petition by the state legislature.

Under the plan, the city will abate a portion of real estate taxes for military personnel on a need basis for the period they are deployed in foreign countries.

Applicants must meet eligibility requirements es-established by the Board of Assessors in conjunction with Veterans' Services.

KEVIN COUGHLIN

Coughlin said the tax break tells the military, "We're prepared as a city to stand up and support them."

"We have speeches. We have parades," said Coughlin, adding that now is the time to "put our money where our mouth is."

On hand for the discussion were members of 13 veterans groups from across the city led by spokesman Thomas Stansbury of the city's Veterans' Services Department. Members of the veterans groups represented veterans from World War II through the current Iraqi conflict.

In introducing the motion, Coughlin described today's military composed significantly of "citizen soldiers," men and women whose lives have been interrupted by the call to active duty and whose income has been devastated by reduced pay.

Coughlin said the city's current allowance for real estate tax deferral was not sufficient, "If you can't pay your bills now, you won't be able to pay them six months from now."

The tax abatement plan for soldiers was modeled on a similar program offered by Braintree for active military, according to Coughlin who expects Quincy, like Braintree, will cap the city's contribution at a total $100,000 and $20,000 a year with an expiration date in 2010.

Coughlin said that his research indicates there is a maximum pool of 83 Quincy men and women serving in the military.

However, the number of candidates eligible for the break is considerable lower, according to Coughlin who said most do not own real estate in the city.

Applicants must, also, qualify through a means test which substantiates a loss of earnings in comparing their civilian pay to their Armed Forces salary.

Gas Leak Evacuates 1,400 At Quincy High School

Quincy High School was evacuated of 1,400 students and faculty for the day Tuesday morning when workmen planting trees on the Saville Avenue side of the building broke a five-inch gas line.

No injuries were reported.

The leak was discovered about 9:30 a.m., said Deputy Fire Chief George McGonagle, and the Fire Department remained on the scene for two hours before it was under control.

"National Grid was called but they had a hard time finding the leak because it was buried in the ground," said McGonagle. "Some gas leaked into the building but it was less than 25 per cent of the explosive window."

The gas was back on line Tuesday afternoon, he said, and school was expected to resume Wednesday morning.

Workers from the Gilbane Building Company were planting the trees for their aesthetic value when they broke the line carrying gas at a rate of 23 pounds per square inch.

Will Challenge Leo Kelly

Margaret Laforest Candidate For Ward 1 Council Seat

Margaret Laforest, a Houghts Neck housewife and part-time events manager, plans to challenge the veteran Leo Kelly for the Ward 1 seat on the City Council in the November, 2009 election.

"Leo has done a great job," she said. "I have deep respect for him. But I feel it is time for a change. It's time to bring young energy to the Council."

Laforest, 33, who lives on Rock Island Road with her husband and their two daughters, said she plans to take out papers this week but won't begin serious campaigning until after the first of the year.

"I'm just starting to line things up right now," she said, noting that, as president of the Houghts Neck Community Council, she has some projects she wants to finish before announcing.

Laforest's roots go deep in Houghts Neck.

Her daughters, Kelsey, 13, an eighth grader at Sacred Heart School, and

MARGARET LAFOREST

Krista, 11, a sixth grader at Broad Meadows Middle School, are sixth generation Neckers.

Her husband, Jeff, is a technician with Verizon.

The candidate herself works part-time managing events in the Boston office of the Society of the Preservation of New England Antiquities, owners of the Josiah Quincy House.

A Quincy history buff, she helped to research the recent rehabilitation of the Abigail Adams Cairn by bringing a conservator out to evaluate the crumbling South Quincy landmark.

Her proudest moment came when she was a student in Broad Meadows Middle School.

"I suggested to Ron Adams that we get a ship to display that was built at the Fore River Shipyard," she said. "I wanted the Lexington but we couldn't get it. I was a sophomore in college when the Salem came to Quincy."

Laforest graduated from Quincy High School and enrolled at the University of Miami in Florida to study environmental engineering.

"But you can't take the Quincy girl out of Quincy," she said.

She left Miami short of graduating and obtained an associate's degree from Eastern Nazarene College in her hometown.

Laforest has helped campaign for several local candidates in the past, including Kelly and Mayor Tom Koch, and her mother, Betty McLean, worked for Mike Cheney.

"That was part of my inspiration for politics," she said.

STUDENTS at the Montclair School display some of the 873 items of canned goods they collected in their food drive to help the Quincy Crisis Center feed the needy during the holiday season.

Pearl Harbor Memorial Sunday At Morrisette Post

The Quincy Veterans Council will hold its 57th memorial service for all deceased Pearl Harbor veterans Sunday, Dec. 7, at 8 a.m. at the Morrisette Legion Post, 81-83 Liberty St., South Quincy.

The service will be conducted by the Rev. John Carl Swanson, pastor of the Union Congregational Church of Wollaston.

John Connolly of Quincy, a former Boston police officer and a Pearl Harbor survivor, will attend and Moe

Marad of the Morrisette Post will sing "God Bless America."

Larry Norton of the Quincy Veterans Council will speak on the threats terrorism present to the United States and flowers will be presented in the name of veterans of all American wars.

Robert LaFleur will sound Taps.

Assembly will be at 7:45 a.m. A breakfast will be served immediately after the service.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Dec. 2, 1867, English writer Charles Dickens gives his first public reading in the United States, in a New York City theater. Dickens was a hit with the American public. The line for his first reading was more than a mile long.

• On Dec. 6, 1884, in Washington, D.C., workers place a 9-inch aluminum pyramid atop a 555-foot tower of white marble, completing construction of the Washington Monument. A city law passed in 1910 restricted the height of new buildings to ensure that the monument would remain the tallest structure in Washington, D.C.

• On Dec. 5, 1933, the 21st Amendment to the U.S. Constitution is ratified, bringing an end to the era of national prohibition of alcohol. Mississippi, the last dry state in the Union, ended Prohibition in 1966.

• On Dec. 4, 1943, President Franklin Roosevelt closes the books on the Work Projects Administration (WPA), one of the government's most ambitious public-works programs. Fueled by $11 billion of government money, the program created jobs for 8.5 million people during the Depression.

• On Dec. 3, 1967, 53-year-old Lewis Washkansky receives the first human heart transplant in Cape Town, South Africa. Washkansky was given drugs to keep his body from rejecting the heart, but those drugs also left him susceptible to sickness, and 18 days later he died from double pneumonia.

• On Dec. 7, 1982, the first execution by lethal injection takes place at the state penitentiary in Huntsville, Texas. Charles Brooks Jr., convicted of murdering an auto mechanic, received an intravenous injection of sodium pentothal, the barbiturate that is known as a "truth serum" when administered in lesser doses.

• On Dec. 1, 1990, in the Channel Tunnel, or "Chunnel," 132 feet below the English Channel, workers drill through a wall of rock, connecting the two ends of an underwater tunnel linking Great Britain with the European mainland. The Channel Tunnel opened for passenger service on May 6, 1994.

Three Little Words

It's that time again.

The sneezing, wheezing and coughing season. Everybody's doing it. Or will be soon.

The guy sitting behind you in church. (Why didn't he stay home?) The waitress putting away her handkerchief and asking, "What can I get for you?" The woman in the supermarket squeezing the tomatoes or grapes.

And if you haven't heard it yet, you soon will: Someone sneezing telling someone coughing, "It's going around. Everybody's got it."

We all can't escape it.

But, says Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, we can help keep from getting it and spreading it.

He still has a few words of advice. Three to be exact: "Wash your hands!"

Good advice anytime. But especially now with the seasonal variety of ailments and germs beginning to float around.

"Washing your hands," Scheele says, "is the most effective way to prevent the spread of germs."

"Don't just sprinkle a little water on them. Wash your hands with hot water and soap while rotating them."

"Wash them for at least 20 seconds or about the time it takes you to sing 'Happy Birthday'."

And he adds:

"It's disgusting to see a guy walking out of the men's room without washing his hands, touch a door handle someone else will touch after him, and going back to his table and handle a roll or butter someone else is going to eat."

Scheele says owners or managers of restaurants and other eating-places should continuously stress to their food handlers the importance of washing their hands.

And as a reminder to employees and patrons of eating establishments he has had notices posted in restrooms urging them to wash their hands.

He believes there should be as much public focus on washing hands as there is on smoking.

"Dirty hands are right up there with cigarettes and second-hand smoke as a health threat," he says.

Unwashed hands run in some families like a sort of tradition, he says.

"If you see kids who don't wash their hands, it's usually because their parents don't."

"And their parents before them probably didn't. And the kids will grow up and become parents and their kids won't be washing their hands either. And, so on!"

He also notes you seldom see characters in a movie or TV sitcom wash their hands before sitting down to eat.

"It would be a nice reminder to viewers if the characters were shown washing their hands once in awhile."

And to be extra safe from germs, Scheele suggests that you wash your hands first chance you get after shaking hands with someone.

Another culprit in the spread of germs, he says, is the kitchen sponge.

"It's a bacteria carrier," he says. "It is used, say to wipe a cutting board and then rinsed off. But that's not enough.

"Bacteria can develop and then spread when the sponge is used to wipe the kitchen counter or that cutting board again."

If you want to keep that sponge from spreading germs, he has a couple of tips:

Put it in a microwave turned on high for a minute. Or, in the dishwasher for a cycle.

Another villain in the battle against germs is the guy who thinks nothing of taking a swig of milk direct from the carton and putting it back in the refrigerator with his mouth all over the opening or from the orange juice container.

And those who drink from the same glass are gambling with their health, he says.

But the best defense against infections and diseases comes in those three little words: Wash your hands.

That means all of us.

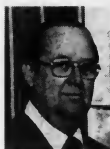

It's pretty simple and inexpensive.

No prescription required.

Just a bar of soap.

THEY WERE THERE again at last week's Quincy-North Quincy football game.

FAGERLUND

BURKE

QHS grads Mike

Fagerlund, retired Board of Assessors chairman, and Atty. George Burke, former state representative, district attorney and city councillor.

Fagerlund, class of 1935 for his 71st Q-N game and Burke, class of 1950, for his 65th. Fagerlund, who recently turned 90, wasn't going to miss it.

Both of course were rooting for their alma mater. But Burke confesses he finally cheered for North Quincy. Not in this game, but in the Quincy-North freshmen game. His grandson, Sebastian, plays end for North.

Although the 76-year rivalry is now a Thanksgiving Day tradition, the game was not always played on that day.

The early ones, starting in 1933 were played on Armistice Day (Veterans Day) and on a few Saturdays.

The first played on Thanksgiving Day was in 1938, the first at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1916 postcard reproduction showing the old West Quincy depot now the site of Biondi's service station across from Curry Hardware on Willard Street. Biondi's new 80-foot giant billboard is located just about where the West Quincy sign is shown here. This depot was built in 1871 when the Old Colony Railroad opened for Quincy granite that was quarried in the hills overlooking it. The derrick on the left was used to load granite blocks onto the railroad cars. The railroad tracks here were partly built on the roadbed of the first railway in America. That old right-of-way is now the path of the Southeast Expressway through East Milton and West Quincy. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Bruce Tait Reelected Police Union President

Officer Bruce Tait, whose bitter feud with Chief Robert Crowley ended when Crowley took early retirement, has been reelected to a fourth term as president of the Quincy Police Patrol Officers Association.

Tait defeated Detective James Lencki for a second time by a vote of 71 to 41 with 30 members not voting.

Officer Scott Smith was elected vice president; Officer Peter Curley was elected treasurer; and Officer Steve O'Donoghue was elected secretary. All three were unopposed.

$2 Million To Bail Out Red Tide Fisherman

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) plans to bail out those in the shellfish industry affected by this season's red tide to the tune of $2 million.

"While this certainly does not make up for all the economic losses that our fishermen have faced," said Congressman Bill Delahunt, "I am pleased that the federal government has stepped up and provided some relief for those who have been hurt hard by the most recent red tide outbreak.

"The health of New England's shellfish industry is vital to the economic health of our coastal communities and we must do more to help our fishermen during these difficult times."

The algal bloom known as the red tide began closing shellfish bed on Cape Cod in May and gradually spread north preventing fishermen from harvesting clams, mussels, oysters and other shellfish.

Koch Rejects Zoning Change To Increase High-Rise Density

Mayor Thomas Koch has rejected efforts to increase high-rise density in Business C zones and formally notified City Council this week of his decision.

The decision immediately impacts a three-year legal battle between Marina Bay residents and developer Thomas O'Connell over plans for a high-rise apartment building on Victory Road, North Quincy.

"I do not believe it is appropriate to enact laws amid ongoing court cases, and this could set a troubling precedent for the future," said Koch who has been heavily lobbied by both sides of the issue.

Under current zoning, O'Connell can build only 25 units on the 1.5-acre on Victory Road while the change would have allowed 80 units on the same lot.

The issue is, currently, in Land Court and the judge has asked to be kept informed of any city action on the zoning.

Koch acknowledged that the zoning code on the issue needs to be clarified and a zoning task force studying all the city's districts will address the Business C zoning.

"It is my hope that a comprehensive plan will lead to a compromise that fosters sustainable development across the city," Koch said.

The Attorney General's legal staff, according to City Solicitor James Timmins will now determine any further action on the controversial issue this year.

Timmins said Monday that he will ask the Attorney General's office to resolve a contradiction between the state law, which indicates the mayor's decision is final, and the city's charter which allows City Council to override the mayor's veto with a two-thirds vote.

The zoning issue would affect other parcels in such areas as North Quincy; Wollaston, and Quincy Center.

City Councillor Michael McFarland, originally, recommended the change in December 2007, but the issue was held over and reconsidered last spring.

The City Council approved the revision Nov. 10 by a 6-3 vote with the majority citing the need for smart growth in the city.

Councillors Brian McNamee, Ward 6; Douglas Gutro, Ward 5, and Daniel Raymondi, Ward 2, opposed the change after outlining the impact traffic and heavy density would have on neighborhoods in their districts.

JOHN KOZAK, son of Richie and Margie Kozak of North Quincy, recently graduated from Daniel Webster College in New Hampshire. He received a bachelor of science degree in aviation science and a commercial pilot's license. Kozak is working as a flight instructor at Horizon Aviation in Providence, R.I.

Neighborhood Meeting Dec. 11 On Proposed Project At 580 Quarry St.

Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis will host a neighborhood meeting Thursday, Dec. 11 at 7 p.m. at the Common Market, 97 Willard St., to discuss a proposal by Galvin Construction to develop six (6) townhouse style condominium buildings at 580 Quarry St.

The purpose of the meeting is to give neighbors the opportunity to ask questions and voice their concerns to representatives of Galvin Construction regarding their proposal for construction.

"The current proposal by Galvin Construction is a revision of the previously approved plans for the construction of a 22-unit, three story apartment style building," Davis said.

For more information about the meeting, contact Davis at 617-834-3945 or jdavis@ci.quincy.ma.us.

Fore River Bridge Design Work Ahead Of Schedule

Design work for the new Fore River Bridge is under way several years ahead of the original schedule.

But you could be driving a 2015 Toyota or Chevy when you first drive over it.

"This is positive news for the tens of thousands of commuters and drivers who utilize the Fore River Bridge every day," said Sen. Bob Hedlund, the Weymouth Republican who is the ranking minority member of the Joint Legislative Committee on Transportation.

"The bridge is a gateway to the South Shore and my district. We need a permanent span in place as soon as possible."

For the past five years, traffic between Quincy Point and North Weymouth has been using a temporary bridge, known locally as "the erector set," built at a cost of $40 million and designed to last 15 years.

Construction on the new permanent bridge was not slated to begin until 2017 with completion in 2021. Under the new schedule, said Hedlund, the start could move up to late 2011 and construction completed in 2015.

A $3 billion borrowing package put together by Gov. Deval Patrick and approved by the Legislature during the summer contained the funding needed to move the design date forward.

The design of the new bridge will be either a vertical lift like the temporary bridge or a draw bridge known as "double lead bascule" like the old bridge which was built in 1936 and recently demolished.

The engineering firm of STV Inc. has been awarded a contract to perform the preliminary design work and will be conducting environmental assessments of the area and begin the lengthy permitting process over the next year.

The process will include public hearings for nearby residents, business owners and commuters, who come from Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate and other South Shore towns.

"I have told MassHighway and STV that I expect them to listen carefully to the comments and concerns voiced by those who are going to be most impacted by the construction of the new bridge," said Hedlund.

Ward 4 Council Candidate Palmucci Kicks Off Dec. 9

Brian Palmucci, an early candidate for the City Council from Ward 4, will kick off his campaign with a reception Tuesday, Dec. 9, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Common Market, 97 Willard St., West Quincy.

The suggested donation is $25 per person.

Palmucci, a 30-year-old lawyer who prosecutes sexually dangerous persons for the State Department of Corrections, said he's running "to bring fresh ideas and a new vision to the City Council."

"Working together we can change this city for the better. Elect me to the City Council and I will be a tireless watchdog for our neighborhood, ensuring our city's streets are safer."

Palmucci, who lives on Willard Street, was critical of current Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis, who, he said, "badly bungled" the handling of a controversial billboard that towers over the road.

"If I were on the council," he said, "I would have worked with the neighbors before that roadside blight was put up. If elected I will continue to fight for its removal."

"Our current councillor failed us by not being responsive to the community. Put me on the council and I will make constituent services my top priority. I will return every call and listen to all of my constituents' concerns."

Palmucci promised to encourage "smart and responsible development" that would expand the city's tax base and protect the unique character of the neighborhood.

"I will be an effective advocate for development that makes sense for the neighborhood," he said.

He also vowed to use his law enforcement experience to help fight the city's drug problem.

"As a state and local prosecutor, I have stood up for our most vulnerable citizens," he said, "putting criminals behind bars for preying on children and the elderly."

"I will bring the same compassion and common sense to City Hall that I bring each and every day to the courtroom."

Palmucci, who earned a degree in political science from UMass-Amherst in 2000 and graduated from New England School of Law in 2004. Began his legal career as assistant district attorney in Plymouth County.

A onetime president of the Ward 4 Neighborhood Association and current member of the board of directors, he has also served on Mayor Tom Koch's Wind Facility Ordinance Committee.

He is a member of the Quincy Environmental Network, the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library, the Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum and the Sons of Italy.

Palmucci grew up in Pembroke, where he was a member of the School Committee before moving to Quincy with his wife, Alison, an elementary school teacher.

Deadline For Nominations Dec. 31

Nominations Coming In For Sun 'Citizen Of The Year'

Nominations are coming in for The Quincy Sun's 24th annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Robert and Gloria Noble were honored for their service to worthy community causes for more than a half century. They are the first husband and wife team – and the 24th and 25th recipients – of the award.

The Nobles were selected for the honor by a panel of judges from among 44 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears on this page in this week's issue of The Quincy Sun.

Nominations will close Wednesday, Dec. 31. After nominations close, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from nominations submitted.

If you know someone you would like to see recognized with the 2008 award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address by Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for the their nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor, friend or community activist who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Those nominated in the past are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, each nominee has an equal chance of being selected regardless of the number of nominations received. Anyone nominated just once has the same chance of being the award recipient.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

Smyth Files Complaint On Fire Chief 'Bypass'

the job.

"He's never been told why he's been bypassed," said Ehrenberg who noted that other candidates rejected the promotion due to the salary.

Ehrenberg suggested that Smyth would probably have accepted a pay cut. "They likely feared he would accept."

Ehrenberg, also, cited Koch's appointment of former Deputy Chief Joseph Barron as acting chief of the department; "There's no such thing as an 'acting chief.'"

Ehrenberg said that Barron's appointment creates "a status that does not exist under the law."

In addition, Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee noted that the 'acting chief' is not on the Civil Service list.

Smyth attended Monday's meeting as did Ernie Arienti, president of the firefighters' union and, approximately 25 of Smyth's supporters.

Arienti said he was not there to support any candidate, but to provide factual information on the contract and the history of the city's appointments.

"Did we call for a new list when there were only two persons (in the past)?" asked City Council President Jay Davis.

Arienti said that, in the past, mayors used such a list.

In fact, Davis said that the Civil Service list for chief was down to two candidates when the current Police Chief Paul Keenan, Koch's brother-in-law, was chosen last June.

City Solicitor Jim Timmins reminded councillors and the public that Chief Keenan was recommended by a committee headed by Sheriff Michael Bellotti and that Koch had no part in the selection process.

Both Timmins and First Assistant Solicitor Kevin Madden described Koch's efforts to make the best appointment in accordance with Civil Service.

Timmins said that Koch inherited "a police department in turmoil" and a no-show fire chief.

"We had issues," Timmins said, noting the 'acting chief' (Smyth) had taken over reins of the department."

"The mayor's focus is on the fire department," said Timmins, adding that "no such by-pass did occur" and that Koch followed the process.

Timmins said he would not allow "Koch's name and reputation to be besmirched."

Coughlin, and Finn, along with other councillors praised Smyth's work at the department.

"It sickens me to be here," said Smyth, noting that he loved his work and the city.

In formal session later Monday, City Council unanimously approved a resolution urging the mayor to "abide by Civil Service and union contracts" as recommended by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond.

Nicholas Hamlet Receives Freedom Alliance Scholarship

For the fourth straight year, Nicholas Hamlet of Quincy, has received the Freedom Alliance Scholarship for children of US service members who have been killed or permanently disabled in an operational mission or training accident.

Hamlet, a senior at Suffolk University, studying business accounting, is the son of Mrs. Donna Clark, and PFC Wayne Hamlet.

"We are proud to grant this scholarship to such an impressive student as Nicholas Hamlet," said Freedom Alliance President Tom Kilgannon. "The purpose of this scholarship is to help alleviate the financial burdens of college tuition and also to honor the service or our military heroes through the achievements of their sons and daughters."

Nicholas's father PFC Wayne Hamlet, U.S. Army was classified 100% permanently disabled after a service connected incident during the Vietnam War. He was awarded numerous medals and commendations including the National Defense Service Medal and the Vietnam Service Medal.

Average Homeowner Faces $500-Plus Tax Bill Increase

tate tax increase. "Quincy is made up of a lot of average Joes" who can't afford such a hike.

"There's a problem with our system," said Fisher who repeated her warnings of a year ago when she warned the same councillors.

Fisher said councillors can not continue to separate the tax rate from the budget by discussing the budget in July and the tax rate in December.

When discussing the budget, Financial Director Warren Sproul said that the rule of thumb was $24 in taxes for every one million in the budget.

Among the factors impacting this year's tax rate is a slower growth, according to Chief Assessor Marion Fantuccio who told councillors the city expected a $5 million in increased growth while the actual growth was slightly over $3 million.

"We had to adjust new growth because of declining values," said Fantuccio.

"We all have to recognize we are in a recession," said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi.

Koch's office provided a list of issues affecting the tax rate which included $5.1 million in budget costs previously paid through water and sewer costs, a $1.7 million underpayment for debt last year, $1.4 million in unfunded employee benefits and additional expenses for the Honeywell Energy agreement.

This is the largest single year increase in more than 10 years, but the average homeowner also endured a $522 increase in 2002 and a $550 increase in 2004.

Last year's average increase was $65.

One of the major problems with this year's budget is the city is just $56,000 under the city's tax levy limit, according to finance Committee Chairman John Keenan.

The levy limit determines how much can be raised without asking the voters to approve an increase.

If an emergency occurs, residents "probably wouldn't accept an override," said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi.

It's unlikely that residents would vote to approve an override and increase their real estate taxes even more.

Mayor Koch's Statement On Proposed Tax Rate:

Mayor Koch's statement on proposed tax rate:

"Our administration is focused on two main priorities: Righting our fiscal ship and maintaining the core services our residents expect and deserve. While an incredibly tough decision, I believe it is the right one now and the right one to protect the future of our city.

"I fully understand the gravity of the economic situation we face, and I know families are struggling. But I believe we have a responsibility to provide the education, public safety, and public services that are the hallmark of this community and will be for many years to come.

"We make this decision now to ensure we are not in the same situation moving forward. We face uncertainty on several levels, and the prospect of deep cuts in state aid is real. If we do not take action now to get on solid footing, the situation may only become worse.

"I am confident in Quincy's future, and I know we will not only weather this storm, but emerge a stronger city."

Budget Do-it-Yourself Moving Tips

(ARA) - If you're one of the approximately 50 million Americans moving this year, you probably don't want to spend a fortune to get from point A to point B. With a little planning ahead, it's possible to execute a do-it-yourself move without breaking the bank.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, about 16 percent of all moves are work-related -- moving to find a new job or to be closer to a current job. Whatever your reason for moving, you don't have to pay a company to pack up your belongings and transport them to your new home. Here are some easy ways to move yourself and stay on budget:

- If you need to rent a truck or trailer, especially if you only have a few large items that can't fit into your vehicle, check out your local big box retail hardware store. They often rent trucks and trailers by the hour at a fraction of the cost of renting from a moving company.

- Collect free boxes from friends, family and from local grocery and liquor stores. Save old newspapers to wrap valuables in instead of purchasing expensive rolls of bubble wrap.

- Plug in the refrigerator at your new place a day or two ahead of time. Pack frozen and perishable foods in a cooler with ice packs and unpack that food into your new fridge first. Having your food melt or go bad means an additional, and expensive, trip to the grocery store.

- Pick up change of address forms, free of charge, from the post office. Request a free "welcome kit" from the local chamber of commerce in your new community. These kits contain valuable information and often include money saving coupons for local businesses.

- Pack wisely and avoid filling boxes so much that they're too heavy for you to lift without help. You'll get more done with each person carrying their own box.

- Clear a path. Before you lift a load, make sure you've got a clear path to your destination. You won't be able to see well or move obstacles out of your way once the load is in your arms.

- Use the right tools for the job. Hand trucks can be rented inexpensively and should be used to transport multiple boxes at once or smaller items of furniture. Remember that hand trucks are not good for moving items up or down stairs and are difficult to maneuver around tight turns. For large pieces of furniture, appliances, stairs and tight spaces, try the Shoulder Dolly, an ergonomically designed, patented harness system that allows users to lift with their legs and safely pick up virtually any heavy or bulky item in the home (www.ShoulderDolly.com).

Working in two-person teams, users simply strap into the Shoulder Dolly, slip the carrying strap under the item to be lifted, and then use their leg muscles to lift the weight. By using your legs (your strongest muscles), the Shoulder Dolly significantly decreases the strain and risk of injury to your lower back, hands, biceps and forearms.

- Don't end up in the hospital. When lifting a load, keep your back straight and bend your knees. Keep your head up and look straight ahead to ensure your back remains perpendicular to the ground. Hold the object securely and use the large, powerful leg muscles to lift the weight. Avoid twisting or turning at the waist when lifting. Turn your entire body by moving your hips first, which will force your shoulders to stay in line.

Open Door Policy

Q. I read somewhere that when getting a home ready for sale, a person should balance any doors that won't stay open. How does one balance the doors? When I contacted a handyman and asked if he would give me a price to balance three doors, he didn't seem to know what I was talking about. Please help. — Edna and Jim, via e-mail

A. "Balance" probably means shimming up the doors so that they hang straight on their hinges, allowing them to open and close freely. But that doesn't guarantee that the door won't swing shut on its own. Houses sometimes settle onto their foundations at a very slight angle, just enough that doors opposite that angle will slowly swing shut on their own.

A balanced door is a nice touch, but personally, as a home buyer, a door that swings shut by itself is not one of the "big things" I would look for. I would be more interested in how well-cared for the interior and exterior look, and if the house is right for my needs, because I can fix a poorly hung door anytime.

If you must have balanced doors, though, you can adjust their angle by a few degrees using shims. A shim is just a thin piece of wood or cardboard inserted behind one or both hinge plates in the doorframe. The difference in thickness repositions the hinge angle just slightly to either lift or lower one corner of the door.

To match the angle of the door to the angle of the house, use a level (a straight measuring tool with bubble indicators, ideally for both vertical and horizontal measurements). Mark the bubble's balance point on both the wall next to the doorframe, and on the hinge end of the door itself.

Using a helper, unscrew the hinge plates from the frame and insert a shim (trimmed the same size as the hinge) in either the top or bottom inset, depending on whether the door's angle needs to go up or down. Screw the plates back on (the screws will go through the shim material) and check the level again.

Balancing a door to match the angle of the house this way will take several attempts, which is why I'm not sure it's worth the time spent. But if it's worth it to you, that's what is important.

QUINCY POLICE Officers Matt Miller and James Den-tremont use the "Lifesaver" equipment as they track the signal from the transmitter.

Quincy Police Receive Training In Lifesaver Program

Ten members of the Quincy Police Department recently attended a two-day Project Lifesaver training course at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office in Braintree.

The program assists police officers in locating people who may have autism, Dementia and other related problems and are fitted with a tracking device. The officers learned how to use the tracking device, so that one day if a person goes missing, they would be able to quickly find the person and reunite them with their family.

For more information on Project Lifesaver, contact Quincy Police Communications Operator Carol Flynn at (617) 479-1212 or Lieutenant Dan Minton at (617) 745 5719.

On Friday, November 21, 2008 at 1:48 p.m., Officer Mark Millane, along with Sergeant Dan Flaherty, Lieutenant Brian Tobin and Detective Brian Coen responded to the area of 1260 Furnace Brook Parkway for a call of a suspicious male in the area, looking in backyards. Upon arrival, Officer Millane spoke with owners of a local business, who stated that around 1:30 P.M., a white male in his early 20's wearing a dark colored hooded jacket and dark pants walked into the family business and asked what time it was and then left. A short time later, the same man walked back into the business and asked him if he could use the bathroom. He was told that he could not and then left.

The business owner watched as the suspect crossed the street and entered the back yard of a neighbor. Officer Millane spoke with the owner of that residence, who said that he found the suspect in his yard and confronted him.

The suspect asked the resident, "Someone stole a bike. Do you have a 15-year-old son?" The homeowner told him no and watched as the suspect walked over to the area of Rustic Place. The suspect was last seen in the rear of a home on Rustic Place, so officers were directed there to search.

While in the rear of a home on Rustic Place, Officers observed that the back window of a residence was broken, with a large amount of broken glass on the back deck and inside the residence. There was also a large rock on the back porch, along with a Nokia cell phone, an iPod and a gold chain with a name and 12/4/07 written on the emblem. Detective Dave Pacino also found a single gold earring and a silver diamond ring. These items were photographed and secured as evidence.

LT. DAN MINTON

A Job Well Done

Traces of blood were also found and swabbed as evidence. Additional Officers responded to the area to search for the suspect. During this time, Officer Michael Duran was dispatched to the rear of 290 Quarry St. on a report of a disorder in the parking lot. Upon arrival, the officer interviewed the victim who was standing by his vehicle. He said that moments earlier he was going out to his car when he observed a male (that he described as matching the suspect) rummaging through his vehicle. He approached the suspect, who then began to talk about money and Oxycontin owed to him by the car owner.

The car owner said he had never seen the suspect before and did not owe him anything.

The suspect started bragging about being from "Southie," and then said, "Give me your money or I'll stab you."

The victim said he did not see a knife but the suspect kept his hands hidden in his jacket pockets and alluded to a knife. The car owner gave the suspect a five-dollar bill and some ones and the suspect then fled the parking lot towards Quarry Street. The car owner was unsure what was missing from his vehicle.

Lt. Tobin, who also responded to the area, spoke with a Federal Express driver, who stated that he saw the suspect flee through a wooded area. Lt. Tobin directed officers to the Churchill Road area to catch up with the suspect.

A few minutes later, a call came in that a man was running through yards on Mount Ararat Road, so Detectives Jim Lencki, Karyn Barkas and Officer Don Sautter responded to the area. They worked their way through the backyards and spotted the suspect running towards them. They approached the suspect and ordered him to show his hands, but he refused, then looked around as if preparing an escape route.

At this point, Detective Lencki grabbed the suspect's arm to detain him. The suspect tried to elbow the detective in the head and this led to the suspect being brought to the ground. In the suspect's hand was a small bag of a green leafy substance, which appeared to be marijuana. He then started yelling "I'm from Southie and I am going to kick your %$#, you big nosed *&^." The suspect was frisked but did not have a knife or other weapon.

The suspect also had three credit cards and an identification card from Wentworth Institute of Technology with someone else's name on them. It was soon determined that the cards belonged to the homeowner where the break occurred. Sergeant Flaherty brought the owner of the business where the suspect was first observed in the area to identify the suspect. She confirmed his identity and added that he was the same person who walked into the neighbor's yard. Based on the above information and circumstances, the suspect, a 21-year-old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest for "Breaking and Entering" of the residence on Rustic Place.

During booking, one diamond earring and a small amount of cash was also found on the suspect, which is believed to have been taken in the break or from the car owner. In addition, the suspect was holding an identification card that belonged to the car owner.

The suspect was also charged with "Armed Robbery, Breaking and Entering into a Motor Vehicle, Receiving Stolen Credit Cards, Knowingly Resisting Arrest, Assault on a Police Officer, and Possession of Class D Drug." Nice Work!

CAR BREAKS UP! According to Detective/Lieutenant John Steele, in the past three weeks, there have been 49 motor vehicle breaks, with 37 in the Wollaston/North Quincy area. Many of the vehicles were unlocked while others were entered by smashing a window. In many of the cases, GPS units were stolen. There has also been a trend in commercially marked vans, where tools and Sanders were taken. The breaks have occurred during all hours. If you see anyone acting suspiciously, observe a vehicle or bicyclist riding through your neighborhood that creates suspicion, please contact the Quincy Police Department so that we can check them out.

BALL OF THE FOOT

Metatarsalgia is a condition in which the metatarsal region of the foot (located just behind the toes and referred to as the ball of the foot) becomes painful and inflamed. Metatarsal is the area in the forefoot that contains five bones. These bones run through the forefoot from the arch in the mid-foot to the base of the toe joints. Pain associated with this condition is usually most noticeable in the area behind the smaller, second, third, and fourth toes. The pain can either be a dull ache or a sharp pain throughout the bottom of the foot. Other symptoms may include numbness or tingling in the toes or callusing that develops on the middle toes.

When you first visit our offices because you are experiencing pain and/or unusual symptoms, we'll conduct a physical exam and diagnostic tests to determine your foot problem. Once a diagnosis is made, we'll develop a treatment plan designed to relieve your discomfort and/or correct the problem. We offer a wide range of technologically advanced podiatric treatments and procedures at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Please call us for an appointment at 781-986-3668. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

P.S. Metatarsalgia can develop from poorly fitting shoes and improper posture when walking.

Quincy Senior Scores Three
2nd-Half Touchdowns

Lewis Leads Presidents Past Red Raiders

By SEAN BRENNAN

It is getting difficult to label the Quincy Presidents as the underdog on Thanksgiving.

For the second consecutive season, the Presidents entered the final game of the year against the North Quincy Red Raiders with the lesser record and came out on top. This time around Quincy took the field at Veterans Memorial Stadium with a 4-6 overall record while North Quincy had a 6-4 overall record. But behind a dominating second half performance by senior running back Tim Lewis, the Presidents stormed back from a 10-6 halftime deficit to knock-off North Quincy 27-17 for their tenth straight holiday victory and the team's 14th win in the last 15 years in this game.

"It felt good. There was a lot of pressure there," said Quincy's first-year head coach Bill Reardon, a defensive coordinator on retired coach Bob Noble's staff for the previous nine Thanksgiving Day victories. "It felt really good to get this first one. All season long these kids have been resilient. We lost three games this season by one point so they had dealt with some adversity but every day they came back to practice, buckled their chinstraps and went back to work."

"And in a game like this that experience plays out. But I am especially proud of the whole team because on Thanksgiving there are kids who step up and perform who you just don't expect. That is the great thing about Thanksgiving. A great win for our team."

The momentum of the

FOOTBALL
Quincy - 27
North Quincy - 17

game shifted 180 degrees after the halftime break. The Red Raiders behind a second quarter two-yard touchdown run by junior Terrence Staley and a half-time-ending field goal led 10-6 at the break. North Quincy completely dominated the Presidents in the first-half (the Raiders forced three Quincy turnovers), but just like last year when North held a 7-6 lead at the break and fell apart in the second half, the Presidents once again outplayed them and snatched a victory from the clutches of defeat.

The Raiders took the ball first to start the third quarter and went three-and-out. On the ensuing punt, the Raiders were flagged for a personal foul (facemask) that put the ball at the NQ-34 yard line. Quincy, beginning at this point, boarded the Tim Lewis express to victory.

Lewis, a Patriot League All-League selection on defense, rumbled for 11 yards on two carries, taking the ball to the NQ-21 yard line. Two carries later, Lewis rushed 16 yards into the end zone for the first of three-second half touchdowns, giving Quincy its first lead at 13-10.

The Raiders seemed shaken by Lewis' TD. On their next possession the team went three-and-out again. Looking to punt the ball away, Quincy's EJ Louis got a mitt on the punt and blocked it. North's RJ Barden recovered the blocked punt and advanced it deep into Presidents' territory, but after a long conference by the referees, the call was reversed and Quincy got the ball back at the point of Louis' block. A very confusing situation and one NQ head coach Jim Connor had difficulty explaining after the game.

"Apparently if it is a blocked punt and we caught it one-yard back further we would have had the ball on their 25-yard line going in. But they (referees) said it crossed the line and they said they (Quincy) didn't touch it when it looked like it was bouncing around."

"The ref said to me that we caught it cleanly one-yard behind the line of scrimmage so therefore it is Quincy's ball right there. It is just frustrating and no way am I making an excuse but those kinds of things happen and it is out of our hands at that point."

Quincy immediately took advantage of the referees call. Following a clutch quarterback sneak by junior QB Lance Peterson (2-0 on Thanksgiving) on third down and after luckily recovering a fumble by Lewis deep in Raider territory, the Presidents went up 20-10 at the start of the fourth quarter when Lewis barreled into the end zone from five-yards out. 14 unanswered points later put Quincy 11 minutes from pay dirt.

THE RED RAIDERS, led by senior captains Terrell Staley (#48) and RJ Barden (#55), storm out of the tunnel at the start of the second half. NQ held a 10-7 halftime advantage, but Quincy outscored NQ 21-7 after the break to win 27-17.

Quincy Sun photos/Larry Carchedi

NORTH QUINCY'S R. J. Barden (#55) advances a blocked punt into Quincy territory. The officials overturned Barden's heads-up play and the football went back to the Presidents.

RUNNING BACK TIM LEWIS (#31), pictured here following the block of Zach Manning (#33), scored three touchdowns in the second half to pace the Presidents to a convincing 27-17 win over North Quincy. Quincy has now won 10 Thanksgiving Day games in a row.

QUINCY'S SEAN GRAY (center) was on the receiving end of a 19-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Lance Peterson late in the second quarter. Gray's TD put the score at 7-6 NQ with minutes to go before halftime.

QUINCY'S KENNY NGUYEN (#22) intercepted a pass in the fourth quarter with his team leading 20-17. Nguyen's INT led to the Presidents final touchdown of the game.

Quincy Recreation Offering Ski, Snowboard Lessons

Quincy Recreation Director Barry J. Welch announces the department will conduct registration beginning Dec. 9 at 9 a.m. for a program of ski and snowboard instruction to be held at the Blue Hill Ski Area. Registration can also be done online at QuincyRec.com.

This program is open to Quincy youngsters age 8 through high school and features a one-hour and thirty minute lesson for beginners to advanced use of ski tow and transportation to and from the ski area.

The staff of the QRD supervises the transportation and certified instructors of the Blue Hill Ski School provide the lesson instruction.

This program will be conducted on Tuesdays, beginning Jan. 6, 2009, and will continue for five weekly lessons. The cost is $168.00 and is payable at the time of registration. The Blue Hill Ski Area can provide rental equipment at an additional cost.

Arrangements for rental equipment will be done by the Recreation Department at the time of registration. Five-week rental of skis/snowboards, boots and poles is $75; helmets can also be rented for $25. The program leaves from the QRD office, One Merrymount Parkway, at 3:15 p.m. and returns at 6:30 p.m.

The Blue Hill Ski Area is opening this year with increased snowmaking output and upgrades to its lighting systems. The always-popular program should be even better with the Division of Recreation and Conservation committed to making the unique facility into a first-class ski center for the metropolitan area.

The registration will continue at the QRD as long as openings exist. There is limited enrollment available for this activity.

For more information, call the QRD at 617-376-1394.

But the Red Raiders were not dead just yet. Junior All-League quarterback Michael Stanton, on North's next play from scrimmage, found a wide-open Paul Reamer in the middle of the field. Reamer sprinted 58-yards down the right sidelines for a touchdown. The catch-and-run cut Quincy's lead to 20-17 with 10:38 to play in the game.

"That play was something that we saw that we wanted to go after," said Connor. "We saw that their coverage had opened up and we just hit it."

This huge play swung momentum North Quincy's way. On Quincy's next possession, NQ's Matt Jay intercepted Peterson's attempted pass to Anthony Raddatz. The fourth Quincy turnover of the game could have been costly if not for the game-changing play from the Presidents' Kenny Nguyen.

Stanton dropped back to pass and fired a bullet to Reamer on a slant. Nguyen, reading Stanton's eyes the whole way, jumped the route and came away with an interception, giving the Presidents the ball at the NQ-39 yard line. Five Tim Lewis runs later, including a backbreaking 11-yard TD, Quincy led 27-17. Lewis finished the game with 143 yards on 26 carries and three TDs. He also finished the game with two quarterback sacks on defense.

"The whole team emotionally stepped up in the second half," said Lewis after the game. "Everyone was just fired up when we came back onto the field after halftime. It just felt great to come away with a win. It was a great way to end the season."

"Timmy is a load," said Reardon. "He's tough to bring down. He doesn't have super speed, but he has good speed, so we just keep hammering him up in there and it worked out."

After Lewis' third TD of the half, the two teams traded fumbles on the next two offensive possessions. First the Raiders gave the ball away at their own 47-yard line and then Quincy turned it back over two plays later. With time running out on NQ, Stanton found senior Pat Watkins for a 20-yard gain, connected with Reamer for a 10-yard gain and picked up 15 more yards on a roughing the passer penalty. On first-and-goal from the five-yard line, the Presidents' Ed Jolicouer strip-sacked Stanton and Quincy recovered. Two Lance Peterson kneel-downs later ended the 76th meeting between the schools and gave Quincy its tenth straight win on Thanksgiving.

For Reardon and his Presidents it was business as usual. For Connor and his team, history, unfortunately, repeated itself again.

"The streak matters," Connor said. "That is ten games in a row now, that is a decade. They are aware of it. I try to downplay it as much as I can because each year I have a new team and every year it is 50-50 going into the game."

"The kids played their hearts out. But it gets tougher and tougher for us to win just because every time they get another one it makes that weight on the shoulders even heavier. This is my third year and we are taking steps forward. We should be even better next year."

It is now official. 1998-2008 will be forever known as the Decade of the Presidents.

Are Sleeping Pills Worse Than Insomnia?

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am on Lunesta, a prescription sleeping pill for insomnia. The nurse practitioner wanted me to take half a pill every third night, but that didn't work for me. I have to take half a pill every night. Now she wants me to take half a pill every other night because she's afraid that it will become habit-forming. What do you think of this medicine? —S.S.

ANSWER: All sleeping pills should be taken for as short a time as possible. "As short a time as possible" implies that the person recovers from whatever it is that's preventing him or her from falling asleep. In the real world, a correctable cause for insomnia often isn't found, and then a person is faced with having to stay on a sleeping pill or stay awake for most of the night. I would choose option one, as long as the sleeping pill isn't causing any trouble, like daytime sleepiness. From time to time, it's in your interest to try and stop the pill. You might find that sleep isn't as elusive as it was when you started taking it. Lunesta is one of the newer sleeping pills, tolerated well by most. It starts to work in 10 minutes, so it's useful for those who find falling asleep difficult, and it has extended action to prevent waking in the very-early-morning hours.

Lunesta has caused some users to behave differently. A normally reserved person might become quite aggressive. It also has caused a very few to do things they have no recollection of doing. A very small number of people have driven a car under the influence of Lunesta and have not realized that they did it. If a person has such experiences, then immediately stopping the pill is common sense.

Have you tried nondrug approaches to falling asleep? Go to bed and wake up at approximately the same time every day. Relax before bedtime. If you don't fall asleep within 20 minutes of lying down, get up and read or listen to music. Keep daytime naps to 20 minutes or less. Don't use caffeine within six hours of bedtime.

You can become dependent on Lunesta, as you can on most sleeping pills. Dependence means it's hard to stop the medicine. Gradually tapering the dose can usually allow people to break any dependence. I believe that sleeplessness is worse than the prospect of dependence.

Fibromyalgia is a common cause of insomnia. The booklet on this ailment explains it and its treatment. To order a copy, write: Dr. Donohue—No. 305W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery of estrogen.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

The holiday season is a time to reunite with family and friends.

Unfortunately, it is also cold and flu season and the more you travel, the higher your chances are of getting sick.

Thankfully, by following a few easy steps before, during and after traveling, a healthy and happy holiday season will be in store for you.

Get your flu shot

One common question I receive from patients is, "Do I really need a flu shot?" The answer is yes. The flu vaccine can significantly reduce your chances of catching the flu, particularly for pregnant women and the elderly since the effects of the flu are more severe for them. Also, keep in mind that it takes about two weeks for the vaccine to be effective, so plan ahead.

Wash your hands

Airports, train stations and rest stops all have one thing in common — germs. While we have all heard this advice from mom since we were young, washing your hands is still the best protection against catching a cold. The proper way to wash your hands is by using warm water with plenty of soap. Be sure to thoroughly clean your hands for 20 seconds and always rewash after making contact with another person or commonly touched items, such as doorknobs. It is a good idea to pack hand sanitizer for when you don't have access to soap and water.

Dr. NATHANIEL BROWN

Plan ahead

Preparation is also a key when traveling. Getting a good night sleep helps to reduce stress, which is quite common during the holiday season. Traveling, shopping in crowded malls, and preparing large family meals can take a mental toll on all of us. Constant stress and anxiety can also weaken the immune system. To avoid stressful situations, plan out your trip and give yourself enough time to get to the airport, as security lines will be long. Take into account that there will likely be traffic, and plan the best route for your trip, while considering all obstacles along the way. If possible, reserve time each day to exercise, whether it's a quick jog or taking advantage of a hotel fitness center. Exercising is an excellent way to relieve your body and mind of stress.

Pack the essentials

Before you leave for a holiday getaway, it is important to make sure you pack a few essential items. Most importantly, bring plenty of water to ensure you stay properly hydrated throughout your travel time. If you are going to be in the car for extended period of time, pack nonperishable foods such as granola bars and if you are traveling with children, pack plenty of healthy snacks. It will also be a good idea to take along some books and games to keep them entertained during a long trip.

Prepare your prescriptions

Besides packing all of your necessary medications, make a list of your prescriptions with the recommended doses and include your doctor's and pharmacy's contact information as well. Having this information readily available will make it much easier to refill medication if you lose it or run out. If you use rescue medications such as an inhaler, insulin or an EpiPen for allergies, make sure you have an adequate amount to last you the duration of your trip. To save time at airport security, make sure you label all of your medication, especially if you keep them in your carry-on bags.

Take your vitamins

Multi-vitamins play an important role in fending off seasonal illness. People who take a daily multi-vitamin have a reduced risk of getting sick, so be sure to pack enough so you can take one per day. The vitamins will help you get the important nutrients that roadside restaurants don't always provide. Unless prescribed by your doctor, mega-doses of individual vitamins, such as vitamin C and E, are not recommended and could cause more harm than good.

Take a walk

When you're in the car, be sure to take breaks to avoid fatigue and stretch your legs. It is especially important to stretch your legs on a long flight too, as it prevents dangerous blood clots from forming. Certain people have a higher risk of getting a blood clot such as pregnant women, smokers, women on birth control pills or people who have had a history of deep venous thromboses. If you have any of these conditions, it is best to consult your doctor before taking a long flight.

Traveling Overseas

If you are traveling abroad, it is important to visit your doctor ahead of time to make sure you're healthy enough to travel overseas. In addition, The Center for Disease Control and Prevention has an informative website with details on proper vaccinations for traveling abroad. It is recommended that international travelers visit this website and review its lists of recommended vaccinations for individual countries.

However you plan on traveling this holiday season, make sure to plan ahead, practice healthy habits and remember the golden rule...wash your hands! And, if you have any serious medical conditions, be sure to talk to your doctor before hitting the road to ensure a happy and healthy holiday season.

Nonathletes Get Sports Injuries, Too

(NAPS) — You may never have stepped on a basketball court or taken a morning jog, but you can still wind up with the same kind of injuries many of your athletic neighbors get.

These can include painful musculoskeletal conditions such as back pain. You can experience this type of condition as a result of mowing the lawn, raking leaves or playing with your children.

According to Michelle Look, M.D., a board-certified practitioner with the San Diego Sports Medicine & Family Health Center, back pain is the fifth-leading reason patients visit their physicians and 15-20 percent of Americans have painful back conditions.

Twenty years ago, the focal point of therapy was to treat an acute musculoskeletal back pain condition with bed rest. Dr. Look points out that the goal of today's therapeutic approach is to get patients to resume their daily activity as quickly as possible.

For many of her patients, Dr. Look prescribes SOMA® (carisoprodol) 250 mg tablets to relieve painful muscle spasms. Patients have had positive experiences with SOMA® 250 mg because it helps them recover from acute, painful musculoskeletal conditions and is well tolerated.

"We see many people who, in their everyday routine, simple overdo it or suddenly encounter an unexpected muscle spasm or strain. Of course this never happens at a good time because we all lead very busy lives," says Dr. Look. "So we believe getting to your doctor right away, seeking early treatment and continuing exercise are critical aspects of recovery."

To learn more, speak with your health care provider or visit www.sandigosportsmed.com.

More information about SOMA® 205 mg is available on the web site www.soma250.com.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

HOLDING PENALTY

A recent finding showing that excessive use of denture cream has been linked with nerve damage gives patients with dentures even more reason to visit the dentist for readjustments. The study involved denture wearers who developed neurological problems. All were found to have abnormally high levels of zinc in their blood (accompanied by abnormally low levels of copper). A balance of zinc and copper in the body is essential for neurological health. Absorbing too much of either of these trace metals can lead to depletion of the other. As it turned out, denture cream contains zinc, and the patients had used excessive amounts of it — two tubes per week instead of the recommended one tube every three to ten weeks.

We urge people using large amounts of denture cream due to ill-fitting dentures to seek professional care. At our office you will be treated by oral health care professionals who have the experience and knowledge you can trust. If you're looking for a family dentist at this time, please call 617-479-6220. Our "personal touch" philosophy is reflected throughout our practice in many ways. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we're currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. If your dentures are ill-fitting, it can compromise your happiness, health, and well-being.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Keep your feelings to yourself as you work through an awkward circumstance. Complaining is useless, and also unwise since your words could come back to haunt you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A sudden flash of Bovine practicality shows you how you might be able to turn your artistic pursuits into a profitable venture. A spouse or partner offers some sage advice.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be prepared with several "Plan Bs" that you might have to use as backups just in case you encounter some troublesome complications with your carefully constructed schedule.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might think you'll never have a free moment again with the demands of the workplace piling on. Cheer up. The pressure eases as holiday time nears. An old friend brings good news.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your Leonine pride might make it difficult to offer an apology to a co-worker you unintentionally offended. But a quick and sincere "I'm sorry" could prevent problems down the line.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good time to tackle those backed-up chores that have kept you from moving into other and potentially more worthwhile projects. A personal matter needs your attention.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You usually have no problem rushing to the defense of someone you perceive as being treated unjustly. But perceptions could be deceiving this week. Check the facts before you act.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Before you point fingers at who might be to blame for the unexpected change in your plans, take a few moments to reflect on how this turn of events might be a blessing in disguise.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You seek out advice in the first part of the week. But be careful not to let counsel from others overshadow your own sense of perception. Things become clearer by the week's end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The trusted colleagues you relied on earlier continue to offer support with your project. But you take more control, and by the week's end, you should be in full command.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Rely on your practical side while exploring investment possibilities. Caution is still your watchword in these matters. Your social life takes a gratifying turn by the week's end.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An already confusing situation appears to grow murkier during the first part of the week. But it all starts to clear by the week's end. Plan to spend the week-end with someone special.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a passion for life that inspires others to follow your example. You could be a motivational speaker.

Managing DirectorA THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Influence is a very powerful possession. Whether we realize it or not, all of us influence children in one way or another. The manner in which we influence them often explains their behavior. For example, children who encounter excessive criticism invariably are quick to condemn in later life.

Children we see and sense reasonable tolerance learn to be patient. Ridicule often results in shyness. Encouragement exudes confidence. Praise develops appreciation.

These and other causes and effects indicate the need for constant thought in how influence is exerted by parents, teachers and friends; in fact, by all who contact children in any way. Influence in action is louder than any voice. Yes, all of us carry the weight of influence whether we like it or not...

When we think of it, doesn't common sense dictate the use of discretion in behavior and expression - to influence properly? Could this be the failure that causes disorder, disrespect, confusion and weird behavior seen too often these days?...

Hearing On Tax Rate Continues Dec. 15

City Council will continue a public hearing on the 2009 tax levy at their meeting Monday in City Hall.

In preliminary discussions held Dec. 1, councillors reviewed data which indicated that next year's tax rate would increase from $10.83 to $12.75 per $1000 for single family homes effective Jan. 1.

Under the same proposal, the commercial tax rate would increase from $22.22 to $26.23.

Councillors must vote each year on the tax levy for each real estate classification. Their vote is forwarded to the Department of Revenue which sets the final tax rate.

The new rate will be in effect with the January billing. Real estate assessments are available on line.

Gutro Seeks Traffic Study At Supermarket Site

Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro last week asked the city's traffic engineer, Jack Gillan, for a study of North Quincy traffic with specific analysis of the potential impact of a C Mart supermarket proposed for Hayward St.

The supermarket featuring Asian foods would be located at the former site of Boston Gear Works.

"I represent residents south and east of Hannafords' (supermarket) and am looking forward to your expert analysis on potential traffic impacts of this proposal," Gutro said in his official request.

See Related Story On Page 2

Gutro, also, noted that Mayor Thomas Koch authorized a North Quincy Traffic Study which, apparently, has not been released. "The outcome of that analysis is critical information to consider as we evaluate the C Mart proposal," wrote Gutro, noting that he represents residents south and

Expects Big Drop In State Aid

Koch To Slash $2 Million From City Budget

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday that he will cut $2 million from the city's current budget as planning begins for much larger cuts in the next fiscal year.

Since presenting his first budget of $233.9 million in May, Koch has now agreed to a total of $5 million in spending cuts after discussions with city councillors, department heads and union representatives.

"I heard loud and clear more cuts ought to be made," Koch said at a press conference Tuesday, adding, "We know people are struggling with this economy."

"We must make difficult decisions now because all signs point to even more difficult decisions in coming months," said Koch who pointed out that local aid

Reassigns Flat-Screen TV

Mayor To Cover Full Cost Of Rug

Mayor Thomas Koch said Tuesday that his campaign funds will cover the full cost for his new office carpeting and he will send the new 47-inch office television to the new senior center in North Quincy.

The mayor acted in response to critical media reports detailing a total of $60,000 spent on City Hall renovations in the past year while the economy sinks and single family homeowners face an increase of $500 in taxes this year.

Originally, Koch had paid half the $19,000 cost of the new blue and gold wool carpeting with campaign funds. On Tuesday, he announced that his campaign will pay the full cost.

Koch said that he is fully aware of people struggling in this economy and noted that he raised over $75,000 for fuel assistance through a summer golf tournament.

As for the flat screen television, Koch said that it has become a distracting issue and will be sent to the new Senior Center scheduled to open in the spring.

Koch, also, said the television was paid for through the Comcast technology fund, not real estate taxes and was used for presentations, to access city programs, and for projects.

Opponents, Proponents Speak Out

Asian Supermarket Hearing Continued Jan. 20

BY LAURA GRIFFIN

Quincy's Asian community wants a supermarket all their own, while their neighbors fear the chosen site will exacerbate the dangers of Hancock Street which is already in constant gridlock.

City councillors heard from both sides last week as they continued their public hearing on a proposal by C Mart Supermarket II, Inc. for a new Asian specialty supermarket at former Boston Gear property in North Quincy.

The meeting drew some 400 persons to North Quincy High School auditorium where the Asian community enthusiastically supported the proposal and outnumbered opponents by a 3-1 margin.

However, the roughly 60 speakers were evenly split between the two sides.

Proponents of the Asian supermarket described the economic benefits to the supermarket as well as the benefits for their 80 and 90-year old mothers and grandmothers who now spend hours travelling by T to Boston for the foods they love.

Opponents of the market location describe the dangers of walking and driving in an area already burdened by a supermarket, bank, and post office in close proximity and already dangerous for the students at the four local schools.

City Council, acting as Special Permit Granting Authority, must approve the plan which originally featured a 23,000 sq. ft supermarket, food court and restaurant at 10 Hayward St.

However, attorney Chris Harrington who represents C Mart announced that the company was willing to withdraw its request for a restaurant and food court which will lessen traffic in the area.

After the three hour session, Council president Jay Davis continued the hearing to Tuesday, Jan. 20.

Among the speakers was civic leader Victor Ng who acknowledged that opponents have some "valid points." However, Ng called the proposed Asian supermarket, "an opportunity for more commerce" for the city.

Both Ng and Gabriel Cheong, an attorney, suggested that the city can solve the traffic problems and efforts should be made to "... explore all the possibilities that make it work."

Opponents warned that Holmes Avenue, Hayward and Hancock Street can not sustain additional traffic.

Tracy Chritello and other speakers said safety must be the first issue.

Traffic, they said, already endangers students in the nearby schools, such as North Quincy High School, Sacred Heart School, Atlantic Middle Schools, and the Parker School.

Business owners feared that more congestion will further erode their clientele while supporters suggested that the project will improve the city's economy and tax base.

"Do we want the huge Asian population to be spending their money in Boston?" asked Cheong stating that the problems of traffic "can be addressed."

Harrington said 2,322 supporters have signed petitions favoring the project and 201 submitted form letters with personal notes such as one from Kuo Tung Hsia of Hamilton Street who wrote:

"Having an Asian specialty grocery store is good for diversity. It brings tax revenues to the City of Quincy and will create job opportunities."

Hsia said many shoppers will walk to the store.

However, a Holmes Avenue resident and opponent of the project said at the meeting, "I've almost been killed several times. You take you life in your hands walking or driving."

44 Community Leaders To Ring Bell For Quincy Salvation Army

Forty-four community leaders including Mayor Thomas Koch will ring the bell for the Salvation Army for three days to help those in need this holiday season.

They will man a kettle outside City Hall on one-hour shifts beginning this Friday and again Thursday, Dec. 18 and Friday, Dec. 19.

The economic crisis has increased the need for help this holiday season.

Majors Doug and Linda Jones, co-commanders of the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps, established in 1895, said:

"The Salvation Army here in Quincy has seen a 10 percent increase in requests for Christmas assistance over last year.

"We expect this trend to continue over the winter months as the economy continues to struggle."

They expressed their gratitude to the community leaders and to all the other volunteers manning kettles in other locations.

"We are extremely grateful for the tremendous support we receive from so many volunteers," they said.

Volunteers are still needed. Individuals and groups who would like to help are asked to contact the Salvation Army, at 6 Baxter Street, or by calling 617-472-2345.

Koch, who will take his turn at the kettle Dec. 19, has proclaimed December as "Salvation Army Month" in Quincy.

In the proclamation he said:

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Dec. 13, 1621, the first American furs to be exported from the continent leave for England. The colonists developed an economic system in which their chief crop, Indian corn, was traded with Native Americans to the north for highly valued beaver skins, which were in turn profitably sold in England.

• On Dec. 12, 1913, two years after it was stolen from the Louvre Museum in Paris, Leonardo da Vinci's masterpiece "Mona Lisa" is recovered inside Italian waiter Vincenzo Peruggia's hotel room in Florence. Peruggia had participated in the heist with a group of accomplices dressed as Louvre janitors.

• On Dec. 9, 1926, young clarinetist Benny Goodman records his first solo, 16 bars of a song called "He's the Last Word." Sadly, his father was hit by a car and killed on the same day Goodman recorded the solo.

• On Dec. 11, 1936, after ruling for less than one year, Edward VIII becomes the first English monarch to voluntarily abdicate the throne. He chose to abdicate after the British government, public and the Church of England condemned his decision to marry American divorcee

Wallis Warfield Simpson.

• On Dec. 10, 1963, Frank Sinatra Jr., who was kidnapped in Lake Tahoe, Calif., is allowed to talk briefly to his father. The kidnappers revealed the drop point for the ransom money and the location where Frank Jr. could be found. To avoid a public scene, law enforcement officials picked up the young Sinatra and brought him home in the trunk of their car.

• On Dec. 14, 1980, a CIA report claims that the Soviet Union delivered nearly $7 billion worth of military assistance to Third World nations such as Syria, Iraq and South Yemen. The report suggested that Soviet arms sales were dangerously increasing instability and the chances for war.

• On Dec. 8, 1993, the North American Free Trade Agreement is signed into law by President Bill Clinton. NAFTA was heavily criticized by Reform Party presidential candidate Ross Perot, who argued that if NAFTA was passed, Americans would hear a "giant sucking sound" of American companies fleeing the United States for Mexico.

A Mayor's Race, Too?

Next year's city election campaign is off to an early start-perhaps the earliest ever.

The preliminary election is still a good nine months away and the final 11 months.

But two city council challengers have already announced their candidacies; a third is seriously considering a run and a fourth reported to be thinking about it.

The early start and present circumstances have triggered speculation that there could also be a mayor's race next year.

And that it might be a rematch between incumbent Tom Koch and former Mayor William Phelan who he upset in 2007.

KOCH

PHELAN

A couple of months ago there was speculation that Phelan would run for a city council at-large seat. But he said he had no such plans. That if anything, he would be interested in the school committee.

He was in his second year on the School Committee in 2001 when he challenged six-term Mayor James Sheets and defeated him by 17 votes in the closet mayoral election in the city's history.

But would he run for mayor again?

Some observers think the stage may be now being set to encourage a comeback bid by Phelan. Or for a city councillor to step up. Or some surprise candidate.

They think the huge tax bill hike, and the economy continuing to go sour could bring out a challenger next year.

Don't bet right now on it being Phelan though. A source very close to him doubts he will run. He says Phelan is happy back practicing law with an office in Quincy Square. And enjoying being home nights relaxing with the family.

You wonder, though, with the economy crisis expected to get worse before it gets better, why anyone would even want to be mayor.

But, we'll see.

St. Ann School Honors Soldiers

Students at St. Ann School in Wollaston recently acknowledged the brave men and women who have served our country with a series of activities.

A prayer service was held at the school to pay tribute to veterans.

Principal, Sr. Catherine Lee, spoke on the origins of Veterans' Day. Eighth grade students read from letters they wrote to veterans who lived in Quincy nursing homes. All joined in singing patriotic songs.

Students in grades 1-8 eagerly responded to an article printed in The Quincy Sun. It was a request from George Bouchard of Morrisette Legion Post for mail in behalf of troops now serving in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Patricia Norton, a second grade teacher, collected over 150 cards and letters and proudly presented the students' work at the annual Veterans' Day parade.

"I was thrilled by the response and am happy to report that the many letters and cards will be received by our troops in time for Christmas," Bouchard said.

The kindergarten and after-school program also joined in the effort. They made patriotic cards and sent them along to the VFW and Morrisette Post.

Maybe things will improve enough in Koch's favor to keep a challenger from the door.

The two announced candidates will spark voter interest in Wards 1 and 4.

LAFOREST

KELLY

Margaret Laforest, 33, is challenging veteran Leo Kelly who has served 18 years in the Ward 1 seat.

Laforest, who has campaigned for Kelly in the past, has high praise for him but says:

"I feel it is time for a change. It is time to bring young energy to the council."

She has already filed her campaign committee papers at City Hall.

There could be another challenger in that race. The name of Martin Aikens, chairman of the Zoning Board and a union member, is being frequently mentioned.

Atty. Brian Palmucci, 30, kicked off his campaign for the Ward 4 council seat this week.

DAVIS

In doing so, he becomes Jay Davis' first opponent. Davis was elected without opposition when the seat was open and has been re-elected twice without an opponent.

Palmucci says he's running "to bring fresh ideas and a new vision to the city council."

And he will make an issue of the controversial West Quincy billboard.

Former Police Chief Robert Crowley acknowledges he is considering a city council run and will decide shortly after the first of the year.

The question is if he decides to run will it be for councilor at-large or for the Ward 6 seat?

Incumbent Brian McNamee, elected in 2005, has been around the campaign block a few times. He notes he's been in eight elections-three primary and five final.

"I'm not a novice," he notes.

Looks like it could be an interesting year.

ALLAN YACUBIAN, the popular Wollaston dentist for whom the North Quincy High School mascot The Yakoo is named is convalescing at home after recent heart by-pass surgery.

YACUBIAN

He expects to be back at his office after the first of the year.

Yacubian was the model for The Yakoo. The Student Council was seeking a symbol to appropriately represent North's strong school spirit.

In 1957, Yacubian and classmate

Peter Fredericksen got together and The Yakoo became that special symbol.

Yacubian was the model and Fredericksen drew his profile for that of The Yakoo.

Speedy recovery, Allan.

PET PEEVE, ANYONE? How about those cars with the bright white headlights that blind you at night? How did they get on the road?

A Life Preserver, Not An Anchor

In these hard economic times, I find it unfathomable that Mayor Koch is proposing raising the current tax rate by 15 per cent. Where on earth does he expect the average person to get this extra $500-plus from? Many of my family and friends are facing a year fraught with the possibility of job lay-offs, no salary increases. No bonuses, increases in health care costs and increases in transportation costs. Is Mayor Koch trying to make Quincy a city that no one can afford to live in?

I also question why the last minute nature to this increase. Why isn't the tax rate discussed when the city budget is discussed? I understand that Mayor Koch wants to "right our fiscal ship" but perhaps he should give thought to all the city residents he may be drowning.

I certainly hope when the city councillors meet with Mayor Koch they will speak on behalf of their constituents who this year need to be thrown a life preserver not an anchor.

Criticizes Mayor's Spending

Recent articles in The Boston Globe and The Patriot Ledger exposed lavish spending at our City Hall.

Oh great, so now Mayor Tom Koch is at the trough with my tax dollars. Mayor Koch signed MassResistance's anti-gay petition that tried to put gay marriage to a vote in Massachusetts. It's not enough to know that my mayor is unsupportive of my fellow gay and lesbian friends of Quincy and our so-called "lifestyle." I now have to work to pay for HIS extravagant lifestyle. Beside the new flat-screen TV for his office, the 18K price tag for a lush new wool carpet is unbelievable.

My husband and I are hard working, law-abiding, tax-paying citizens and deserve equal rights and a responsible Mayor.

Mayor Koch wants to vote on my marriage; I want to vote on his lavish renovations! Maybe I should run for Mayor, but I am allergic to wool. Oh, yeah, I am not a Koch so becoming Quincy's Mayor will never happen anyway.

Should I make my next property tax check out to the City of Quincy or to Thomas Koch?

The C-Supermarket Hearing

"C-Supermarket on Hayward Street or not... Wait a Minute."

I attended the most recent city council meeting at North Quincy High School. As an Asian and a Quincy resident, I was more curious to hear the pros and cons of having the market.

On the one hand, I was impressed by the large attendance by Asians and non-Asians, and encouraged by many residents who have never publicly spoken to take the podium to give their viewpoints.

On the other hand, I was disappointed that some of the speakers weren't given all the details of having a supermarket or not, and only given one side of the story.

In future meetings, I hope people are better informed before making such decisions affecting North Quincy. And more polite when other speakers are talking.

No Vacancy Clause In Condominium Law

By FRANK McCAULEY

The City Council received a proposed condominium conversion control ordinance minus a vacancy rate factor that some view as critical to its success.

Councillor Stephen J. McGrath, who chaired the special committee that studied the condo conversion problem, said that the vacancy rule was left out as part of a compromise between the tenant and landlord factions on the committee.

"It was a concession by the tenants," he said. "In return, the landlords made the concession of giving nine months notice to tenants and two years notice to the elderly and the handicapped."

SNOW STORM COSTS CITY $60,000

The weekend storm that dropped upwards of a foot of snow on Quincy cost the city some $60,000, almost half the snow budget for the coming year.

"In view of the money and manpower problems that the Public Works Department has faced, I think they did an excellent job," said Mayor Arthur H. Tobin.

"But it might have been a better and less expensive if the DPW had had more cooperation from the public; many of whom probably voted for the budget slashing Proposition 2 1/2."

"We had a severe problem with parked cars," said Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti. "We've always had the problem but it seems to get worse."

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Ann Marie's Shrimp, Rice, Veggie Combo

If you're tired of eating turkey and its leftovers, today's recipe is a great alternative.

Over the weekend my daughter Ann Marie made this great entree and it received raves from all of us.

SHRIMP & RICE, VEGGIE COMBO
20 Shrimp (about a pound) deveined and remove the tails.
2 packages rice pilaf (or cook two cups).
Brown rice goes well
2 medium sized zucchini
4 fresh plum tomatoes
3 tablespoons olive oil (or more if needed)
1 tablespoon butter
2 cloves garlic
1 egg beaten

shredded mozzarella or Parmesan cheese for topping fresh scallions for topping either with the cheese or an alternative.

Cook the rice according to directions. In hot oil and garlic, sauté the zucchini until done and set aside.

Cut the plum tomatoes and sauté also in a little oil, salt and pepper to taste and set aside. Don't overcook, they cook in a very short time.

In the oil and butter, sauté the shrimp and add the beaten egg. Cook until shrimp and egg are well blended and cooked. Now in a large serving dish, add everything together and sprinkle the top with the chopped scallions or cheese or both. Happy cooking, I think you will enjoy this as much as we did.

Hansen, a Quincy resident for 40 years, is the music director at St. Albert the Great Parish in Weymouth, and has appeared at many South Shore churches as cantor and soloist. She is also employed as an administrative assistant with Atlantic Broadband in Quincy.

A lyric soprano, Hansen received her bachelor of music from the University of Lowell, and was classically trained in Boston and New York City.

She has been an oratorio soloist with the Quincy Choral Society, the Quincy Symphony Orchestra, Weymouth Fine Arts Choral, Master Works Choral and the Ralph Farris Choral.

BRENDA HANSEN

Hansen has performed Opera with the New Bedford Symphony, Operafest in Boston and at with the South Shore Conservatory of Music in Hingham and Duxbury. She has also performed for Quincy First Night, J. M. Productions, the Quincy Dinner Theatre and the Cohasset Theatre.

Hansen has sung the National Anthem in Washington D.C., at two Boston Red Sox games, Babe Ruth World Series and Quincy Flag Day Ceremonies.

The CD was recorded and mixed by Braintree resident Ron Bosse. A graduate of Berklee College of Music, Bosse is director and owner of Bosse Studios and Bosse School of Music in Weymouth, MA, which offers the study of contemporary music.

A gifted musician, pianist Roisin Gerdin is the accompanist on the CD and a piano teacher at the School.

"I chose these selections because they convey faith, hope and love. I came to realize that what I was experiencing when I sang for people was an important spiritual connection and that in making this CD, I would be able to reach an even broader audience."

The CD is $14.99 and a portion of the sales will be donated to The Salvation Army/Quincy Temple Food Pantry and the Interfaith Social Services Pantry Shelf, which services the South Shore Area.

Five Principals Guests At NQHS 1958 Class Reunion

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

North Quincy High School was built in early 1930's - and since then, there have been six principals.

Five of them were invited to the 1958-50th class reunion last October. The first principal was the late James Collins.

The five principals are Lou Ianelli, Eileen Feeney, Peter Chrisom, John Walsh and Earl Metzler, the current principal.

At the reunion in October, one of those attending was Dr. Allan Yacubian, a popular Wollaston dentist.

Dr. Yacubian recalled that when the class was about to graduate, one of his classmates was missing two points and would've been unable to graduate with his class.

He said Principal John Walsh, called the student into his office and said, "I can do either of two things; I can either keep you back or I can give you the two points needed to graduate."

It ended that Walsh gave the student the needed two points to graduate.

At the 50th class reunion, that same student went up to Walsh and Walsh recognizing him said "How did I do? The student answered, "Well, I've been married to the same woman for 47 years, and then proceeded to tell Walsh how successful his children were.

Walsh answered, "Sounds like I made the right decision."

Thomas Crane Library On Nation's Top 'Coolest' List

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The Thomas Crane Public Library won sixth place honors as one of the top ten public libraries in the country, according to the Internet's MSN City Guide.

But that's no news to Quincy patrons or Library Director Ann McLaughlin who would bump the library in Quincy Center to first place.

"We know we're cool, but we weren't sure what the criteria was," McLaughlin said of MSN's recent list of "America's 10 Coolest Public Libraries."

McLaughlin said neither she nor her staff was aware of the nomination or the citation until after the news broke on the web recently.

One of the Friends of the Library nominated the library which was recognized for its superb Romanesque style by American architect H.H. Richardson, according to McLaughlin.

"Of Richardson's five libraries, the Crane Memorial library is considered the most perfect," according to the MSN review by K. Nadine Kavanaugh.

MSN provides Internet guidebooks of more than 5,000 cities across America. The service provides restaurant reviews, travel planning and entertainment information.

This isn't the first time, the Crane Library's beauty has received national recognition. Most recently, the library ranked in the top third in a 2007 Internet poll of America's Favorite Architecture conducted by the American Institute of Architects.

"This is a city that's always loved the library," McLaughlin said, noting just a few of the library's special features, such as the strong support from the city's public officials, its extraordinary Friends of the Library, and, of course, the structure's architectural beauty.

At this time, the Library's Friends have a record 500 members who contribute funds, expertise and time to provide programs and supplies for the library, according to McLaughlin.

This year, the Friends contributed some $25,000 to $35,000 toward library projects.

The Friends and library staff regularly present a wide range of special programs, from forums on current events and art, to its current World War II retrospective, to local historic programs and children's sessions.

Some programs, such as the library's story hours have become so popular that the library had to turn away an overflow, said McLaughlin.

McLaughlin said that librarians have reported a major surge in patronage in recent months as local families are feeling a financial pinch.

While library patrons are loyal and generous, McLaughlin, also, praised city officials for their support of library programs, particularly Sunday openings.

McLaughlin recalled that city officials endorsed the library's bid to open on Sunday back in 2001. As a result, Sunday has become the "busiest day of the week" for staff.

McLaughlin said that the staff checks out an average of 350 items every hour on Sunday.

"We do a lot of cool things," McLaughlin said in total agreement with the national listing.

The Thomas Crane Library has the second largest municipal collection in Massachusetts, second only to the Boston Public Library.

The original building was funded by the Crane family as a memorial to Thomas Crane, a wealthy stone contractor who got his start in Quincy quarries.

The original building was constructed in 1882, and expanded in 1908, 1939 and 2001.

According to a Harper's Weekly item, the architect, H. H. Richardson himself, considered it the 'best village library in the United States.'

In addition to its architecture, the building contains stained glass by John LaFarge and landscaper Frederick Law Olmsted designed the grounds.

THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC Library recently received national honors.

Public Hearing Dec. 15 On Rezoning Changes

The City Council will hold public hearings Monday on a rezoning proposals.

The first hearing at 6:30 will focus on a plan for an addition to the Elks facility on Quarry Street.

At 7:15 p.m., councillors will consider a request to rezone 200 Crown Colony Drive for Planned Unit Development or PUD.

The rezoning would change the former site of the Patriot Ledger printing plant which is currently zoned for industry.

B.J.'s Wholesale Clubs had hoped to open a retail center on the Crown Colony property. The company lists some 3000 Quincy residents as members.

The proposal has hit some roadblocks with city administrators who fear additional traffic could gridlock the area.

City council will discuss Crown Colony application while acting as the Special Permit Granting Authority.

The council will begin discussion of the Quincy Elks' application for a Special Permit as a PUD or Planned Unit Development, an hour earlier Monday at 6:30 p.m.

The Quincy Elks Lodge plan to construct a 9,740 sq. ft. addition to their function room at 254 R Quarry St.

The proposed project will bring the Elks' facility to a total of 15,730 sq. feet

The council, acting as the Special Permit Granting Authority, must vote on all requests for special permits.

Councillors will review, but are not bound by, the recommendations of the Planning Board on PUD issues. Planners scheduled a public hearing on the request at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday (Dec. 10).

A copy of the application may be reviewed at City Hall during regular working hours.

3 Arrested In Drug Bust On Furnace Brook Parkway

By TOM HENSHAW

A tip from a concerned loved one has apparently brought down an accused drug supplier and possibly destroyed a Greater Boston, perhaps even international, narcotic distribution network.

As a result of the tip, said District Attorney William Keating, close to $20,000 worth of methamphetamine and $8,000 in cash were seized and three men arrested at 433 Furnace Brook Parkway.

"This investigation started with a tip from the partner of someone succumbing to drug addiction, just telling us where to look to see methamphetamine distribution on the South Shore," he said.

"Anyone who is out there feeling helpless as they watch a loved one ruin their lives with drugs should know the tip they provide could bring a supplier to justice and possibly destroy a distribution network."

Those arrested before and after search warrants were executed on apartments at 433 Furnace Brook Parkway and 19 Bakersfield St., Dorchester, Friday night and the charges against them included:

Tam Le, 45, of 433 Furnace Brook Parkway, possession with intent to sell a Class B substance (crystal meth), distribution of a Class B substance (crystal meth) and possession of a Class B substance (Ecstasy).

Scott Cunningham, 44, of 55 Harriet St., Quincy, possession with intent to sell a Class B substance (crystal meth), possession of a Class B substance (crystal meth), possession of a Class B substance (Ecstasy) and failure to use care in stopping.

Steven Beadles, 50, of One Stoughton Street Place, Dorchester, possession with intent to sell a Class B substance (Oxycontin) and possession with intent to sell a Class B substance (Oxycondone).

Cunningham and Beadles were released in their own cognizance for conference Jan. 6 by Judge James McGovern. Le was still in court late Tuesday afternoon.

"This (methamphetamine) is a drug more prevalent in other regions of the country but clearly being distributed in this area as well," said Keating.

"This is a drug produced in clandestine labs and it appears what was allegedly being distributed here was produced out of state and likely outside the U.S."

Keating said Cunningham was seen leaving the Furnace Brook Parkway address and was stopped for a motor vehicle infraction. During the stop, an ounce of methamphetamine and a quantity of Ecstasy was found in his belongings.

Search warrants were executed and more than 50 grams of methamphetamine and Ecstasy and U.S. currency were found. Tam Le was arrested. Beadles arrived during the search and admitted having some oxycontin and oxycondone on his person.

A quantity of marijuana and more than $8,000 in currency were found at the Bakersfield Street address.

The raid, led by State Trooper Sean Newman and troopers from the District Attorney's Drug Task Force, also involved Quincy and Boston police officers, the Massachusetts State Police K-9 Section, agents from the Drug Enforcement Agency Group 1, U.S. Postal Inspectors and State Police from Attorney General Martha Coakley's office.

Council Will Consider Lowe's Proposal Dec. 15

City councillors will consider a request for a Special Permit for development of a Lowe's Home Improvement Center off Burgin Parkway Monday, according to City Council President Jay Davis.

"I believe there will be an agreement," Davis said, adding that the city and the developers have been working out issues for more than a month in an effort "...to reach a compromise."

Developers began planning for the center nearly three years ago and have since won state and city approvals for zoning and parking changes.

The multi-million dollar Lowe's project would include a 124,000-sq. ft. building with a 29,000 sq. ft. garden center and 435 parking spaces on 16.3 acres with access from Burgin Pkwy through a portion of Penn Street that was recently relinquished by the city.

The City Council will decide the issue acting as Special Permit Granting Authority (SPGA).

Davis pointed out that the project will enhance the city's growth which has been stagnant. The developer has also won considerable support from labor unions.

However, several councillors have had a number of issues with the proposal during previous discussion, such as sidewalks, roof plantings and equipment screening.

Questions ranged from the effect of the development on Town Brook and the number of trees in the plan to a proposed 50-foot sign atop a building.

One of the major hurdles for the plan is the future use of a lot at 400 Centre St. which, also, has PUD or Planned Unit Development zoning and has been separated from the overall plan. Councillors fear its effect on traffic in the area.

The Lowe's parcel includes the former Grasso Memorial Park which will be relocated and the lots housing Aslanis Seafood, Monadnock Water Co. and four homes on Columbia Street, all of which would be demolished.

Davis said it's important to get the project in place in order to demolish the abandoned houses and buildings on lots in the plan.

Donations can be

Intermarried Families Topic At Temple Shalom Breakfast

"Navigating the Chanukah-Christmas Dynamic" will be the topic of an Intermarried Family Panel Discussion at Temple Shalom of Milton's monthly Breakfast and Lecture Series Sunday, Dec. 14.

The panel segment of the program begins about 10:15 a.m. and is free and open to the public.

There is a suggested $5 donation and RSVP requested for the breakfast portion, which begins at 9:30 a.m. To RSVP, call 617-698-3394 or Email templeshalom@yahoo.com.

The modern Jewish world is populated more and more by inter-married couples who seek a religious community and identity that respects their personal integrity and unique family background. Recent studies have shown that upon the birth of a child, many of these young parents choose Judaism as their spiritual path.

Temple Shalom, an independent congregation, embraces these families, seeing itself as partner and resource in their quest to express the joy and traditions of Judaism in meaningful ways.

The December holiday season can bring challenges when it comes to balancing family loyalties and answering children's questions.

Moderated by Rabbi Fred Benjamin, a panel of inter-married Temple members will discuss how they "Navigate the Chanukah-Christmas Dynamic" along with other relevant issues, followed by a question and answer session.

Temple Shalom is located at 180 Blue Hill Ave. (Rte. 138) in Milton, approximately four miles from Exit 2B on Route 93/128.

It is handicapped-accessible and there is ample free parking.

For further information or to RSVP, call the Temple office at 617-698-3394 or Email templeshalom@yahoo.com.

Local Homeless Board Honored With Achievement Award

The Quincy and Weymouth Board on Homelessness was recently presented with the 2008 Outstanding HMIS Achievement Award for Advanced Data Usage, at the closing ceremony of the national HMIS Conference in Atlanta, Georgia.

HMIS stands for Homeless Management Information Systems, which are used as part of a national data collection tool authorized by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. HMIS systems are used by homeless assistance agencies across the county to gather data and to track and project trends in homelessness.

"I am proud of the work that has been accomplished by our regional homeless board," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch. "This award serves as recognition of the Board's achievements toward ending homelessness in Quincy and Weymouth."

"By having such a commitment to data, we have been able to leverage more resources and convert existing resources and apply them more efficiently toward the issue of ending homelessness in our communities," said John F. Yazwinski, president and CEO of Father Bills & Main-Spring, Inc.

"With the assistance of the Leadership Council on Homelessness, the data has given us the reason why we can't keep managing homelessness when it is more cost-effective to fund solution-oriented approaches."

Yazwinski serves as chairperson of the Quincy and Weymouth Board on Homelessness.

Matthew D. Simmonds accepted the award on behalf of the Board, after having given a presentation at a HUD sponsored Advanced Data Users Group Meeting that demonstrated how housing can be a drastically less expensive approach than emergency shelter for those that HUD considers as "chronically homeless"

Simmonds is the Board's HMIS guru and he is President of Simtech Solutions, Inc., which is a technology consultation firm based in Canton.

"These are individuals with disabilities that have longer stay patterns than the average shelter guest," said Simmonds. "Twelve women that met the definition of chronically homeless were moved into housing with supportive services and the end result has been an improved overall quality of life for the clients while simultaneously saving over eight thousand dollars a year, per client, in housing and medical cost savings alone."

"This award is a nice recognition of why it important to use statistics to measure success," said Peter Forman, president and CEO of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. "But the real news here is that there is a human story behind each number."

"The significance of this award is recognizing how the regional homeless board and our local officials have been able to help real people."

Forman also serves as executive chairman of the Quincy Leadership Council on Chronic Homelessness.

Since 1996, the Quincy and Weymouth area, through the Quincy Department of Planning and Community Development, has secured over $14 million in homeless assistance funding.

To Benefit Germantown Neighborhood Center Quincy Credit Union Kicks Off 'Caring For Quincy' Campaign

In the spirit of the holiday season, Quincy Credit Union announce its Caring for Quincy Campaign to benefit Germantown Neighborhood Center is underway.

The campaign focuses on those in need from all Quincy neighborhoods.

Many families throughout the city are hoping to survive the holiday season. Christmas gifts are low on the priority list and instead, basic necessities are desperately needed.

With food pantries are at critical levels, many working families are struggling to make ends meet.

Caring for Quincy

"During these difficult economic times we need to rally together as a team and help our Quincy residents who are affected", said Kathy Quigley, director of Germantown Neighborhood Center.

QCU's campaign offers a few different ways to help

For stocking stuffers, Hilliard's chocolate candy bars are being sold for $2 each and in lieu of a Giving Tree gift, monetary donations large and small are being accepted to help Germantown Neighborhood Center purchase items needed the most for families.

"The Caring for Quincy Campaign should inspire us to help those less fortunate," said QCU Senior Vice President of Marketing Judy Brazil. "If everyone who visited the credit union purchased a $2 chocolate bar, or donated their loose change, we could certainly make a few spirits bright this holiday season."

"Every little bit helps," Brazil added.

'Are You Okay' Rescues Another Senior Citizen

An officer from Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti's office made the routine daily phone call to a 96-year-old Quincy woman at 10 a.m. last Saturday to ask: "Are You OK?"

Usually she was. This time she wasn't.

The woman had been writing a letter at a table around midnight and apparently fell backward, breaking her arm and suffering other injuries.

She had lain helpless on the floor of her apartment at 1000 Southern Artery for 10 hours.

When she failed to respond to the "Are You OK?" call, the officer summoned Quincy police who found her unconscious on the floor. She is now recuperating at Quincy Medical Center.

"This is a classic example of how a tragedy can be averted," said Bellotti. "By taking just a few moments to check on this woman, we were able to detect the problem."

"Thanks to the police, who responded to our call immediately, she was put into an ambulance and sent to the hospital."

Each day, "Are you OK?" officers make calls to nearly 300 senior citizens who live alone in Norfolk County. The 96-year-old Quincy woman was the 56th to receive help since 2001.

If you are interested in learning more about this free-of-charge program, call the sheriff's office at 781-751-3504.

Vigilance Is Key During Holiday Season

I am writing once again to instill a healthy sense of vigilance in all of us as we celebrate these holidays. Room in our thoughts and plans towards prevention can help maintain an incident free season. So kindly stop and take time for some precaution in planning, decorating and celebrating.

Here is why:

Christmas 2007 had the second most fires of any days during the last five years within the Commonwealth. Christmas Eve had the most residential candle fires of any day during the year. Unattended cooking is the leading cause of home fires in the U.S. and accounts for 55% of all holiday fires within Massachusetts. (SFM/Winter Holiday Tips)

Residential fire is tragic, but for the most part, avoidable. It is no more tragic than when it occurs during the holidays when, for most of us, our energy and efforts are focused away from routine, onto gatherings, decorations and celebrations. Time spent on precaution during our efforts can eliminate preventable, accidental fire.

The simple key to fire prevention within our homes is to separate potential ignition sources from combustibles. For instance, this season, keep a one-foot circle of safety from lit candles giving ample free space from combustibles. Do not leave them unattended either. Be vigilant in disposing of smoking materials, making certain you are convinced that ashes and cigarettes are extinguished prior to disposal. Feel confident with any electrical item used for decorations, including lighting strips and extension cords to minimize overheating or short circuits. Be attentive to your cooking efforts.

December and January are known in the Northeast as the two busiest months for residential fires. Incidents centering on our holiday efforts are a contributing factor for the increase, while heating related incidents contribute to the increase as well. During 2006-2007, 24% of holiday fires in Massachusetts's homes alone, were caused by heating appliances. Therefore, time spent on maintaining fixed household heating systems and safely using portable electric space heaters, might exclude you from inclusion in the Fire Marshal's future fire statistics. I hope so.

This article reiterates the focus of previous articles on holiday season fire safety and heating appliance safety. It is my intention, that repetition will further emphasize the need for precaution during this time of year specifically. Statistics indicate that we are at a higher risk of residential fire during these next two months while we can affect our potential inclusion into future statistics through sound prevention efforts now.

If you have any questions pertaining to this article, or any subject matter previously addressed here, feel free to contact us at 617-376-1015. Take an active role in your own household fire safety, while we are here to assist you in your efforts.

Happy holidays! Please make them safe ones as well. Thank you.

ovations included bills for his office carpeting, a security system for the building, carpeting throughout the building, and a $600 chair for the mayor.

Addressing Boston television and print reporters, Koch said that he wanted to end the controversy and would pay the total bill for his office's $19,000 blue and gold wool carpeting with campaign funds.

While Koch used the conference to announce new cuts in his budget, he welcomed questions and comments speaking formally to his audience of media, department heads and union officers.

The carpeting in City Hall was ragged and dangerous, according to Union Leader Dominic Venturelli who said his members frequently complained of bumps and tears in the old carpeting that was "mangy and a public health hazard."

"Thank you for making it safer," said Venturelli who described reports from his members of "tripping over tape" that held the carpeting together.

Reporters asked for details of his budget while Kelly Tuthill of Channel 5 repeatedly asked Koch for access to his office. Both Koch and, later, Koch's policy director Chris Walker denied.

"He's not going to continue the media circus," Walker said after Tuthill and other television reporters pressed for pictures of his office.

east of Hannafords. Gutro and Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee have held several neighborhood meetings on the proposed C Mart supermarket which will cater to the area's Asian clientele.

The project must be approved by the City Council which will vote as Special Permit Granting Authority. The council has held two sessions, to date, and continued the public hearing to Jan. 20.

The BSC Group, a Boston engineering firm, filed a traffic study which found that C Mart's proposal would not affect morning traffic on Hancock Street, but could add several hundred cars during the afternoon.

As remedies, BSC recommended a new traffic signal coordinated with current signals on Hancock Street and several other mitigation measures.

Attorney Chris Harrington who represents the developer announced that the plans no longer include a food court and restaurant which will significantly reduce traffic.

On 67th Anniversary

'Day Of Infamy' Remembered At Memorial Service

Quincy veterans of all wars got together Sunday, Dec. 7, at the Morrisette American Legion Post to commemorate the 67th anniversary of "a Date that Will Live in Infamy."

The Rev. John Carl Swanson, a Navy veteran chaplain and pastor of the Union Congregational Church of Wollaston, was the guest speaker at the special service.

His was the message that the Japanese surprise attack on Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, stressed the need for eternal vigilance and a duty to honor the veterans who won the war in the Pacific.

Pastor Swanson also disclosed the little known fact that the first attack on Pearl Harbor was a simulated one, launched from the Quincy-built carrier Lexington during maneuvers on Jan. 1, 1932, a full nine years before the Japanese assault.

Larry Norton, past commander of the Quincy Veterans Council and Master of Ceremonies, noted the parallels between Pearl Harbor and 9/11, the Al Qaeda attacks on the World Trade Center.

"Both have been named dates that will live in infamy," he said. "Both were a surprise to America. The Japanese tried to warn us and so did the leader of the terrorists, Osama bin Laden, but in both cases America was not ready."

"America was hit hard by both of these terrible events but it is a strong and proud country and in 1941 it grew stronger and it is growing even stronger today."

"Japan had its reasons for their attack and bin Laden has his reasons for his attack and they are different in many ways."

"Japan wanted to be bigger and more powerful ruling other countries. Bin Laden wanted the US to stop helping Israel . . . and he wanted US military out of Islamic land."

Norton noted that 235 men from Quincy died in World War II and he paid tribute to Medal of Honor winners William R. Caddy and Frederick Murphy and to Henry Page Jr., who he said is still missing in action.

Pearl Harbor survivor Frank Connolly of Quincy, a former Boston police officer, was recognized at the ceremony but Quincy's other survivor, Earl Kudja, was unable to attend.

Others included Gold Star Mothers Theresa Davies and Christine Devlin and Robert Noble, a World War II veteran and former prisoner of war in Germany.

Joseph Gilmore displayed the Eisenhower Medal he won as a 7-year-old for collecting old newspapers to support the World War II war effort.

Veterans in attendance represented World War II, the Korean War, the Vietnam War, Beirut, Desert Shield, Desert Storm, the Iraq War, and the Grenada Invasion.

Veterans from each war placed roses on the temporary altar that had been erected especially for the ceremony.

The colors were posted and the pledge of allegiance led by Master Sgt. Dan Egan, US Army Reserve, a Desert Storm veteran, and Taps was sounded by Robert LeFleur, past commander of the sponsoring QVC.

Moe Morad, a veteran of the Korean War, opened the ceremony singing, "Oh, God, Our Help --- In Ages Past," and closed the proceedings with "God Bless America."

FORMER NAVY CHAPLAIN John C. Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church, conducted the Quincy Veterans Council Memorial Service.

LAWRENCE NORTON, former commander of the Quincy Veterans Council, was the master of ceremonies. Beside him is the Page One of a December 1941 newspaper with the headlines: "War! Oahu Bombed By Japanese Planes."

MOE MORAD of Morrisette Legion Post led those attending in "God Bless America."

How To Avoid Losing Your Home To Foreclosure

(ARA) - Over the past year, we've been inundated with daily headlines about the growing foreclosure crisis. Hundreds of thousands of homeowners have lost their homes to foreclosure, with speculation among housing industry experts that an additional 1 million may lose their homes within the coming year.

Herculean efforts are being made on the part of federal and state governments, mortgage lenders and nonprofit organizations to prevent foreclosures, culminating in the bailout package recently passed by Congress.

What exactly is a foreclosure? According to the legal experts at FindLaw.com, the Web's most popular source for legal information, foreclosure is the legal process that a lender, often a bank or a mortgage company, uses to recover a piece of real estate property.

"When a homeowner receives a notice of foreclosure, it means the homeowner has failed to comply with the terms of the mortgage," says Stephanie Rahlfis, an attorney editor with FindLaw.com. "Essentially, the mortgage has gone into default, and the lender has decided to begin the legal process of repossessing the property."

Even if a homeowner receives a notice of foreclosure, it's not too late. Contrary to what many people may think, most mortgage companies would prefer that a homeowner continue to pay their mortgage, because that's where lenders make their money -- on the interest and fees associated with the mortgage process.

Because of the large number of homeowners who are facing foreclosure, many mortgage companies are willing to work with a borrower to find a solution that will allow a homeowner to stay in his or her home. In fact, there are a number of alternatives to foreclosure. A homeowner may qualify for a special forbearance, in which the lender may be able to arrange a repayment plan based on a homeowner's situation, or a lender may temporarily or permanently suspend or reduce the monthly payments (by reducing the interest rate on the home). Other foreclosure alternatives include mortgage modification and a "deed-in-lieu" of foreclosure.

Ignoring the problem will only make things worse. A foreclosure on a person's credit history can have devastating effects -- dramatically reducing a person's ability to obtain and use credit to purchase many items and services. Unfortunately, many homeowners facing foreclosure don't believe their lender is willing to help. In a 2005 Freddie Mac/Roper study, one in five homeowners facing foreclosure didn't contact their lender because they didn't think their lender would help them. The Homeownership Preservation Foundation (www.995hope.org), says that the sooner a homeowner picks up the phone and calls their lender or a U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development-certified counseling agency for assistance, the more options they have to avoid foreclosure.

Here are some additional tips offered by the legal experts at FindLaw.com for homeowners who are behind in paying their mortgage and are worried about foreclosure.

- * Pull out your mortgage documents. Find and read through your mortgage contract. It spells out the terms by which a homeowner (borrower) must repay their lender. Many homeowners, especially those with adjustable rate mortgages, are often surprised when their mortgage payment adjusts. The mortgage contract, which the homeowner signed to obtain the loan, spells out all of the terms in black and white.

- * Don't ignore letters from your lenders. Or phone calls or e-mails, either. If a homeowner is having problems making their payments, they should call or write to their lender's loss mitigation department as soon as possible and explain their situation. The sooner a homeowner contacts their lender, the more options a lender has in working with the homeowner to avoid a foreclosure. Be prepared with financial information, such as your monthly income, monthly expenses and debt. For example, if your monthly income suddenly drops, due to a job loss or to illness, the lender may be able to make a temporary adjustment to your mortgage until your monthly income increases again.

- * Get counseling. If you believe you may have trouble paying your mortgage, contact a HUD-certified mortgage counseling service, such as the Homeownership Preservation Foundation's Homeowner's HOPE hotline at (888) 995-HOPE, which offers free counseling 24 hours a day.

- * Seek legal assistance. Mortgage contracts can be difficult to understand. It's always wise to involve an attorney, even if you don't need an attorney present when signing a mortgage in the state you live. Likewise, if you're behind in your mortgage payments and believe foreclosure may be imminent, seek an attorney to help represent your interests in dealing with a mortgage company.

- * Take advantage of escrowing for property taxes. Some homeowners choose not to escrow for property taxes and property insurance. In other words, they choose to pay these expenses separately instead of incorporating them into their monthly mortgage payment. What many homeowners don't realize is that in many states, the city, county and state governments take priority over lenders in repossessing a property if the property taxes are not paid. In this case, a homeowner may be current on their mortgage payment but still be in danger of losing their home if the property taxes are not paid.

- * Be prepared to move. When a homeowner receives a notice, it does not mean the homeowner needs to move out immediately from their home. But, it does put a homeowner on notice that the lender intends to repossess the property by a certain date. The foreclosure process varies from state to state. Some states allow a lender to begin the foreclosure process if a homeowner is only one month behind in their mortgage payments. If there is no way to avoid foreclosure, you will need to seek a new residence.

- * Beware of scams. Because a foreclosure filing is a public record, anyone can review that public document, and that's often when many homeowners are contacted by scam artists who offer the hope of taking away a homeowner's problem. However, solutions that seem too good to be true often are. Never sign a document you don't understand.

Storm Door Won't Latch Tightly

Q. I'm having a problem with my storm door not closing all the way. I think the problem is that the door is two steps from the landing, and everyone, including myself, has a tendency to pull down on the handle when we are standing on the outside landing. I have tried WD 40 and also reset the screws, but it continues to stop as it hits the striker and does not close completely. My concern is that the wind will get a hold of storm door and tear it up. Please help. — Jack Z., via e-mail

A. Try putting a shim (a thin piece of cardboard or wood trimmed to the same size as the hinge) behind the storm door's bottom hinge and retighten the screws; this may lift the door the few centimeters it needs to clear the striker.

You also should double-check the striker itself. See if it is loose, and if not, loosen the plate to find out if you can adjust its position slightly so that the latch engages completely.

The door closer is probably not the trouble in this case, but double-check its attachment points. The screws may have pulled loose over the years and the closer's position may have shifted just a bit, preventing the door from closing fully. If the closer needs to be resecured, replace the old screws with longer ones (about 2 1/2 inches) so the closer attaches to the frame more securely.

Finally, check the condition of the door itself, including vinyl seals — they should be tight around the storm door, not bulging out.

Wrapping Up 2008

Here are some things to think about as the year draws to a close.

—Review your 2008 spending. Did you meet your savings goals? Are your miscellaneous expenses higher than you'd like? The new year is a good time to start again, with a clean slate, on household budgets and savings plans.

—Compare your credit-card balances with a year ago. Did you make significant headway in getting them whittled down or paid off? Look closely at the interest rates you're being charged. Do you need to pay off all but one card, one with the lowest rate?

—Check interest rates on CDs and money-market deposit accounts at your bank. (This is not the same as a money-market fund, which isn't insured by the FDIC.) If your money is languishing in a simple savings account, look for higher returns elsewhere without getting into the stock market.

—Is it smart to make a 13th mortgage payment? If you itemize on Schedule A, will the additional amount of the mortgage insurance deduction make enough of a difference? If you send an additional payment, mail it early enough to be received and processed in advance of Dec. 31.

—Property taxes: If these are split into two payments, chances are that one is due this year and one in 2009. Pay both the deduction for 2008.

halves now and take the deduction for 2008.

—If you make donations to charity, be sure to get a receipt and that it's clearly dated.

—How is your bill organization and check-writing working out? Do you need to devise a different way of making sure bills get paid on time, or for handling receipts and cents-off coupons?

—If you have home-improvement plans you didn't get to in the fall (and don't have a houseful of relatives for the holidays) consider having the work done now. Prices are likely to be lower than at any other time of the year. Check references of any contractors (ask if you can go look at the work), get estimates and have finish dates in writing with financial penalties for delays. Be sure the contract states that payment will be made in increments as the work progresses.

David Uffington regrets that he cannot personally answer reader questions, but will incorporate them into his column whenever possible. Write to him in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475, or send e-mail to columbreply@gmail.com.

Treating Frostbite

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My father emigrated from the Soviet Union after World War II. As a young man, he lost three fingers to frostbite, but he didn't like to talk about it. I live in a region that has harsh winters and often wonder about frostbite. How do you treat it? —O.S.

ANSWER: Frostbite is an apt term, as ice crystals actually form in the tissues where it happens. The crystals do some of the damage, as does a loss of water from affected cells. However, the greatest amount of damage comes from the disruption of blood supply to the frozen area.

Frostbite can happen anytime the temperature is below 32 F (0 C). It can happen at higher temperatures when the wind is blowing hard. Fingers, toes, hands, feet, chin, nose and ears are the most exposed parts of the body, and they are the ones most likely to be frostbitten.

Frostbitten skin should be warmed in a water bath with a temperature between 99 and 102 F (37 to 39 C). Don't begin the rewarming process if there's a chance of refreezing, which causes greater damage than the first freeze.

With first-degree frostbite, the skin turns red and swells, and people complain that it hurts. Rewarming the skin brings about full recovery.

In second-degree frostbite, the skin becomes white, and people feel little pain. In about 12 to 24 hours, blisters appear and even three to 10 days after recovery, the affected area still throbs and aches but should be functional.

In third-degree frostbite, the entire depth of skin is frozen and is black and dry. This degree of frostbite generally indicates loss of the skin and frozen tissues.

If you're interested in a small book packed with information on cold injuries, take a look at "Hypothermia, Frostbite and Other Cold Injuries" by Gordon Giesbrecht and James Wilkerson, printed by The Mountaineers Books.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Toy Safety on Every Parents' Wish List

Last holiday season's hysteria over the safety of some of the toys made overseas lodged a big lump of coal in many kids' stockings.

Not only did concerns over lead paint and other quality control issues result in a sleigh full of product recalls, but it also prompted Congress to take action. A new law requires that manufacturers put in place more stringent testing procedures and reduce the levels of toxic chemicals in their toys.

But the Grinchy news this holiday is that many of these stricter rules don't go fully into effect until 2009. That means it still falls to Moms and Dads to stay vigilant about the safety of the toys they are putting under the tree or purchasing for Hanukkah this year.

The good news is that, according to toy safety experts, there are resources available to parents - both from the retailer or the manufacturer - to help parents determine just how safe the toys on their kids' wish lists are.

"Parents should not hesitate to inquire about the levels of lead in toys, about the results of product safety tests conducted by a third party, or about whether the retailer itself randomly tests the toys," said Linda DeRose Droubay, director of Safety and Quality Compliance at Virginia-based The Children's Group, Inc., publisher of popular children's catalogs HearthSong® and

Magic Cabin®. "This kind of information should be available on a retailer or manufacturer's Web site."

Manufacturers and retailers, now including well known toy brands and big-box retailers, have joined longtime safety advocates such as HearthSong and Magic Cabin in instituting a range of safeguards this year.

Are your toys lead free?

The federal government requires that products contain no more than 600ppm (parts per million) of lead, with many states setting the limit at 90ppm and consumer groups pushing for 40ppm. HearthSong requires that all of our products are 100% non-toxic and are well below the set limits, many even as low as 5ppm.

Do you periodically check your stock for safety, including for lead?

It's a good idea for retailers to check the safety of products themselves, not just initial samples from the factory, and random testing is an excellent and effective way to do so. HearthSong, for example, regularly performs tests (for lead, quality and other safety elements) on products both in house and with third party labs to ensure the integrity of the product and verify that its safety claims are legitimate.

Do you test your toys?

Make sure that a sample of every product being sold, whether it be toys, kits, clothing or furniture, is tested to meet all applicable regulations and standards.

Do your company tests meet or exceed federal and state requirements?

The federal government sets certain baseline standards, with many states imposing even stricter requirements. Even so, many companies (including HearthSong) have made a commitment to meet or exceed both state and federal requirements.

Are companies and retailers required to document their safety procedures?

No, but the more transparent a company is about its safety policies and procedures the more comfortable consumers should feel about its products. Look for policy statements or FAQ's that give meaningful criteria for safety and quality.

ACID DRINKS AND ENAMEL LOSS

Nationwide, dentists have noted an increase in dental erosion (tooth enamel loss), which has now been confirmed by a recent study. When researchers examined 900 middle-school students (age 10 to 14), they found that nearly a third of them displayed eroded tooth enamel. When searching for possible causes, researchers has to look no farther than many of the popular soft drinks, sports drinks, some fruit drinks, and herbal teas that many of us consume. Some of these beverages have sufficient acid content to strip teeth of their enamel, causing brittleness and sensitivity. It is the dentist's job to make patients aware of this problem so they can make the adjustment necessary to prevent or stop it.

Early recognition of dental erosion is important to prevent serious irreversible damage to the array of teeth. Our primary dental care team has the expertise and the responsibility to provide this care for our patients with erosion. We stress preventive dentistry for all members of the family. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we strive to teach you good oral hygiene. In the long run you will have better dental health. Good experiences with dentistry are based on making the right choice in a family dentist and in taking steps to keep dental costs at a minimum through self-care at home between visits. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Other possible causes of dental erosion include some medications (such as aspirin) and certain medical conditions (such as acid reflux disease) that introduce gastric acids into the mouth.

High School Winter Sports Season Winding Up

By SEAN BRENNAN

The month of December brings with it not only the cold weather and snow, but also the start of the high school winter sports season.

The conclusion of the football, girls volleyball, soccer, boys golf and cross country seasons begins the start of basketball, ice hockey, wrestling and winter track schedules, and for the student/athletes at Quincy and North Quincy High School, another chance to shine on the court, rink, track or mat.

Last week and this week, the Presidents and Red Raiders have been in the process of holding tryouts, scrimmages and pre-season games in preparation for the beginning of the regular season, which for some teams starts as early as the end of this week.

The following is a list of the early season games for all of the varsity teams at both high schools. With the switch from the Atlantic Coast League to the Patriot League this year new opponents will present new challenges to both high schools and in the weeks ahead, the Quincy Sun will be doing full previews for all of the winter sports teams.

QUINCY

Boys' Basketball

The Presidents open the 2008-09 season with a home game Dec. 16 against Scituate HS (6:30 p.m. East Gym). Quincy will make its first road trip on Friday, Dec. 19 to play Duxbury HS.

Quincy, after the Duxbury game, will have three straight road games, before returning home on Jan. 7 to play Hingham HS. The Presidents will play rival North Quincy twice this year. The first game is scheduled for Jan. 9, the second Feb. 7.

Last year, Quincy advanced to the Division II South Sectional quarternals, before bowing to Catholic Memorial, 83-56. The team finished the season at 14-9 overall.

This season John Parry will be taking over for Bob Fisher who has moved on to be head coach at Marshfield HS.

Girls' Basketball

The Lady Presidents open the 2008-09 season with an away game Dec. 16 against Scituate HS, followed by back-to-back home games against Duxbury HS (Dec. 19, 6:30 p.m.) and Silver Lake HS (Dec. 22, 6:30 p.m.).

The team will play in the Dedham Christmas Tournament over the holidays before coming back home to play Whitman-Hanson HS on Jan. 5. Games against North Quincy are scheduled for Jan. 9 and Feb. 7.

Quincy, which was looking for its second straight trip to the Division II South Sectionals last winter, finished the year on the outside looking in. The Presidents finished last season with an 8-11 overall record.

Boys' Ice Hockey

Hockey season will face-off starting Dec. 17 with a road game against Pembroke HS. Quincy will play North Quincy HS in a benefit game for Patrick White on Dec. 20 at the QYA (8 p.m.), before hosting Milton HS on Dec. 27 (QYA, 10:30 a.m.).

The Presidents, after an away game against Milton HS on Dec. 30, will play five straight home games against Whitman-Hanson (Jan. 3), Middleboro (Jan. 7), Scituate (Jan. 10), NQ (Jan. 14) and Hanover (Jan. 17).

Last season Quincy qualified for the Division II South Sectionals with a 9-9-2 overall record.

Wrestling

The Presidents hosted Stoughton HS on Dec. 6 at the Dungeon Wrestling Club to open their season.

Next up for the team is the Nashoba Regional on Dec. 13, followed by an away duel-meet against Hingham HS on Dec. 17. Quincy will compete against W-H on Dec. 20 before competing in the Lowell Holiday Tournament on Dec. 27-28.

On Jan. 3, Quincy will host a quad-meet at the Dungeon Wrestling Club starting at 10 a.m.

NORTH QUINCY

Boys' Basketball

The Raiders will come into this season looking to build on their successful 2007-08 campaign.

NQ will open the season with a home game Dec. 12 (6:30 p.m.) against Bridge-water-Raynham HS followed by a home date Dec. 16 (6:30 p.m.) against Pembroke HS. The team will play back-to-back games against Hanover and Randolph on Dec. 19 and 22 before playing in the B-R Holiday Tournament on Dec. 27 and 29.

The Raiders will play Quincy Jan. 9 and Feb. 7. NQ went 3-0 against the Presidents last year.

NQ defeated B-R HS, 76-69; in the Division I post-season last winter for the program's first playoff win since 1991. The Raiders lost to Framingham HS, 74-45 in the quarterfinals and finished the year with 16-8 overall record.

Girls' Basketball

The 2008-09 season will have a difficult time matching last year's history-making run. North finished last year by advancing to their first-ever Division I South Sectional semifinal where they lost to New Bedford HS, 53-46.

The Raiders also won the ACL North title for a second straight year and finished the season with a 15-6 overall record.

A Job Well Done

On Wednesday, November 26, 2008, at approximately 3:10 A.M., Officers A.J. Carthas, James Menz, John McGovern and Matt Hockney were dispatched to the area of 949 Hancock St. on a report of two males entering vehicles.

Although the first two officers were dispatched to the call, the additional Officers joined in because there has been a rash of car break-ins during the past month.

The caller informed the dispatcher that she witnessed the two males pull on the door of her vehicle and then enter a blue car, a red SUV, and a silver SUV. Upon arrival, Officer Hockney observed three males sitting inside a Lincoln Town Car so he informed the Dispatcher and was soon joined by Officer Carthas.

The officers removed the suspects from the car, then separated them for questioning. Officer Hockney interviewed suspect #1, who was seated in the driver's seat. The second suspect, who was sitting in the front passenger seat, was questioned by Officer Carthas and the third suspect by Officer Menz. The suspects were searched and placed in separate cruisers while attempts were made to contact the owner of the vehicle.

During Officer Menz's search of suspect #3, he located the following on the suspect: One Bank of America Check which belonged to a resident of George Road in Quincy, a AAA card, a Mastercard, an iPod, a thumb drive and a cell phone, which belonged to a resident in a nearby home on Hancock Street. The suspects did not have any warrants.

Officer Hockney contacted the owner of the Lincoln Town car that the three males were found sitting in. The owner checked his car but nothing was missing, however, he did say that his floor mats from the 2 front seats were now in the back seat. He confided that he keeps a spare key to the ignition under the mat and that key was now in the ignition. He also said that a backpack in the back seat did not belong to him.

During the search of the backpack, a Garmin GPS was found with its black leather carrying case.

When checking the GPS, the system had 949 Hancock St. listed as its "Home." There was also a Sirius Satellite Radio, with its charger and remote control in the backpack. The owner of the red vehicle that had been broken into came out to meet with the Officers. He confirmed that someone had been inside his vehicle as well but nothing was missing. Officer Carthas located a silver SUV with its interior light on. This vehicle's center console was open along with the glove compartment. The owner could not be contacted at the time, but the name matched the two cards found on suspect #3.

The three suspects were placed under arrest and transported to the station for booking. Officer Carthas then interviewed the caller, who said that she just happened to look out her window and noticed a young black male checking the handle of her car. Her doors were locked and she noticed the male moved on to the silver SUV. She noticed one male enter both driver's side doors and also open the rear tailgate. After leaving this car, she observed the suspect enter a red SUV, joined by a second younger male. She then saw them enter the Lincoln Town car and that is when the police arrived on scene.

At this time, Sergeant Patrick Buonaugurio went over to George Road and contacted the owner of the Bank of America check. It was confirmed that his car had been entered and the check was missing. Sergeant Buonaugurio also located another vehicle on George Road that appeared to have been entered. The center console and glove compartment were open and items were thrown about the vehicle.

An attempt to contact the owner was unsuccessful but a message was left. While Officer Carthas was filing his report, the victim of one of the breaks came in to the station and provided a description of items missing. He then positively I.D.'d the Garmin GPS with leather case, Sirius satellite radio with charger and remote control. He was also given his Mastercard and AAA card that had his name directly on them.

During the search while being booked, Officer Benny Chin located a set of headphones and charger, compatible with the recovered iPod. These items were also found on suspect #3. The fingerprints taken from suspect #3 were submitted for identification and confirmation came back to a different name than that given by the suspect. This suspect had an outstanding ing warrant from the Boston Police Department for being a runaway/missing person, along with four "Failure to Appear" warrants issued out of Dorchester Juvenile Court. These charges included Disorderly Conduct, Armed Robbery and Assault and Battery on a Police Officer. All three suspects were juveniles from Dorchester and they were charged with "Breaking and Entering of a Motor Vehicle, Receiving Stolen Property over $250." Suspect #3 was additionally charged with "Providing a False name to Police Following Arrest."

Nice Work!

In many cases, property owners make two mistakes that end up being costly. The first error is leaving the car unlocked. Criminals often go from car to car tugging on the handles and then entering the unlocked car. The second error is leaving valuables inside the vehicle, usually in plain view. This provides the element of opportunity for the criminal. GPS units are very popular items taken from vehicles. Often times, owners will remove the unit from sight, but leave the suction cup visible, which often leads to a break. Even leaving a large closed box or briefcase visible inside the car entices criminals to enter the car to see what valuables may be inside.

PAST BREAKS AND ATTEMPTS: Edwards Street, Faxon Road, Ricciuti Drive, North Quincy High School, Hull Street, Willard Street, (100 and 800 blocks) Burgin Parkway.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

Are you a persistent person? Do you have that determination to keep on going when things are tough; that refusal to give in to discouragement? It is a very important quality to possess. Without persistence nothing of importance would ever get done.

"People of mediocre ability," Bernard Baruch once said, "sometimes achieve outstanding success because they don't know enough to quit."

And one of the most famous 'persisters,' Thomas Edison, said, "Seventy-five percent of the world's failures wouldn't have failed at all if they'd only kept at what they were trying to do. Our greatest weakness lies in giving up. The most certain way to succeed is always to try just one more time."

Yes, the will to keep going... the will to refuse to give in... the will to continue is very much to be admired. Being a 'persister' can be hard work, but it can bring much happiness and good feelings.

PMC Raises $35 million For Dana-Farber Cancer Institute 29 Quincy Residents Help Raise Over $145,000 For Jimmy Fund

The Pan-Massachusetts Challenge (PMC) raised a record-breaking $35 million for cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its August cycling event-$2 million more than the organization raised last year. The total sum is more than twice the amount ever raised for charity by any other athletic fundraising event. It was the single largest contribution made to the Jimmy Fund.

And Quincy was a major part of this fundraising cause, as 29 Quincy residents collected more than $145,000 out of the $35 million raised.

The 29 residents who participated in the 2008 PMC included Jose Alvarez, Meghan Broden, Scott Cooper, Matt Dunn, Robin Franceschini, Patricia Fraser, Domenic Giammarco, Kevin Gillespie, Thomas Herlihy, Daniel Herman, Eric Horsman, Ebony Jack, Al LeBelle, Mark Light, Brian Lynch, Richard Marcella, Adam Mauskopf, Paul McCarthy, Patrick McDermott, Theresa Mulcahy, Verona Outerbridge, Elliot Place, Keith Reynolds, Michael Ryan, Jennifer Savoie, Karen Walsh, Adam Warsofsky, Ann Marie White and David White.

Founded in 1980 when 36 cyclists rode across Massachusetts and raised $10,200 for the Jimmy Fund, the PMC is known today as the "gold standard" of athletic fundraising events, due to the unprecedented sums it raises and its consistently efficient charity pass-through rate.

In 2008, the PMC attracted 5,232 cycling fundraisers, about 300 more than in 2007. Riders came to Massachusetts from 36 states and eight countries. Each cyclist was required to raise between $1,300 and $4,000 to participate, depending on the chosen route.

Since its inception in 1980, the PMC has raised nearly $240 million for the Jimmy Fund.

"That the PMC exceeded its fundraising goal in this very troubling economy is a tribute to PNCers' commitment to raising money for cancer research and care," said Billy Starr, PMC founder and executive director. "It also shows that the importance of public and corporate funding for cancer research is widely understood."

The 30th annual PMC is set for August 1 and 2, 2009. Registration opens online on Jan. 12, 2009 for alumni and Jan. 20 for newcomers. For more information about the Pan-Mass Challenge, visit www.pmc.org.

Koch To Slash $2 Million From City Budget

tax levies.

Under the previous budget, taxes on the average single family home were expected to increase by $582. Koch's new budget cuts would reduce the increase by approximately $48.

Koch said the new cuts will leave some jobs unfilled, and substantially cut the overtime budget, but attempt to maintain the current level of core services.

"We remain focused on two primary goals-righting out fiscal ship and maintaining the core services our residents expect and deserve," said Koch.

"These cuts and any cuts in the future will no doubt affect those services, but our administration is doing, and will do, everything in its power to protect those services and weather this crisis."

Koch said he plans an early meeting with the School Committee Wednesday to discuss reductions to that budget, "We're going to have to make some severe cuts. We have to share the burden."

"We continue to monitor revenues. Our local receipts are worsening in some areas," said Koch, noting, as an example, that excise receipts are lower as people keep older cars.

Koch also announced that budget planning for the fiscal year beginning in July is now underway, several months sooner than is traditional. He said that "everything is on the table" when it comes to potential cuts in the fiscal year 2010 budget.

Mayor Koch met with union leaders before making the budget announcement and said he will continue working closely with city department heads and labor leaders as the city copes with the economic crisis.

"I am confident we will not only get through this storm, but we will emerge a stronger city," said Koch who noted that there are no new spending programs in the budget.

Koch also highlighted reforms in the city's financial management operations, a cost-saving trash contract and an agreement by the city and unions to join the state's health insurance program that should save the city $4 million in Fiscal year 2010.

Koch announced the budget cuts at a press conference which drew major Boston television and news reporters eager for details of recent spending to redecorate the mayor's office.

Koch Forms Roundtable Of Business Leaders

Mayor Thomas Koch has formed a roundtable group of local business leaders to listen to ideas and concerns and share the administration's plans for business expansion and other issues facing the city.

"We have worked hard during this first year to forge a positive relationship with the city's business community, and we are open to any and all ideas," Koch said. "This group will be a great sounding board for our plans going forward and we look forward to being a sounding board for them."

The group's members are:

Phyllis Godwin, CEO, Granite City Electric; Charles Baker, CEO, Harvard Pilgrim Health Care; Daniel Quirk, CEO, Quirk Autos; Edward Keohane, President, Keohane Funeral Homes; Dan Flynn, CEO, DJ Flynn Associates; Erin Connors, Owner, Eatin' Healthy; Developer Peter O'Connell; Sean Galvin, President, Galvin Construction; Raymond Tung, Senior Vice President, United Commercial Bank.

The group met for the first time last week, discussing ways to keep the business community involved in government, expansion ideas, taxes, and marketing Quincy to new businesses.

"We are lucky in Quincy to have dedicated business people who truly care about the community and care about the direction of the city," Koch said. "I look forward to working closely with them and continuing our relationships with groups such as Quincy 2000, the Quincy Business Association and the South Shore Chamber of Commerce."

Lowe's Home Center Gets Council Approval

Lowe's Home Centers Monday won City Council approval to build and operate a 124,000 sq. ft. home improvement center and a 29,000 sq. ft. garden center off Burgin Parkway, South Quincy, by an 8-0 vote.

The Lowe's Center will be accessed from Burgin Parkway through a portion of old Penn Street that was recently relinquished by the city.

Councillors voted after

Lowe's attorney, Ed Fleming, outlined several modifications to the original plan as recommended by councillors at past hearings.

"Almost every single issue the city has raised has been addressed," said Fleming as he described more than a half dozen adjustments to the original plans.

Fleming, also, said that Lowe's would immediately provide $300,000 toward a mitigation fund for improvements at the intersection of Liberty, Water and Pleasant Streets.

In addition, Fleming said that Lowe's will eliminate one of two freestanding signs in the original design and upgrade the caliber of trees in the landscape plan from 2.5-inch diameter to 3.5 to 4-inch trunks.

Lowe's agreed to new concrete sidewalks and railing as well as a Park Commission review of the new Grasso Park.

Businesses Also Unhappy Residents Critical Of Budget Process, Tax Rate Hikes

BY LAURA GRIFFIN

City Council got a wake-up call loud and clear Monday as dozens of persons packed council chambers to protest this year's hefty real estate tax hike.

The city will never be the same, according to Councillor John Keenan who said, "From this day, the paradigm has changed. I think it has changed forever."

The council approves the municipal budget every July and the citizen speakers blamed the council for not slashing the 2009 budget last summer, for lack of oversight on current expenditures, and lack of long-range planning.

"We don't hire you for hindsight; we hire you for foresight," one speaker told the council.

Nineteen persons spoke and many charged the council failed to properly scrutinize the 2009 budget and have abandoned oversight of expenditures, while others offered advice on financial planning or lamented the dire effects of the tax increase in this economic tailspin.

Resident Carol Fischer of Wollaston urged the council not to approve the levy Monday in order to give residents time to adjust to the increase and budget the funds.

"You got the recap at 8 p.m. tonight," said Fischer, adding that by voting, "You're saying our voice does not count. Say no to this tax rate."

Kevin Burgoyne of Wollaston who is self-employed cited "out of control spending" and the audience applauded numerous times as he lashed out at Mayor Thomas Koch's carpet, the number of firemen on fire trucks, and called the city's free all-day kindergarten, "very expensive daycare" at

175% Classification Approved New Tax Rates: Residential $12.60 - Up $1.77 Commercial $25.92 - Up $3.70

After more than two hours of citizen input, protest and lectures on finances, City Council unanimously adopted a tax levy of 175 percent Monday, basically guaranteeing major tax hikes for both residential and business properties.

The state's Department of Revenue must approve the new tax rates after their review of the city's financial data.

Under the current plan, the residential tax rate will increase by $1.77 from the current $10.83 to $12.60 per $1000 for residential property.

The commercial, industrial and personal property rate will increase by $3.70 from $22.22 to $25.92.

In what several called a "symbolic" gesture, councillors approved a $2,000,000

Gutro Proposes First Ethics Ordinance For City Officials, Employees

Ward 5 City Councillor Doug Gutro plans to introduce Quincy's first ever ethics ordinance to the City Council in January.

"Recent reports of high profile public officials across the nation and within our state who have daringly betrayed the public trust erode people's confidence across all levels of government," said Gutro. "While I firmly believe that the overwhelming majority of public employees in our city conduct themselves in accordance with the highest of ethical standards, the reputation of all government officials and employees suffer at the hands of a few who have abused their positions."

"I believe that those who serve in government; whether elected, appointed, or as an employee, recognize that we have an obligation to the taxpayers to serve with high ethical standards. The time has come to codify these standards into local law with enforceable penalty provisions and to provide mandatory training and guidance on issues of ethics and conflict of interest."

Gutro is considering regulations pertaining to use of public property, including vehicles, equipment and materials; conflict of interest; improper influence (use of one's position for personal gain); acceptance of gifts; outside employment; and political activities. Gutro noted that some communities across the state and country already have enacted such laws.

"This is an opportunity for the City of Quincy and its public officials and employees to raise the ethical bar and lead by example, and I believe that we are up to the job," Gutro said.

Koch Blog On New Website

Mayor Thomas Koch has launched a blog on his new website, www.mayorom-koch.com, to open a new line of dialogue with residents and to provide regular updates on city issues.

"Communicating directly with our residents is one of the most important parts of the job, and this blog provides another way for us to accomplish that goal," Koch said. "I hope it will keep residents informed and eventually lead to more people getting involved in the community."

The website, which was developed by LIDO Consulting of Quincy and programmed by Joe Giggey of Gig-It Technology, includes the blog, a news section, and the ability to sign up for e-mail from the mayor and his team.

Since launching the site, Koch has discussed city finances, a controversial zoning proposal and other issues on the blog.

No government funds went into the creation or operation of the site, which was paid for by his campaign committee.

Crisis Expected To Deepen

$2 Million Budget Cut Only The 'First Step'

Mayor Thomas Koch says that the $2 million in mid-year budget cuts approved by the City Council Monday marks a "first step" toward tackling an economic crisis that is expected to deepen in coming months.

Koch pointed to looming state aid cuts and a dire picture for the upcoming fiscal year to suggest that the city will be looking at "fundamental changes in how it function" in coming months. He added that planning for the Fiscal Year 2010 budget is already underway, much earlier than in prior years.

"Everything is on the table going forward, and we know this is going to require serious, difficult decisions," Koch said. "We are taking action now, as we have throughout the last several months, to protect the core services of the city and right our fiscal ship."

The additional budget cuts approved by the City Council bring total budget reductions in the current fiscal year to $5 million. The cuts include several unfilled positions and expense reductions in several city departments.

In addition, Koch this week directed all department heads to restrict overtime spending and cease allowing employees to take home city vehicles.

The cuts came as the City Council finalized the tax split between homeowners and business owners, and the state will now have to certify the city's tax rate. Koch first announced in the spring that maintaining city services and correcting a series of problems would require a substantial tax increase this year.

"We are correcting these issues now so we are not in this position again," Koch said. "If we allow these issues to linger, the situation will only worsen and the path to stability becomes that much more difficult."

He pointed to a series of efforts over the last several months to change the way the city does business, including the enrollment in the state-run health insurance program, which will save taxpayers $4 million in the fiscal year 2010. The mayor also highlighted reforms in the Water and Sewer Department, a new financial management system, and the cost-saving trash contract as examples of collaborative efforts that will ultimately save money for taxpayers.

Koch told councilors he hopes to continue working with them as decisions are made in coming months.

"I know we will not only get through this crisis, we will emerge a stronger community," Koch said.

Small Fire At Point Webster School

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed a toilet paper dispenser in the first floor girls room at the Point Webster Middle School Tuesday morning.

The fire was doused by Principal James McGuire with a dry chemical extinguisher and students were evacuated for about 20 minutes while the alarm system was restored.

Deputy Fire Chief Gary Smyth estimated the damage at $1,000 to a partition between stalls. Police and school security are investigating.

VICTORIA HUBLEY, a fifth grade student at the Wollaston School, recently was chosen principal-for-a-day. Here she is in action, surrounded by her staff-for-a-day, secretaries Ginie Duffy and Ann Marie Norris and Linda Billikas, vice principal.

MWRA Main Work May Cause Water Pressure Loss

This Friday and Saturday evenings, the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) will be installing valves on the water main that brings most of Quincy its water.

Residents may experience a loss of water pressure beginning about 10 p.m. and lasting until about 6 a.m. the following morning.

The MWRA asks all residents to restrict water use from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. to essential purposes only.

If discolored water does occur, it will result from a small amount of iron in the pipes.

While safe for drinking, cooking and other uses, items will stain light colored items in the laundry, especially when bleach is used.

Residents should check water clarity before washing any white or lighter colored laundry during this period of work.

Residents can call the MWRA's Operation Center at 617-305-5970 to report any problems.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Dec. 25, 1884, Mr. Layne Hall of Silver Creek, N.Y., is born. At his death on Nov. 20, 1990, he had a valid driver's license. He was 105 years old, making him the oldest legal driver ever.

• On Dec. 28, 1895, the world's first commercial movie screening takes place at the Grand Cafe in Paris. French siblings Louis and Auguste Lumiere screened a series of short scenes from everyday French life, and charged admission.

• On Dec. 23, 1912, Keystone Pictures releases its first "Keystone Kop" movie, "Hoffmeyer's Release." The Keystone Kops films were silent, black-and-white movies starring a crew of bumbling policemen who bumped into and fell over each other in a frenetic sequence of slapstick gags.

• On Dec. 24, 1923, President Calvin Coolidge touches a button and lights up the first national Christmas tree to grace the White House grounds. The tree was also the first to be decorated with electric lights. The tradition has been repeated with every administration since then.

• On Dec. 22, 1956, a baby gorilla named Colo is born at the Columbus Zoo in Ohio, becoming the first-ever gorilla born in captivity. At that time, captive gorillas often never learned parenting skills from their own parents in the wild, so the Columbus Zoo built Colo a nursery, and she was reared by zookeepers. Colo is still alive today.

• On Dec. 26, 1966, the first day of the first Kwanzaa is celebrated in Los Angeles. The seven-day holiday, which has strong African roots, was designed as a celebration of African-American family, community and culture.

• On Dec. 27, 1979, in an attempt to stabilize the turbulent political situation in Afghanistan, the Soviet Union sends 75,000 troops to enforce the installation of Babrak Karmal as the new leader of the nation. The new government and the Soviet presence, however, had little success. The Soviet intervention cost Russia dearly. The seemingly endless civil war in Afghanistan resulted in thousands of Soviet dead and untold monetary costs.

Sunbeams

They'll Be In Washington Jan. 20

An estimated three to four million are expected to be jammed into Washington, Jan. 20 for the inauguration of Barack Obama, the first African-American president in the nation's history.

Among them will be at least two prominent Quincy Democrats:

Patrick McDermott, Norfolk County Register of Deeds, a former city councillor, and Alicia Gardner, former Ward 6 city councillor.

McDermott is Democratic State Committeeman and Gardner State Committeewoman in the Norfolk-Plymouth District.

Going to Washington with them will be Gardner's daughter, Nancy DeLisle, and her sister, Nancy Noble of Harwich. They already have their hotel accommodations in Alexandria, VA, just outside Washington.

McDermott and Gardner were not original supporters of Obama. McDermott supported Joseph Biden and Gardner, Hillary Clinton. Biden, of course, will become the vice president.

Gardner says she had no trouble going over to Obama after Clinton was eliminated in the bruising primary battles.

"I'm a good Democrat," she says.

She's eagerly awaiting the trip, as is McDermott.

"It's going to be great," he says. "Just being there will be an experience to remember. A day in history."

YOU MIGHT SAY that Brian Palmucci, who is running for the Ward 4 city council seat is really off and running.

The city election is months away (September and November) but he has already officially announced his candidacy, held his campaign kickoff and is now circulating campaign literature.

Observers can't recall any candidate ever getting off to such an early start.

MAHONEY

PULEO

THREE SCHOOL COMMITTEE incumbents are up for re-election next year.

Anne Mahoney will be seeking her second four-year term.

State Rep. Ronald Mariano and Nick Puleo, who were elected at City Council-School Committee joint conventions to fill out vacated terms, will be on the election ballot next year.

Puleo succeeded James Timmins, who left the seat to become city solicitor. Mariano, a long time former school committee member, replaced Kevin Mulvey who was named public schools Human Resources Director.

NEED A NEW battery for your watch? You can get one at Rogers Jewelry in Quincy Center and help those in need.

J. BERTMAN

The Bertmans, Mark, Isobel and Jeff, are again donating all proceeds from battery replacements to the Salvation Army.

The battery donations, which began at Thanksgiving and will continue to the New Year, go into a small Salvation Army kettle in the store.

This has been a tradition for several years and so far has raised over $30,000.

This year, despite the economy crisis, people are being surprisingly generous, Jeff notes.

Like the woman who came in and had a battery replaced for $8. She handed him a $20 bill.

When he told her $8 was going into the Salvation Army kettle, she said: "Oh, then put the whole $20 in."

The kettle is in Rogers year round and has given the Salvation Army over $50,000 totally.

PERSONAL: To Sun subscribers Mrs. Louise Swanson and Mrs. Susan McGregor of West Quincy, Donald Reinhart of North Quincy; Dorothy Dow, Squantum, Clara Cardillo, Adams Shore; Joseph Donovan, Quincy Center; Eleanor Reidy, Milton; Paul Judge of Salisbury, MD and Dorothy Andreko of Imperial, PA: Thank you most sincerely for your kind words.

May The Sun keep shining.

THIS 1942 real photo postcard is a view of an Eastern Mass Street Railway electric powered snowplow on Sea Street in Houghs Neck. This view is facing east from the curve at The Bit. Babcock Street is just out of view on the left and Peterson Road is on the right. The Eastern Mass used Russell snow sweepers and snowplows to clear their electric trolley tracks until the 1940's when they converted from trolleys to buses. They then used big, powerful Walter snowplows to clear the routes. This postcard was used as a Christmas greeting card; note the lower left corner. Thanks to Bob Galligan, a true Necker, for locating the scene. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Illegally Parked Cars Should Be Ticketed

I applaud the Quincy City Council's recent efforts to raise new revenue through the raising of fees and fines in the City of Quincy. However, I would like to point out that unless the Quincy Police Department changes their attitude towards issuing parking tickets, much of this new revenue will go unrealized by the city.

As a longtime resident of Quincy, I have witnessed the issue of illegally parked vehicles grow within the city over many years. The Quincy Police Department has not been doing the job they are sworn to uphold. Recently, Police Chief Keenan stated to me, "The issue of illegally parked vehicles is a quality of life issue but is not a priority for the Police Department. We (the Police Department) are not a revenue generating department."

This is the exact reason why illegally parked vehicles have become the problem it is today. If the Quincy Police Department cannot or will not issue parking tickets, then we should hire new city workers who will issue tickets. I am sure there are numerous unemployed individuals in Quincy, who would be more than willing to issue tickets, day or night, at a significantly lower cost than the Quincy Police Department.

If the issue is important enough to be addressed in the business areas such as Quincy Center and Wollaston, then it should be important enough to be addressed in all areas of the city.

Mayor Koch, before you suggest the 15% hike in property taxes, I would strongly urge you to ensure the current city employees are doing all they can to collect as much revenue as possible first! Please address this issue with all parties and ensure public safety becomes the number one priority for the Quincy Police Department.

Quincy Needs An Auditor

I don't care where the money comes from, and how, but the city needs a city auditor immediately. Currently, having the Chief Financial Officer only reporting to the mayor, and not to the City Council also, is wrong and unacceptable.

We need more transparency and accountability in city government, and the position of auditor is an important step in that direction. Is this what you mean by "reform," Mayor Koch? I hope not.

City Loses Interest In Voting Machines

By FRANK McCAULEY

No apparent interest in the immediate purchase of voting machines for Quincy was registered by the city council after Mrs. Hattie May Thomas, city clerk had given the councillors facts she had obtained about the gadgets during the course of an investigation, which she had made at the request of the council.

It would cost approximately $120,000 to place these machines in each of the city's 32 precinct-polling places, it was estimated, as each machine costs $1,300 and each polling place would need three.

They are expensive to handle, store and maintain, the city clerk said, and would eliminate only one election officer in each precinct. They need a highly skilled person to keep in working order, Mrs. Thomas noted.

NAZI DRIVE STILL UNCHECKED; GERMAN ASSAULT PUSHES AHEAD TO BELGIUM AND LUXEMBURG

Local attention was focused on the heaviest German Counteroffensive of the western campaign coordinated with a savage V-bomb barrage, rolled unchecked through the American First Army lines to a depth of several miles, punching through into Belgium and Luxembourg at three or more points along a fluid 70-mile battlefield.

Late field dispatches indicated the Americans were riding the German blow and putting up increasingly stiff resistance as the initial shock of the attack passed. (Editor's note: This military action between Dec. 17, 1944 and late January 1945 became known as "The Battle of the Bulge.")

Quincy Art Students Sample BU Programs

It wasn't exactly hands on but it was the next best thing.

A group of Quincy High School students who are considering careers in art attended the annual open house at Boston University on Halloween.

The students, shepherded by instructors Rita Dinsmore and Andy Bell, reviewed portfolios, walked through art galleries and toured the studios of some 50 practicing artists.

"We could see where they work and where they spend most of their time," said Ali Hersey, a junior at Quincy High, "the place where the magic happens."

The students also gathered information on the programs offered by BU's College of Fine Arts and its abroad study programs were discussed in a lecture.

It being Halloween, some of the visitors from Quincy dressed in spooky costumes, which accentuated the lively mood.

And they had lunch in the BU cafeteria, which elicited rave reviews such as:

"They had good bagels and there was a Starbucks there which was awesome."

Hard times in the economy is making for harder times in the Quincy Animal Shelter.

pace.

QMC Updates Neighbors On New Steam Boiler Plant

Dr. Gary Gibbons and Ed Browne, the CEO and vice president of Quincy Medical Center respectively, updated the hospital's planned boiler replacement project for 20 neighbors at a recent meeting.

Once the new boiler is completed, the existing 1954 steam boiler plant will be shut down, eliminating neighborhood concerns about the black smoke periodically emitted from the 150-foot smoke stack.

The new boiler will run on natural gas with ultra low diesel fuel as a backup energy supply.

As part of the project, the medical center will construct two small buildings to house the new steam and hot water boilers. New underground storage tanks will hold the backup diesel fuel.

Gibbons and Browne committed QMC to:

- Ensure construction work doesn't begin until 8 a.m. daily.

- Work toward improving the drainage adjacent to homes on Colonial Drive.

- Improve a buffer between the hospital and adjacent yards to reduce improper disposal of trash, syringes and other articles neighbors occasionally find in their yards.

"I applaud Dr. Gibbons and the leadership of Quincy Medical Center for moving forward on a project that is important to both the hospital and the neighborhood," said Ward 5 City Councillor Doug Gutro.

"I appreciate QMC's willingness to listen to neighborhood concerns and modify their plans based on those concerns."

Gutro and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin hosted the neighborhood meeting.

"This initiative is one more example of Quincy Medical Center's proactive approach, under Dr. Gibbons stewardship, to partner with the community for the betterment of the collective well-being," said Coughlin.

"The neighborhood environment and health will benefit with this cleaner burning technology and un-wasted fiscal resources can be better allocated to health care costs."

Quincy Medical Center has indicated its desire to get the project off the ground in the next three months.

Lowe's Home Center Gets Council Approval

The one remaining sticking point is a 400 Centre Street property which previously housed Lincoln Granite Inc., which was rezoned as Planned Unit development along with the lots, used by Lowe's.

The Centre Street parcel is, also, owned by Brewster

Family Land Trust which holds the lease on the Lowe's property and was rezoned along with all lots for Lowe's retail outlet.

In the past, Planning Director Dennis Harrington and Traffic Engineer Jack Gill warned city council that any new access from the former Lincoln Granite site to Centre Street would create traffic chaos.

Fleming said that the Brewster Trust had agreed to delay any development of the Centre Street property for a year while they seek access through Mitchell Street, a paper street.

Councillor John Keenan sought a legal guarantee that the property could not be accessed from Centre Street and was supported by Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee.

Keenan's motion failed on a 6-2 vote.

The council subsequently approved the plan. Councillor Michael McFarland recused himself from the discussion and vote.

cut in the 2009 budget as requested by Mayor Thomas Koch and an additional $40,000 cut recommended by Councillor Joseph Finn.

"It's a Band-Aid on a hemorrhage," said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin of the $2 million plus budget cut.

The $2 million budget reduction lopped pennies off the anticipated residential and commercial tax rate as detailed on Dec. 1 when the administration predicted a $12.75 residential rate and a $26.23 commercial rate.

The $2 million dollar budget reduction should cut the residential rate by 15 cents and the commercial rate by 31 cents.

The owner of the average single family home valued at $347,200 now faces a $530 tax increase, rather than a $582 increase.

SHINE Counsel At Aging Office

SHINE is an acronym for Council Rezones Former Ledger Printing Site

City Council approved the rezoning of 200 Crown Colony from Industrial A to Planned Unit Development (PUD) as requested by the Low Trust.

B.J.'s Wholesale Club has considered locating an outlet on the parcel which previously housed the Patriot Ledger printing plant.

Members of the building trades and ironworkers unions were among more a dozen speakers who supported the project at Monday's meeting, saying a B.J.'s would bring employment to the city as well as lower prices for purchases.

Christine Grundy of Robinson Street said B.J.'s will become another Big Box store that may be obsolete," while others fear additional traffic and worry that a B.J.'s would diminish the business community at Crown Colony.

The Planning Board rejected the original plan for a B.J.'s on the site and this rezoning now allows the decision to be made by the City Council.

'Jesus Of Nazareth' Topic At First Parish Church

The Spirituality Film Discussion Group will meet Friday, Dec. 19, at 7 p.m. in United First Parish Church to view Part I of the film, Jesus of Nazareth, in celebration of the Christmas season.

Reviewers Mick Martin and Marsha Porter called it a "vivid movie of the life of Jesus . . . beautifully directed by the poetic genius of Franco Zeffirelli. An outstanding cast gives a warm and sensitive performance in what is the finest film to date of the familiar Bible story."

Refreshments will be served at 6:30 p.m. followed by the showing followed by a discussion. For more information, contact the Rev. Michelle Walsh at 617-767-7933.

Koch Wants Crackdown On Water Stealing

The word "scofflaw" was invented in Quincy during prohibition to shame illicit drinkers into mending their wicked, wicked ways. It didn't work.

Now it's used to describe those property owners who illegally hook into the city's water system and Mayor Tom Koch is out to see that the law does work.

The Koch administration is pitching a revised city law that sets penalties for residents found to be using the system without a meter or with a tampered meter.

The law has been presented to the City Council and the amounts of the fines will be determined as part of the Council's deliberations.

"Our team has done great work to date dramatically changing the way the Water and Sewer Department operates," said Koch.

"This ordinance is a natural step toward ensuring that property owners who use city water are not doing so on the backs of other ratepayers, especially residential ratepayers."

An internal review shortly after Koch took office found a system with lax internal controls, unmetered users, faulty billing systems and a series of other issues.

The Water and Sewer Department began a crackdown on water scofflaws, discovering a number of illegal hookups and unmetered properties.

In addition to cracking down on unmetered users, the department has increased collection rates, reformed billing practices, resolved a $3 million deficit and started a new meter inspection program.

The department also has obtained grant money for a video system that can inspect inside water and sewer pipes.

Administration officials said the practice of billing water and sewer ratepayers for costs associated with the regular city budget was dramatically curtailed this year.

More than $5 million in "indirect costs" that were issued on water and sewer bills that ended up paying for regular operations of the Fire and Police Departments, for example, stopped this year, they said.

And, oh, yes, the word "scofflaw" was the prize-winner in a contest sponsored by Delcevere King, a wealthy Quincy banker and ardent prohibitionist, in 1924.

Elks Addition Approved

City Council Monday unanimously approved a 9,740 sq. ft addition to the Elks facility at 254 Quarry St.

The addition will increase the size of the function room, from 200 to 285 seats, and allow the members' quarters to move to the upper level.

The Parking lot will also be increased from 126 spaces to 219 and an additional 28 new trees will be added.

Both Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said that letters had been sent out to the affected neighbors and there has been no negative response.

Always Keep Fire Prevention In Mind During These Cold Months

Watching the news lately, you see a sudden increase in fires. As of this writing, all have taken place in other communities. Our preventative efforts including our attempts at educating the public in fire safety education has its limitations, individuals must still embrace the message and act on it. That's where our efforts are limited, that's where we lose control. You just hope our prompting instills an awareness of precaution and the public acts on our recommendations. Lately, it seems that you have.

Over my 15 years in fire prevention, I believe the message has been well received. Without specifically quantifying success with numbers, code enforcement and education have had a positive effect on the frequency of fire within this community. Lying back on a record of success however only invites disaster.

Our work continues, as does yours. Our hope is however, that over time, we successfully instill a proactive attitude in you; that fire prevention is automatically and naturally at the foundation of your efforts both at home and at the workplace. That attitude pays off if embraced.

December and January in the Northeast are the busiest residential fire months. The heating season and the holidays negatively impact fire statistics, while I write suggesting that those statistics can be our impetus for further vigilance in precaution within our homes during these months. It worked last year and can again.

Where heating related incidents are a major contributor to the increase in residential fire this time of year, has your heating appliance been maintained as required preparing you for these colder months? Is basement storage a safe distance from those heating appliances? With oil burners for instance, we recommend that combustible items be stored a minimum five-feet from boilers. Casually discarded combustible items like clothing or storage boxes left too close to heating units can ignite over time.

Particularly during cold spells when heating appliances are operating more frequently, these items are particularly susceptible to ignition. So please take the time to reassess and examine your basement storage practices and make certain combustible storage is a safe distance from heating appliances. That effort will do much to prevent one of the more prevalent causes of residential fire during these next couple of months.

While we are on the subject, please refrain from using kitchen stoves as heating appliances. I recall a fire a few years ago that occurred during a cold spell when a stove ignited adjacent combustibles within the kitchen. That stove had been used as a heater when that fire occurred. Never place combustibles on a stovetop or use a stovetop for storage of combustible items. While in this instance, the decision to use a kitchen stove as a heater cost the individual their home.

Here is an example of how fire statistics evolve:

Let's use fire statistics to our advantage and be particularly mindful of the more frequent causes of fire during these colder months. Our casual efforts in preventing the most probable causes of fire during these months can go a long way in assuring a safer home and a safer winter. Thank you for doing so.

PITTED KERATOLYSIS

Pitted keratolysis is a skin condition that affects the soles of the feet and, less commonly, the palms of the hands. In these areas, the condition appears as white patches studded with small, shallow pits in the skin. These pits can sometimes join together (coalesce) to form larger, crater-like lesions. These manifestations are due to the superficial bacterial infection of the skin. The result is very smelly feet. The appearance is more dramatic when the feet are wet. Pitted keratolysis may occasionally be itchy or painful. This condition can be successfully treated with topical antibiotics such as fusidic acid cream, or with oral erythromycin. It can quickly recur unless the feet are kept dry. Most people suffer from some kind of foot disorder at some point in their lives, from problems ranging from skin conditions to bunions to nail problems to bone deformities. Heredity, poor foot care, injuries, and medical conditions are often the culprits, but poorly fitting and/or inappropriate footwear can also cause problems. Whatever condition your feet are in, we will treat them with care and compassion and restore comfort and ease of movement. We will also recommend action you can take at home. For footcare for the family, welcome to my office at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER, PH: 781-986-3668. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

P.S. Wearing unventilated (occlusive) footwear, such as rubber boots and vinyl shoes, increases the risk for developing pitted keratolysis.

Rev. Sheldon Bennett:

UN Rights Declaration Links Freedom, Security

The United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which passed its 60th anniversary Dec. 10, is not just simply a list of rights.

"It is more than a menu from which a country can choose only those it likes," said the Rev. Sheldon Bennett. "It is to be read as an organic and coherent whole."

"It is only when taken as a whole that the Declaration can be said to be truly universal. It is through the linking of individual freedoms with social and economic security that peace becomes possible."

"This is the genius of the Universal Declaration."

Bennett, pastor of the United First Parish Church and a member of the Advisory Council of the United Nations Association of Greater Boston, was the keynote speaker at the anniversary celebration of the signing of the Declaration.

The hour and a half-long program at the Thomas Crane Public Library also heard messages from Navanethem Pillay, the UN's High Commissioner for Human Rights, and Rep. William Delahunt, the US Congressional appointee to the UN.

Bennett acknowledged that the Declaration "is not a perfect instrument."

"It lacks the force of binding law and it yet lacks an effective international order to assure implementation of these rights," he said.

"But this is not to underestimate its enduring power and influence. Its power is in its moral authority, which derives from its universality.

Its power is in its ability to shine as a bright light into whatever the darkness of the world situation. It power is in serving as a standard of achievement by which governments and societies can be held accountable to world opinion."

He quoted Eleanor Roosevelt, a member of the first US delegation to the UN General Assembly, as saying: "Where, after all do human rights begin? In small places close to home, so close and so small that they cannot be seen on any maps of the world."

"Peace is so long in coming," said Bennett. "This is because the achievement of human rights is so long in coming. But it is coming. Progress is being made.

"It is being made through the efforts of women and men like you and I working together in small places all over the world, places like Quincy, Massachusetts."

He reminded his audience that Quincy, more precisely an area of the Blue Hills, was once under consideration as the headquarters of the United Nations, which eventually settled on the East Side of New York City, thanks to an $8.5 million gift from John D.

Rockefeller Jr.

The United Nations Council for the South Shore entertained an official delegation from the UN Site Selection Committee examining the site in January, 1946, and even had a blimp standing by in South Weymouth for an aerial inspection when John D. Jr. trumped their move.

Additional speakers at the celebration included: Myriam Zuber, director of the Anti-Defamation League's No Place to Hate Program, and Ann Yeomans, chair of the Quincy Human Rights Commission, organizers of the celebration.

Greetings were offered to those in attendance in nine different languages, including English, Portuguese and Spanish (by Ann Yeomans), Indian and Arabic (by Kumu Gupta), Hebrew (by Harvey Solomon), Chinese (by Franck Poon) and Afghani and Turkish (by Jacquelyn Friberg).

A number of students from Broad Meadows Middle School, members of Operation Day's Work-USA which partners with and raises funds for projects in developing countries were in attendance.

This year's project is school tuition help in Haiti. Last year's was a health center in Burundi. In the past 10 years, ODW has also provided education and health care in Nepal, Bangladesh, Rwanda, Ethiopia, Vietnam and El Salvador.

The evening wound up with a performance of a traditional Indian classical dance by Manjul Nair, a Quincy resident and a student from the Triveni Dance School in Brookline.

Balance a Forced-Air Heating System

Q. It doesn't seem to matter whether I open or close the registers in certain rooms — my house is constantly too cold in some spots and too hot in others. The insulation seems fine, and the heater is working fine. I change the filter every two months. What else can I check? — John P., Worcester, Mass.

A. You may be able to further balance a forced-air heating system if dampers have been installed within the delivery air ducts leading to the registers. Check along the air duct run as far as possible to locate air dampers. These are indicated by a wing nut installed directly in the duct that does not seem to be joining anything.

If this wing nut is perpendicular to the duct (say, the duct is horizontal but the wing nut is oriented vertically), the damper is closed, restricting airflow. Use a screwdriver or manually turn the wing nut parallel to the duct, thereby opening the damper.

Try to locate as many of these dampers as possible. Working with a partner who is inside the living area of the house, find out where these ducts lead and if air flows or stops flowing to different areas of the house depending on whether the damper is open or closed.

Then, label the damper. Using a permanent marker, write the duct's destination (such as the living room or a bedroom), and mark what angles the wing nut should be at when closed and when open.

Using this method of opening or closing dampers in the air ducts, you can balance the heating system a bit better so that additional warm air flows into colder areas of the house and is diverted from parts of the house that are too hot.

Winter Wake Up For Your Basement

(ARA) - A few years ago you finished your basement. You put in all the hard work to make it a perfect retreat and lounge. But you haven't done a thing with it since. So often, people finish their basements and then forget about any upkeep.

Though the basement is often viewed as a rugged recreational room, it still deserves the same decorative and functional attention as the rest of the home; and the winter months provide the perfect opportunity to tackle some of those projects.

These simple tips will help renew and rejuvenate your basement by making it more usable, durable and inviting for your family and friends. Plus, each project is affordable and won't require excessive work to accomplish. Most can be completed in one weekend, or a few evenings after work.

Paint in the Winter? Yes, You Can

One of the best ways to make your basement look brand new is to repaint. A fresh coat of paint will reenergize the room and provide a whole new feel. And, with newer paints having very low VOC (volatile organic compound) content, it's safe to paint even with the windows closed.

Additionally, many of today's low-VOC paints, like Pratt & Lambert's Red-Seal Porcelain, are also extremely durable, which is essential in a basement. This green-certified latex interior paint is actually scrubbable. Tiny porcelain beads in the paint don't allow stains to penetrate the wall surface, making it simple to clean up. So whether your 2-year-old splashes his grape juice on the wall, or a Sunday football game ends in a celebration of flung nacho cheese, wall cleanup will be quick and easy.

Light it Up, or Down

Basement lighting can be tricky. Trying to balance the volume of light emitted from fixtures ranging from a single pull-chain bulb to fully-integrated recessed canister lights is no easy task. Simple dimmer switches are one of the easiest ways to make sure you can balance a basement lighting scheme at any point in the day.

Dimmer switches allow for a multitude of lighting options, whether you have a windowless basement that is completely lit by artificial lighting, or even if you have a fully finished walk-out basement with large windows and sliding glass doors. Dimmers can be purchased at any hardware store and are quickly and easily installed even by novice electricians and homeowners.

What's Under Foot

Generally, because basement flooring is set on top of concrete slabs, most people opt for heavily padded carpet so they won't feel the rigidity and hardness of the slab. The problem, however, is basement carpeting can become very dirty, worn and outdated rather quickly. The good news is that even if you already have carpet installed, you can update the flooring to a more modern, sophisticated pattern relatively simply and inexpensively.

Tarkett's FiberFloor resilient flooring offers what homeowners desire most in their basements: resistance to water and moisture, scratches, scuffs, stains and indentations. And, it's easy to clean — a basement must. Resilient sheet flooring offers an attractive option for a high-end appearance with the latest styles and patterns in a wide array of colors, designs and textures. Plus, after tearing up the existing carpet, all you need to do is roll out the sub-floor padding and then lay the floor.

The Good Kind Of Molding

Decorative architectural elements such as baseboards and crown molding can add dramatic effects to a basement, but many homeowners are concerned that using these molding pieces will shrink the appearance of the room. Though it is true that most basements have lower ceilings than the rest of the home, some simple, thin, crown molding creates a very polished look in a basement.

Accounting the crown molding with color-matched baseboards easily turns the basement from a modest recreational area to a coveted destination area for your family and guests.

Each of these basement remodeling options is easily accomplished, no matter how cold it might be outside. The basement is most often a multi-use room, and these simple projects will certainly improve the room's usability, quality and appearance.

QUINCY POLICE OFFICERS Pat Folan (left) and Robert E. Kelly.

A Job Well Done

A JOB WELL DONE . . . On Saturday, Dec. 6, 2008, at approximately 3:30 a.m., Officer Robert E. Kelly was on Sea Street when a female motorist pulled up next to him. She appeared to be visibly shaken and said that a man she didn't know walked into her home and laid down on her living room couch.

The victim stated that she fled her home immediately and was scared for her safety. She said that she was enroute to the police station to get help when she saw the Officer. Officer Kelly informed communications of the incident. Officer Patrick Folan was dispatched to assist Officer Kelly at the Hough's Neck address.

Upon arrival, the victim told the officers that her front door was unlocked, so they went in while the victim waited safely outside. After observing a large male sleeping on the couch. The officers attempted to wake the suspect and after numerous tries, the suspect opened his eyes and sat upright on the couch. The suspect appeared groggy and intoxicated.

The officers told the suspect that he was in the wrong home and after looking around, the suspect appeared to understand this. The suspect was escorted out of the home and out to the front yard. The suspect stayed with Officer Folan while Officer Kelly interviewed the victim to gather additional information.

The victim said that she was sleeping in her bedroom and heard her front door open. She stated that her son lives on a boat and she believed that it might have been him who entered the home. She opened her bedroom door to confirm that it was her son, but instead found a very large man walk into her living room. When she saw that the suspect was not her son and was over six feet tall and close to 300 pounds, she quickly made plans to get out of her house and as soon as the suspect lied down on the couch, she retrieved the keys to her vehicle and fled.

Officer Folan was questioning the suspect and all of a sudden, the suspect attempted to walk back into the same home. Officer Folan got in front of the suspect and instructed him to back away, but the suspect walked closer and then pushed Officer Folan.

Officer Folan defended himself by pushing the suspect away from him, creating distance for his personal safety. Officer Folan then ordered the suspect to stop where he was. Officer Kelly went to assist Officer Folan and place the suspect under arrest, but the suspect then threw a closed fist punch with his right hand striking Officer Folan in the face. The strike knocked Officer Folan down to one knee.

Officer Kelly used his mace and sprayed the suspect, who was then brought to the ground where he kicked randomly but was soon after handcuffed. Officer Folan was treated at Quincy Medical Center for facial injuries. The suspect, a 19-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with assault and battery on a police officer (pushing Officer Folan), aggravated assault and battery on a police officer (punching Officer Folan causing injury (chipped tooth), burglary and knowingly resisting arrest." According to Officer Folan, this was not the first time that the suspect has walked into the wrong home looking for a place to sleep.

Nice Work!

In this case, Lock Your Door! Just imagine how many doors he may have tried before finding one open. No one is more vulnerable than when they are asleep in the comfort of their own home. The feeling of comfort and security within one's home may never feel the same once this happens to you!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE . . . also goes out to Officers' Dave Zupkofska, Bill Mitchell, Bruce Trieu and Michael Smith for their efforts in catching a suspect who broke into an apartment in Germantown. The suspect, a 20-year-old Roxbury resident, with long ties to Germantown, is believed to have been involved in numerous past breaks. Nice Work!

Barry Welch Receives Humanitarian Award

The Massachusetts Recreation and Park Association (MRPA) recently presented Barry J. Welch, Quincy's Recreation Director, with the Association's "Peter C. O'Brien Humanitarian Award" at its 24th Annual State Conference in Westport, MA.

The O'Brien Award, the highest honor bestowed by the 500 members of the MRPA, was established in 1980. Peter O'Brien was the founder of the MRPA who passed away at a young age from cancer.

The award, which was presented by MRPA President Jennifer Davis of the Peabody Recreation Department, is given to a member who has rendered outstanding service to the field of recreation and provided professional leadership to the Association.

Davis, while presenting the award to Welch, cited:

"Barry's tremendous accomplishments and dedication to the leisure service profession while stating that your fellow professionals applaud your continued efforts and commitment to the ideals of public recreation."

Welch has been recreation director for the City of Quincy since 1982 and a member of the MRPA since the late 1960s. He currently serves as a member of the Executive Board, representing the South Shore region of Massachusetts.

Jaehnig added to his collegiate accomplishments on Dec. 6 when he scored his 1,000th career point in a Pioneer Valley Men's Hoop Classic game against nationally ranked Amherst College.

New League, Challenges For QHS Girls' Basketball

By SEAN BRENNAN

Two seasons removed from an appearance in the Division II South Sectional post-season, the Quincy Presidents main goal for this year is to get back to playing basketball when it counts the most, which is in the postseason.

Last year's team finished the season with an 8-11 overall record, missing out on a post-season berth by two games. A late season run to get back into the playoffs was squelched after a 69-55 loss to North Quincy, but this year's Presidents team, though young and a little inexperienced, is hungry to rebound.

After years of playing in the Atlantic Coast League (ACL), Quincy will be playing in the Patriot League this winter. The Presidents have been placed in the Patriot League's Keenan Division and will have to compete against teams from Duxbury, Silver Lake, Scituate, Hingham and Whitman-Hanson High School.

The new league should present new challenges, but Quincy head coach Jeff Bretsch is confident that this year's team will be up to the test.

"We have played some of the teams from the Patriot League over the years in non-league games, but that being said, it will be a very competitive league. Teams like Duxbury, Hingham, Silver Lake, Scituate and Whitman-Hanson all have long traditions of good basketball.

"It will be a little different playing in the league and there will be an adjustment period. The division we will be playing in (the Keenan Division) is one of the best around and we are going to have to play hard every game in order to be successful.

"One thing we are looking forward to with the new league is less travel. Those long two-hour bus rides to the Cape took a lot out of the kids and with the schedule we have this year it should eliminate some of that extra time traveling."

The Presidents, who last year relied on a number of seniors playing major minutes, will have to contend with the loss of team veterans Meghan Tobin, Marybeth Torpey, Julie Kisielius, Elizabeth Bock, Krystin Newsom and Kerri Ryan, but with players such as seniors Elisa Lam (guard), Katie Chernicki (forward) and Deanna Hutchins (forward), juniors Leslie Campbell (forward) and Collen Tobin (forward) and sophomore Kori Sorensen (guard) Quincy should be in good shape moving forward this season.

"We graduated four starters of last year's team," added Bretsch. "With the loss of players like Tobin, Torpey, Bock, Kisielius, Newsom and Ryan we are going to be relying on some younger players and kids who have not played much at all at the varsity level.

"But Campbell, who finished last year on a nice roll, is only going to get better this year. I see her as an emerging leader on the court."

The Presidents will also lean on players such as Julia Yee (guard), Becca Shea (guard), Kylie Kozlowski (forward), Olivia Berry (center) and Juli Tomer (forward).

"My team in going to be young," said Bretsch. "Sorensen and Berry should see plenty of time on the court and we are expecting good things from both of them and with Campbell emerging as a star we should be in good shape.

"Most of these players are new to the team so there will be a significant transition. We will need to play with heart and hustle in every game in order to be competitive. I see this team as being one that will always play hard and tough."

Campbell, Tobin and Chernicki have been named team captains.

The 2008-09 Presidents may be wet behind the ears but the future looks bright.

"We are young," said Bretsch. "But I look at it like an investment. We should have most of these girls for at least a couple of years and playing in our system it should pay off in the near future.

"We also have the most talented freshmen team at Quincy in a longtime and our future looks very bright."

Sarah Conlon and Christine Niosi will be coaching the jayvee and freshmen teams, respectively.

Quincy, which opened its season Tuesday against Scituate HS, will tip-off the home schedule this Friday against Duxbury HS (East Gym, 6:30 p.m.); the Presidents are scheduled to play Silver Lake HS next Monday at home (6:30 p.m.).

Over the Christmas holiday, Quincy is scheduled to play in the Dedham Christmas Tournament on Dec. 29-30. The team will open the New Year on Jan. 5 at home against Whitman-Hanson HS (6:30 p.m.).

Recreation Department, Lodge of Elks 'Hoop Shoot' Contest This Weekend

The Quincy Recreation Department (QRD) and Director of Recreation Barry J. Welch announce that the QRD and the Quincy Lodge of Elks will once again co-sponsor the Elk's National "Hoop Shoot" Free Throw Contest.

The Quincy-area competition is the first step in a national contest for boys and girls age 8-13. Contestants are assigned to three separate categories and both a boys' and girls' division. Age groups are 8-9, 10-11 and 12-13. The contestant's age is determined as of April 1, 2009.

Each contestant is awarded points for successful free throws. The boys and girls and division 8-9 will shoot from four feet in front of the regulation foul line.

The QRD Leaders assigned their regular recreation programs in that area will supervise this program in neighborhood gymnasiums.

The program is free and contestants may participate even if they are not previously enrolled in the recreation program. Contestants may choose any of the various time and sites to compete, however, they may only compete in one Quincy qualifier.

Welch stated, "We are pleased that the Quincy Lodge of Elks has once again provided this program for the benefit of our participants. This is the 37th year of this program.

"Many Quincy residents in the past have enjoyed the benefits of this activity at the local, regional and state level as well as the national championship. The Elks devote a great deal of attention to youth programs. Their commitment to our children help make Quincy a better place to live and over 50,000 children are expected to take part nationally."

Ed Miller, the Quincy

Lodge of Elks Hoop Chairman, is the former Athletic Director of the Quincy Public Schools.

The first round of the Quincy contest will be offered at the following gymnasiums: Dec. 20 at 10 a.m.: Atherton Hough, Atlantic Middle, Bernazzani, Beechwood Knoll, Merrymount, Montclair, Point Webster, Snug Harbor, Squantum and Wollaston.

"The (Patriot) league boasts Whitman-Hanson (Class B champs in XC), Hingham (Class C champs in Indoor and Outdoor track) and Pembroke (Class D champs outdoor), so it is extremely competitive. And every other team has a few standouts."

Some Fibroids Need No Treatment

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am 37, have two children and also have fibroids. My periods are quite heavy. My doctor says that removal of the uterus is the best way to end my problem. My husband and I would like to have more children. What other options do I have? —P.S.

ANSWER: The uterus is a large, hollow muscle with an internal layer that grows every month in preparation for the reception of a fertilized egg. Fibroids are non-cancerous growths of the uterine muscle. They're common, and for most women they cause few, if any, symptoms. Large fibroids can compress the bladder and provoke frequent urination. Or they can press on the colon and bring on constipation. They sometimes reduce the chances of pregnancy. They can be responsible for heavy menstrual bleeding.

Their cause hasn't been discovered, but female hormones must be involved in their appearance, because they tend to regress with menopause.

If they're not producing symptoms, they can be ignored. If they are kicking up a fuss, hysterectomy — removal of the uterus — is one solution, but not the only one. Options depend on what the woman wants.

For a woman approaching menopause, the medicine Lupron is a good choice. It suppresses estrogen production, which shrinks fibroids. Since this has a time limit on use, women who will soon be menopausal are the ones who can take advantage of it.

Danazol (a synthetic male hormone), birth-control pills and Depo-Provera control excessive menstrual bleeding due to fibroids.

Sometimes doctors can remove a fibroid with a scope that enters the uterus through the vagina without any external cutting.

Uterine artery embolization is a procedure where the doctor threads a soft tube (a catheter) to the artery feeding the fibroid. When the right position is reached, the doctor releases particles that obstruct the artery and cut off blood supply to the fibroid. It falls off.

MRgFUS, magnetic resonance-guided focused ultrasound, is a new technique employing sound waves to heat the fibroid and shrink it. It can interfere with subsequent pregnancies, however.

The booklet on fibroids explains these growths in detail. To order a copy, write: Dr. Donohue — No. 1106W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

ORAL SEDATION DENTISTRY

Although Oral Sedation dentistry has become much better known in recent years, it has actually been an effective and safe method for alleviating in nervous patients for quite a long time. In fact, we have been providing this same option to our anxious patients for over 30 years!

Oral Sedation, as it is called today, is simply taking a prescription medication before a dental appointment to provide a relaxing and anxiety-free experience. The medications used create such a comfortable experience that most patients do not remember the visit; it is as if they slept through the treatment. In reality, oral sedation dentistry maintains a level of consciousness in the patient for safety and cooperation. It is one of several Dental Sedation alternatives available to patients who experience a common apprehension called "dental phobia." Others are inhalation sedation, involving nitrous oxide, or "laughing gas" as it is commonly called, and general anesthesia, which literally does allow patients to "sleep" through their procedure.

You should consult with a qualified sedation dentist to determine which technique is right for you. It could be determined by your level of anxiety or the dental procedure you need. That is why it is good to ask how many different sedation procedures a dentist is licensed to perform. It is also important to ask about the specific level of training and experience of the dentist and staff.

We offer our patients oral sedation as well as nitrous oxide and general anesthesia from an onstaff anesthesiologist because we believe there should be no reason for dental phobia to keep anyone from receiving the vital dental care they need. We are caring, compassionate, highly skilled professionals who are dedicated to providing you with high-quality dentistry and service. We are located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

We need you.

Feed The Immune System For The Cold, Flu Season

(ARA) — Our immune systems are smart. The immune system, when exposed to new flu and cold viruses, learns to recognize and react to seasonal strains of the invaders. The system also remembers bugs it has seen before. But we're a mobile society — each year, world travel brings new strains of germs and virus home, forcing the immune system to deal with new invaders it has never seen. This is why the Center for Disease Control makes yearly changes to the flu vaccine, hoping to predict which bugs will arrive in the U.S. on a seasonal basis.

A flu vaccine may help during cold and flu season, but there's no guarantee for full protection. Extra efforts are needed to avoid seasonal germs — including a healthy diet, exercise and nutritional supplements. Here are some suggestions for extra immune support during the 2008-09 flu season:

Diet can make a difference. Prevention Magazine recently published a list of immunity-boosting foods, including: lean beef in moderation for its zinc content; orange vegetables including sweet potatoes and carrots (for vitamins A and D); mushrooms such as shiitakes, which may help white blood cells act more aggressively against foreign invaders and a cup of black or green tea daily which provides powerful anti-oxidant activity. Also included in the list was yogurt containing active probiotic cultures, which help balance the immune system in the digestive tract.

According to ABC news, turmeric, a rich, flavorful spice, "has been used for centuries as part of Ayurvedic and traditional Chinese medicines, in addition to being used for cooking. Turmeric is found in every yellow curry, and its golden color is the result of curcumin, a polyphenol with strong cold and flu-fighting properties. Although the mechanism is unclear, a 2008 study published in Biochemical and Biophysical Research Communications found that curcumin prevents some immune cells from responding to stimulants and so has modulating and anti-inflammatory effects. Other studies have also shown the immune-boosting properties of curcumin in turmeric, however these have not been confirmed in humans."

Turmeric is found naturally as the rhizome part of the turmeric plant and it looks very similar to ginger. The powdered spice is made by boiling, drying and grinding the root. The powder has antiseptic qualities when applied topically and often is used on cuts, burns and bruises. This spice is available as an encapsulated supplement at health food stores.

In addition to a healthy diet, a supplement brought to the U.S. from Russia is a favorite of many doctors. Del-Immune V (www.delimmune.com) has been clinically tested to show a significant increase in immune activity, and may provide significant support to avoid colds and flu. The muramyl peptides in Del-Immune V act as switches in the immune system, and are responsible for dramatically elevating immune activity our bodies. "I have used this in several hundred patients and have found it to be safe, reliable and very effective," says Dr. Roger Mazlen, of Roslyn, N.Y.

Navigating The Holidays Without Sacrificing Your Health

(ARA) — Family feasts, lunch with friends and baskets of goodies arriving at the office — the holidays are filled with opportunities to enjoy food, fun and the company of loved ones. But they're also rife with risk for anyone trying to eat healthy.

"Research suggests that those people who are vulnerable to excess weight, gain more weight over the holidays," says Karen Miller-Kovach, chief scientific officer of Weight Watchers International. "That's not surprising given the increased stress, temptations and consumption of high-calorie and high-fat foods that come with the holiday season."

It is possible to get through the holidays with your good intentions — and your waistline — intact. Here's advice for dealing with some food-related obstacles commonly faced during this busy time.

Avoid the Party Binge
"Humans are social animals and eating is a very social experience," Miller-Kovach notes. "That's why we tend to eat more at parties — plus, holiday celebrations usually serve up a variety of treats that we don't usually get throughout the year."

Before you head out to a holiday party, dine at home on healthy fare that will keep you feeling full, like lean protein and fiber-rich vegetables. Curbing your appetite ahead of time will help you keep control at the party.

Go light on cocktails. Alcohol has a lot of empty calories. Opt for spritzers — sparkling soda water and some fruit flavors — as a healthier alternative to spirits.

The holidays can be a stressful time, and it's tempting to "cope" by over-eating at a party or even at home. Instead of turning to food for stress relief, try an activity that reminds you of the joys of the season like skiing or ice skating.

Be Mindful When

On The Road

If you're dining out a lot for the holidays, it may be hard to stick to your weight loss plan. But there are ways to minimize the damage of restaurant eating.

First, skip the appetizer. Appetizers are often fried and can pack more calories than the entree.

Second, watch out for calorie overload that's caused by eating the entire portion normally served in restaurants. If you're getting full, try not to clean your plate; eat only half of what you're served and take home the rest.

If you're taking long drives, avoid buying snacks along the way. Instead, pack your own goodies — like almonds, apples or even baby carrots.

Flying? Airport delays are common during the holidays and same goes here — plan ahead to avoid eating airport food and pack your own snacks so that you are in control. For instance, Weight Watchers subscribers can use tools like the new Weight Watchers Mobile, to help them track their food options and maintain their weight loss efforts while on the go.

The Gift That Keeps on Giving

Finally, nothing says "holiday spirit" like a gift food basket, but the truth is these favorites are often packed with empty calories. If you're giving a gift basket, look for ones that offer more healthful items — such as fresh fruits. If you receive a gift basket, consider simply thanking the giver for their sentiment and then discretely re-gift the item to your local charity.

Once The Rush Is Over

Once this hectic season passes, a scientifically-based approach to weight loss, such as Weight Watchers Meetings and Weight Watchers Online, can provide you with the tools and information you need to embark on a healthy lifestyle, lose weight and keep it off. Visit www.WeightWatchers.com for more information.

DON MCCARTHY
Managing DirectorA THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Did you ever put something in the wrong place and wonder later where it was? Of course you have. We will have. Sometimes when the thing shows up, we ask the silly question, "How did it get there?" We know the answer. It got there because we put it there.

Similar reasoning can apply, in a way, to religion. People put God in the wrong place. It may sound peculiar, but we can put God in the right place. It can even be said we can put God in His place, if we want to. And this is said without "smart alecky" semantics.

We know God is in Heaven. But He is elsewhere, too. Instead of placing Him in that uncharted area "way up there," why don't we put Him where we can find Him all the time? We go to His house of worship on Sunday and then return to our OUR home. Why not bring Him along home with us? When we put Him in our home, where most of us need Him most, we always know where He is...

the taxpayer's expense.

"Spending has got to stop," Burgoyne said, then noted, "The auditor doesn't have to sign off anymore. Nobody checks."

Speakers ranged from a college professor, business owners, a stay-at-home mother, and the unemployed to former Assessor and Mayor Joseph LaRaia who suggested that the business and commercial rate be increased.

Peter Forman, president of the South Chamber of Commerce said that the business rate should be decreased, the city should adopt an aggressive approach to control spending, and examine priorities.

"Business owners are not the least bit happy," said Forman who predicted "ugly changes and they will be tough changes."

"You can not forget the business owners," said Dean Rizzo of Quincy 2000 who noted that the base is strong but vacancies are hurting business districts.

Others focused on the budget process or made periodic references to the expensive carpet in Mayor Thomas Koch's office.

The doom and gloom was broken slightly when businessman Bruce Wood promised not to throw a shoe at City Council president Jay Davis.

Bob Haley of Elmwood

Park may revive a taxpayers' watchdog group. Haley presented a detailed five-point examination of the budget and claimed there were numerous disparities in the administration's budget figures.

"This year is going to be the best of the next three," said Dr. Vincent Pivnicny, professor at University of Massachusetts, Boston, who said the city's finances are "close to a tipping point."

"It's going to be worse next year and the year after," said Pivnicny who recommended budget scrutiny and long-range planning as did Wood who is Chairman of the Quincy Council of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

Wood, a resident and business owner, said the council should come up with three to four year plans. "We're all in the same boat. We've got to work together."

Wood said he's losing two of his business tenants while Pivnicny described his work as a consultant at Carney hospital where a workforce layoff of over nine percent is underway.

Attorney Jocelyn Sedney, also, referred to Koch's carpet, describing her shock at reading about it and labeling the episode an example of "poor judgement."

"Don't saddle us with more than we can bear," said Sedney who warned, "This is going to get worse."

Several councillors, agreed that changes must be made in both services and the approach to the budget process.

Keenan said that, from now on, every budget item in every department will be scrutinized, program by program and line by line, from trash collection to student busing to every entitlement.

As one example, Keenan said there may be fees for trash collection with one barrel collected free, "The next barrel, you're going to have to pay a fee."

Keenan recommended that the council immediately establish a budget review committee.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi viewed the budget process differently, "We just vote a bottom line. When are we going to learn it's up to the mayor (to do the cutting)...we get bogged down in the minutiae."

However, Davis said that he is proud of the city's schools and services which make the city attractive.

Trying To Put Merry In Christmas For Many

Helping Hands Reach Out To The Needy

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Hardship has many new faces this season as young veterans back from Iraq, singles, working families and the newly unemployed join the ranks of those in need.

While the numbers of those in need soar, donors are, also, strapped in this economic slump and contributions are down at some agencies while the costs go up.

"We are seeing a different face of poverty," said Kathy Quigley of the Germantown Neighborhood Center where she said more clients are working homeowners overwhelmed by the economy.

"We're struggling to provide food," said Quigley, noting that donations are down significantly this year.

At Father Bills MainSpring, 20 percent of the homeless are veterans of the current Iraq Conflict, according to John Yazwinski, Executive Director. These are young men and women who have come home to low-paying jobs or no jobs.

Veterans' agencies "don't provide shelter or housing," said Yazwinski who described efforts to find jobs and housing for returning veterans and the increasing number of young clients, 18-24, who have aged out of the social service networks.

Yazwinski described the many Father Bill's clients who are working but whose paychecks, often in the service industry, do not cover both food and rent.

"We don't want anybody to sleep outside," said Yazwinski who said Father Bill's has been stereotyped as serving only substance abusers.

In fact, Father Bills not only serves as a safety net for individuals but, also,

Up To 18 Inches Of Snow

Storm Will Cost City About $200,000

By TOM HENSHAW

More than two days of steady snowfall that saw 12 to 18 inches dropped on the city from Friday to late Sunday did little to disrupt the lives of Quincy residents.

The Christmas shopping crowds were thin during the height of the storm but Public Works Department crews got an early start and kept the roads reasonably open.

"We had 82 pieces out early Friday afternoon and some of them are still out," said Christopher Walker, the mayor's director of policy, Monday afternoon. "We're focused on the schools and side streets now."

He estimated the storm will cost the city about $200,000.

"The storm killed business in Quincy Center on an important weekend," said Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Business Association.

"We were hoping it would get better Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. People have to buy what they have to buy."

Dec. 31 Deadline For Written Opinions City Awaits State Decision On Billboard

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The state's Outdoor Advertising Board could decide the fate of the 80-foot West Quincy billboard on Willard Street in early January.

Neither City Solicitor James Timmins nor Matthew Lawlor who has been representing businessman Thomas Maloney, Jr., would venture an opinion last week as to how board members will decide the issue.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi is hoping that board members will make an independent decision on the issue, but he fears board members will balk at reversing their own decision.

"I'm not all that optimistic," Raymondi said, adding that the city "clearly made its case" at the Dec. 11 public hearing called by the board.

Timmins presented the city's argument asking the board reject the permit for the billboard.

Raymondi and Councillor John Keenan, along with several dozen Quincy residents, attended the public hearing.

"They should reverse their decision, but I'm fearful they're not going to," Said Raymondi who believes a decision favoring the billboard will further erode the public's confidence in state government.

"It's going to be difficult for them to ignore their own regulations," Raymondi said, referring to the state's prohibition against billboards near parkland and describing the excellent testimony from the city's witnesses and billboard opponents.

The billboard discussion is not on the board's agenda yet, but Edward Farley, Executive Director, said the Jan. 8 meeting agenda has not yet been finalized.

The last day for written statements is Dec. 31, according to Farley, who said members will, then, review the new material and begin deliberations.

Members of the state board had requested written statements from the attorneys representing the city and Boston Outdoor Ventures, LLC at the last meeting Dec. 11.

Farley said board members were seeking a wrap-up of legal briefs from the attorneys representing the city and the billboard company.

As for the public writing to the board, Farley said, "We can't stop people from sending letters."

License Board Agenda

The License Board will meet Tuesday, Dec. 30 at 4 p.m. in the City Council chambers at City Hall.

Following is the agenda:

Councillors Seek Taxpayer Assistance Through Federal Funding Of Grant Program

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin recently introduced and secured passage of a resolution cosponsored by Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, calling upon Congress to fully fund the $10 billion Energy Efficiency and Conservation Block Grant Program, an important provision of the Energy Independence and Security Act signed into law on Dec. 19, 2007 by President Bush.

"This historic comprehensive energy bill aimed at moving the United States toward greater energy independence and security and a key provision within it, the grant program modeled after the Community Development Block Grant program, would provide crucial grants to cities, counties and states for innovative practices to achieve greater energy efficiency and lower energy usage," Coughlin said. "In this period of economic meltdown this program, if funded as promised, would save Quincy taxpayers millions of dollars over the next five years, the original life span of the grant program."

These grants would fund local initiatives, including building and home energy conservation programs, energy audits, fuel conservation programs, building retrofits to increase energy efficiency, "smart growth" planning and zoning, and alternative energy programs.

The grants can be used for a variety of purposes, from planning and building to providing incentives for efficient energy use.

Among the program-eligible uses are: developing and implementing efficient energy and conservation strategies; developing programs to conserve energy used in transportation, such as flex time for workers, satellite work centers, bike paths, and pedestrian walkways; updating building codes and inspection procedures; installing renewable energy technology on or in government buildings; replacing traffic signals and street lighting with energy-efficient technology; energy audits; conservation programs; retrofitting to increase energy efficiency; smart-growth planning and zoning; and installing technology designed to capture greenhouse gases.

"Quincy stepped up to the front of the line to pave the way of energy efficiency in public buildings at a cost of some $32 million," Coughlin said. "It is money that has been invested to provide taxpayer savings going forward and to improve the environment at the same time. Congress and the incoming Obama administration need to ensure fulfillment of the commitment to fund this Energy Efficiency Block Grant program so that taxpayers in this city can obtain relief from this $32 million burden."

"Washington has bailed out Wall Street, the financial sector and businesses such as the auto industry while millions of average Americans shoulder the costs," Coughlin said. "It is appropriate and necessary that the Congress and the incoming President recognize that cities and towns and local governments are not simply the threads that bind the fabric of our nation together, they are important cogs in the economic engine that drives this nation forward."

Gutro agreed. "Decreasing state aid and increasing property taxes drive the urgency to fund this energy block grant program. It will provide a quick, clean, and green jump start for local economies like ours here in Quincy," he added."

Germantown Boardwalk Highlights Collaboration

The recent completion of the Germantown Boardwalk to the River has highlighted the beneficial results of collaboration among the city of Quincy, the Quincy Housing Authority and the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission.

"The new beautiful Germantown Boardwalk will provide access from the Germantown Fire Station to the Fore River beachfront, enhancing the recreational opportunities for the residents of this neighborhood," said Mayor Tom Koch at the ribbon-cutting.

"This project underscores the importance of partnerships to bring about positive change in Quincy neighborhoods."

Funding for the project was provided by the U.S. Department of Housing and RIBBON-CUTTERS. Mayor Tom Koch (right) and Ward 1 City Councillor Leo Kelly, chairman of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, attended the dedication of the new Germantown Boardwalk to the River.

Urban Development (HUD) and the City of Quincy Community Preservation Act.

In-kind funders included the State Fish and Game Department, the State Fishing and Boating Access Division, the State Division of Marine Fisheries and the Norfolk County Department of Engineering.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Dec. 19, 1732, Benjamin Franklin of Philadelphia first published Poor Richard's Almanack. The book, filled with proverbs preaching industry and prudence, was published continuously for 25 years and became one of the most popular publications in Colonial America, selling an average of 10,000 copies a year.

• On Dec. 20, 1892, Alexander Brown and George Stillman of Syracuse, N.Y., are issued a patent for an inflatable automobile tire. Before the pneumatic tire, wheels were often made of solid rubber, making travel a bumpy experience on dirt or cobblestone streets.

• On Dec. 17, 1903, near Kitty Hawk, N.C., Orville and Wilbur Wright make the first successful flight in history of a self-propelled, heavier-than-air aircraft. The gasoline-powered, propeller-driven biplane stayed aloft for 12 seconds and covered 120 feet on its inaugural flight.

• On Dec. 21, 1946, an undersea earthquake sets off a powerful tsunami that devastates Honshu, Japan. When the tsunami hit Honshu, 20-foot waves obliterated buildings from shorelines and about 2,000 ships were capsized. In all, 60,000 square miles were flooded by the waves and 40,000 homes were completely destroyed.

• On Dec. 16, 1951, the detective series "Dragnet" appears on television for the first time, as a sneak preview on the anthology show "Chesterfield Sound-Off Time." Dragnet had been a popular radio drama since 1949. The TV show debuted as a regular series in January 1952 and ran until 1959.

• On Dec. 15, 1966, animation pioneer Walt Disney dies. In 1928, Disney introduced Mickey Mouse in two silent movies. Mickey debuted on the big screen in "Steamboat Willie," the first fully synchronized sound cartoon ever made. Walt Disney himself provided Mickey's squeaky voice.

• On Dec. 18, 1984, the first Chevy Nova is introduced by New United Motor Manufacturing, Inc., a joint venture between Toyota and General Motors. The car later met with marketing trouble in South America, where its name read as "No Go" to Spanish speakers.

Dear Santa:

Sorry for not keeping my word. I promised to write you early so it would be easier for you to pack your sleigh.

But here I am again. Late again as usual.

I have a lot of nice people on my gift list so I hope you can still get to them. Some of the gifts, as you know, are in a humorous vein, some in a serious.

I don't want to be a pain, Santa. Just want to again remind you we are the Quincy that pronounces it Quin-zee. Wouldn't want you to mix us up with those other Quincys that pronounce it Quin-see.

So, Santa, please drop off the following:

Mayor TOM KOCH, discovery of a gold mine or oil well behind City Hall to get the city and taxpayers through this economic crisis... JAY DAVIS, Ward 4 Councillor and council president, a magic wand to make that controversial billboard disappear... State Senator MIKE MORRISSEY and Reps. BRUCE AYERS, RON MARIANO and STEVE TOBIN, a fair share of the dwindling state aid for Quincy... Congressman BILL DELAHUNT, a same fair share of federal aid for Quincy if there's anything left after all those bailouts... Health Commissioner DREW SCHEELE, a new stack of "Wash Your Hands" signs for posting in rest rooms throughout the city... City Clerk JOE SHEA, that miracle election day he is still waiting for when every registered voter shows up to actually vote... JENNIFER LOGUE, a lucky coin to toss to help decide whether to make another run for councillor at-large... Fr. BILL MCCARTHY and JOHN YAZWINSKI the miraculous day they hope to see to close Father Bill's Place because it and other homeless shelters are no longer needed because there are no more homeless. (That's a real hard one, Santa)... Majors DOUG and LINDA JONES of the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps, kettles chock full to the brim to help the growing number of needy families in Quincy... She used to keep Christmas Eve vigil there hoping to catch you coming down the chimney. She's at home now in Mansfield but still hoping to catch you. She wants to personally give you her favorite "Thought For Christmas" to take back to Mrs. Claus. She thinks you wife will really like it.

It goes like this:

"Do you know what would have happened if it had been the Three Wise Women instead of the Three Wise Men?"

They would have asked directions, arrived on time, helped deliver the baby, cleaned the stable and made a casserole, brought practical gifts and there would be 'Peace On Earth'."

I'm sure I've forgotten some people, Santa, including good friends.

But to all of them and all of you, a very Merry Christmas, Happy Chanukah and a Happy, Healthy New Year.

Quincyopoloy Board Game To Benefit YouthBuild Students

Quincy YouthBuild, operated by Training Resources of America Inc., is holding a fundraiser that will soon allow Quincy residents to play a version of the classic board game, Monopoly, with a local twist-the first-ever Quincyopoloy board game.

This fundraiser encourages people to spend more family time while supporting one of the areas most comprehensive youth training programs, Quincy YouthBuild.

Board squares are currently available for $450-$1,000. There are also opportunities for $100 business and individual patron listings.

The planned release of 2,000 board games is expected in the spring. They will be marketed through Quincy 2000 and local media. Boards will sell for $30.

As part of a nationwide movement, Quincy YouthBuild helps low-income young people earn their GEDs and learn job readiness skills. Students receive construction skills training and participate in community service projects. Through a partnership involving Quincy Housing Authority, Quincy YouthBuild students are helping to renovate buildings in the Germantown Riverview Family Development.

A Christmas Scene From Yesterday

MERRY CHRISTMAS
from QUINCY, MASS.

Largest Christmas Tree in United States.
85 feet high contributed by Retail Merchants.

THIS 1934 postcard is one of the favorites of Quincy Sun readers who look forward to seeing it at Christmas time. This is the fourteenth year we have published it. This tree — claimed to be the largest in the United States — was five feet taller than the one recently placed at Faneuil Hall Market in Boston. It was erected in front of the then new art deco Granite Trust Building at the intersection in Quincy Center that was called Granite Five Corners. On the left was Howard Johnson's first restaurant outside of Wollaston. On the right was Homer's Jewelry, known since 1948 as Rogers Jewelry. On the sides of the bank entrance door were Flagg's Cigar Shop and Beech's Newsstand. The Merchants Division of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce donated the 85-foot tall tree. Three Quincy Men Korean War Casualties

By FRANK McCAULEY

The Department of Defense released information on three Quincy men serving in Korea.

PFC John W. Farrell, 26 Beach St., Wollaston, was reported missing in action while fighting with the Army.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Delahunt of 75 Waterson Ave., Wollaston, received word that their son, Sgt. Richard Delahunt, is in an Army hospital in Japan. He was being treated for frozen hands and feet and shrapnel wounds in his legs. He was wounded when his regiment was trapped with Marine units at the Chosin Reservoir.

Cpl. Bruce Lindblom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lindblom of 61 Park Ave., Squantum, was back in action in the Seoul area; Cpl. Lindblom was serving with the Army Air Force.

ATTORNEY SHOT IN GUN ACCIDENT AT HOME

A Quincy Point attorney was critically wounded when a shotgun apparently accidentally went off in his home.

Wesley C. Haley, 50, of 53 Cleverly Court, Quincy, a former president of the Ward Two Citizens League, was reported "in very bad good" at Quincy Hospital, his name on the danger list.

A hospital spokesman said Haley suffered a shotgun wound in the abdomen.

Special officer James Ford of the Quincy Police Department said the shooting appeared to be accidental. An examination of the weapon, a 16-gauge double-barreled shotgun, indicated that it had been dropped on the cellar floor and had discharged.

A burst from one of the barrels apparently struck Haley sideways and sent a shower of buckshot against the cellar wall, Ford explained.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Manicotti Filled With Ricotta, Spinach

I think a good alternative to having a roast for Christmas is a pasta dish, either a lasagna or manicotti, which both can be made ahead of time so things are a little easier. Of course at our house, sometimes we have both the roast and the pasta.

Today's recipe is for the manicotti (a crepe like pasta) which can be made several ways and has only three ingredients. They can be filled several ways, but today I'm using a ricotta, spinach one, but any favorite will do.

Manicotti

1 cup flour
2 eggs
1 cup water

Mix all of the ingredients together until smooth. Heat the frying pan (about 4 or 5 inches round) until hot. With a pastry brush, brush oil and wait until it is hot. Measure quarter cup of the mixture and spread it around with a spoon until the pan is covered with the liquid. In about a minute it is done and you don't have to turn it over, but just slip it out of the pan with a spatula. Line them up as done on a piece of wax paper and then fill with the following ingredients.

Ricotta, spinach filling.

1 bag or 1 frozen package chopped spinach
1 pound ricotta
1 egg
a couple of sprigs of fresh parsley chopped fine 1/4 cup grated Romano or Parmesan cheese

salt and pepper to taste

2 tablespoons seasoned bread crumbs

Cook the spinach according to directions. While that is cooking, mix all other ingredients together, and then add it to the spinach. Place the filling in the center of the crepe and roll placing the rolled side on the bottom. Place them in a greased baking pan, cover with sauce and grated cheese. Cook covered in a 350 degree oven for 20 minutes or until hot. When you do this ahead of time, don't put any sauce on top until you are ready to bake them.

Merry Christmas!

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL'S Academic Decathlon team includes honors players Michaela Walker, Xiao Ting Zheng, Katie Ge, scholastic players Salma Goummih, David Nguyen, Fatima al-Rekabi, varsity players Anita Kadiu, Adora Kadiu Desiree Brown, and alternates Shu Wang, Chaoran Chen, You Wu, Andrea Marroquin, Nicholas Dolan, Hanin Hussein, Christine Farnsworth, Gustave Portillo and Leroy Wallace.

Quincy High Competes In Fourth Academic Decathlon

Quincy High School was among 40 schools that recently participated in the Massachusetts combined large-and-small-school regional scrimmage in preparation for the 2009 United States Academic Decathlon at Ashland High School.

Local, regional and state competitions can lead to the national finals which this academic year will take place in Memphis, Tennessee in April.

"Our team showed improvement again this year," Coach Evelyn Ryan said. "We finished in 13th place, and the team totals were very close. If we had answered just three more questions right, we would have made it to States"

The United States Academic Decathlon was created to provide opportunities for students to experience the challenges of rigorous team and individual competition.

Each team competes in ten events—economics, language and literature, art, music, mathematics, social science, science, essay, interview, and speech. Each year the science or social science is used as the Super Quiz topic.

A new theme of study is established every year with topics that are relevant, current and challenging. This year's science focus is the theory of evolution. The social studies topic is Latin America. "The team really appreciates the incentive to study these subjects in depth," Ryan said. "The students gain a remarkable amount of knowledge in their daily preparation for competition. There's really no way to lose taking part in an event like this."

Gold, silver and bronze medals are awarded for individual events and total scores. Overall individual winners are recognized, as are champion teams. "On our team this year, the Coach's gold medal goes to Xiao Ting Zheng, our undisputed Most Valuable Player," Ryan said. "She took a leadership role in organizing summer study, helping the whole team stay on task and learning the information. The entire team did their best and I am very proud of them."

Deadline For Nominations Dec. 31

Nominations Coming In For Sun 'Citizen Of The Year'

Nominations are coming in for The Quincy Sun's 24th annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Robert and Gloria Noble were honored for their service to worthy community causes for more than a half century. They are the first husband and wife team – and the 24th and 25th recipients – of the award.

The Nobles were selected for the honor by a panel of judges from among 44 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears in this week's issue of The Quincy Sun.

Nominations will close Wednesday, Dec. 31. After nominations close, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from nominations submitted.

If you know someone you would like to see recognized with the 2008 award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address by Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for the their nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor, friend or community activist who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Those nominated in the past are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, each nominee has an equal chance of being selected regardless of the number of nominations received. Anyone nominated just once has the same chance of being the award recipient.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

Helping Hands Reach Out To The Needy

provides shelter for families. At this time 67 families are in agency shelters.

More women and working families are joining the ranks of the homeless as the disconnect between wages and cost of living becomes wider and wider, according to Yazwinski who said that the loss of one paycheck in a two-income family can create upheaval.

Quigley described couples who "own their own homes and are working," but have maxed out their credit buying food. Often, they're just short of qualifying for food stamps or fuel assistance and they're falling behind in their mortgage payments.

John Martland, President of Interfaith Social Services, deplored the rash of layoffs as business and industry clears their books before the new year.

"This is the time of year when people get laid off. Right before the holidays. It's their Christmas present," said Martland who is proud of his agency's many volunteers.

It's "pretty cruel," said Bettyanne Lang who has worked with Interfaith Social Services for 18 years.

Lang described a middle income applicant, "She was so shocked. Her Christmas surprise was her husband was laid off."

The proudest applicants often wait too long, according to Laure Stracco, manager at Interfaith Social Services, who said that, too often, they are bankrupt and in foreclosure before they seek help.

One applicant shook as he filled out his request and told Laura Stracco, manager at Interfaith Social Services, "He never thought he'd see the day that he couldn't support his family," said Stracco.

Despite the increase in need, hundreds and hundreds of people are being helped this season and the donors are legion, ranging from the elderly dropping dollars from their Social Security checks in collection boxes to youngsters offering helping hands across the city.

High school students rang the bell at some Salvation Army kettles and elementary school children collected food for such agencies as Quincy Crisis Center.

Giving is its own reward and a big one at that.

Ray Cattaneo, President of Quincy City Club, recalled the reception he and his members got when delivering holiday packages.

"People open up a pair of mittens or socks and they're so grateful. You remember that. That feels good," said Cattaneo.

Individuals like Sen. Michael Morrissey also sponsor personal fund-raising for local charities.

Donors are always welcome. The holidays will be over in a flash but help will be welcome, all year round, as hunger knows no season.

Many of the agencies provide food banks that are constantly running low and new socks, new warm blankets and gift cards for food are needed now more than ever.

The following are just a few of the many agencies, individuals and charitable groups serving the Quincy community. All serve those in need year-round and are grateful for donations.

Germantown Neighborhood Center
"We're doing more with less," said Kathy Quigley who reported that the center is serving close to 700 families and seniors this year. "We're struggling to provide food."

Those figures include 2,447 children under 18 and many many working families.

Quigley said the new clients include people "who own homes and are working. Everything costs more. Every bill went up."

There's "a lot of sadness out there and horrific situations," said Quigley. "We're on the front lines here."

"Last year, we did very well," Quigley said of past year donations. This year is different, "I attribute that to what happening now in investments and foundations."

The center participates in the six-year old Holiday Coalition through which agencies share their lists of families so as to eliminate duplication.

This list-sharing is very important, according to Quigley.

Quigley said that the coalition offers donors the knowledge that their contributions are properly used.

Referrals come from schools and other agencies, according to Quigley and gift deliveries keep going "right up to Christmas Eve."

Food is needed year round, as are new warm blankets and children's coats, gift cards for food stores, toiletries, soap, and shampoo.

Donations may be mailed or delivered to the center at 366 Palmer St., Germantown, 02169.

Father Bill's Place - MainSpring

"We're very lucky that people give," said John Yazwinski said he described the increasing need at shelters.

"They're down a little. Everybody's struggling," said Yazwinski, "We really need help."

"We're funded for 75 beds," said Yazwinski who said the agency is averaging 125 guests with 95 permanent guest. As a result, 30-40 sleep on cots and mattresses each night.

Of the new clients, Yazwinski said that 65% are "straight from the rental market and have never experienced being homeless."

Yazwinski, also, described the "uptick of veterans coming back in need of housing" after service in Iraq and estimated that these young veterans account for, roughly, 20 percent of the guests.

In addition, he has seen more young adults, women and families stressed by the economic downturn.

Father Bills, he said, is open to all in need and is not just for those recovering from substance abuse, "That been the stereotype. We provide a safety net for a variety of people, many working part-time. We don't want anybody to sleep outside."

At this time, the agency is providing housing for 67 families.

Fund-raisers are held periodically through the year and corporate groups and individuals contribute to the shelter.

Yazwinski said there is always a need for donations, for new blankets, socks, soap, shampoo, towels and canned food.

Donations made be made through the Internet at FatherBillsMainSpring.org or by mail to 38 Broad St., Quincy, 02169. For more information, call the development office at 617-770-3314.

The Salvation Army

People are being generous at the annual Salvation Army kettle drives at stores and centers throughout the city, according to Major Linda Jones, co-commander of the Salvation Army Quincy Corps.

However, Major Jones said that they don't have collection figures for this year as the final tally is taken after the holidays.

The need is increasing.

"We're seeing more people coming to us, up to 50 families," Major Jones said, noting that the Quincy Corps is nearing the 500 marks in contrast to last year's 409 families.

Hundreds of children find Christmas gifts, thanks to the Army's gift baskets, which include four new toys for each youngster under 12 as well as donated clothing and food vouchers.

Donations may be sent to the Salvation Army,

Quincy Crisis Center

Kathi Garrison said volunteers deliver the center's 255 baskets right up through Christmas Eve. The baskets are filled with food and household items for families and gifts for youngsters up to 16-years-old.

The need is greater, but Garrison said, "People have responded."

Garrison said the Quincy Crisis Center works year-round with a special focus,

"We help people who are homebound, disabled, handicapped and elderly."

This year, Quincy students conducted food drives for the center at North Quincy High School, Montclair, Beechwood, Merrymount and Bernazzani Elementary Schools.

Interested volunteers may call the center at 617-848-6967 or mail donations to Quincy Crisis Center, PO Box 31, Quincy, MA 02170.

Interfaith Social Services

Volunteers, known as Santa's Helpers participate in the agency's 17-year-old Adopt-A-Family Program, according to Laura Stracco, Manager.

Stracco described the agency's headquarters as looking "a little bit like Santa's workshop" last week as volunteers organized the wrapping and distribution of gifts.

This year, Stracco's agency will serve over 175 households and over 500 children through the program.

That's in contrast to last year's numbers when some 127 households and 400 children were adopted.

Stracco said they were still taking names last week and many were middle class families who have suffered loss of jobs as well as working families buffeted by the economy.

Interfaith Social Services has been helping families for 61 years, according to John Martland, president.

Martland, himself, described the joy of adopting an Asian family of a mother, grandmother and seven-year-old girl.

Martland said the youngster did all the translating for her elders. As for her gift, he said that she asked for an arithmetic book.

Stracco said there has been a 30 percent increase at the agency's monthly food pantry which currently serves 55 households and, more, as needed, on an emergency basis.

Donations of food are always welcome. Donations may be mailed or delivered at headquarters, 105 Adams St., Quincy.

Quincy City Club, Inc.

The 100 members of this private club have been quietly helping residents since the late Richard Koch founded it 36 years ago.

Members leave their baskets quietly and anonymously and recipients never know the source.

Each member contributes to the holiday fund which raises $6,000 to $7,000 each year, according to Ray Cattaneo, president, who said the club focuses on agencies serving the homeless, the mentally ill, and recovering substance abusers.

As an example, Cattaneo said he and two other members delivered 15 dozen hats, pairs of socks, and mittens as well as five dozen scarves, T-shirts and another dozen two dozen robes.

This year, Cattaneo said the club's gifts were delivered to patients and guests at Long Island Hospital, Discovery Day Treatment, the Dysart Street agency and Father Bill's Mainspring.

Quincy Lodge of Elks

The Quincy Lodge of Elks distributed 170 baskets with turkeys and all the trimmings to local families at Christmas and Thanksgiving.

Committee Chairman John McHugh, Past Exalted Ruler, organized this year's program, along with Elks members and community workers.

McHugh had special thanks for Quigley and the Germantown Neighborhood Center and Ruler and Kenneth Yee of the Atlantic Neighborhood Center.

The Elks motto is "Elks Care. Elks Share." and Lodge members not only donate the funds but 20 to 30 members donate their time and deliver the baskets.

Elks offer service to the community year-round with special events for veterans and dinners for senior citizens.

Morrissey Holiday Party

And there are many individuals like Sen. Michael Morrissey who have holiday events and parties as fund-raisers.

For the past 15 years, Morrissey has held an annual Holiday Party to benefit local children and agencies.

Participants bring canned goods for local pantries, toys for Toys for Tots or checks for DOVE or the Dianne Dianna Center.

This year, Morrissey said participants filled 15-20 boxes with canned goods, contributed toys to Toys for Tots, $2500 for DOVE, and nearly $1,000 for the DeVanna Center.

"The holiday season is a good time to see old friends and make a contribution to local charities," said Morrissey,

St Vincent de Paul Society

Eight couples, along with Bill Lawless, President, organize the charitable efforts of St. Vincent de Paul Society at St. John's Church, School Street, Quincy.

"We couldn't do anything without the wonderful people of St. John's," said Lawless who was among the founders of the Society 28 years ago.

The Society operates a food pantry year-round and the numbers are up at least ten percent this year, according to Lawless.

"We see it on a weekly basis," said Lawless of the increase in need.

Christmas is a special time for members. Every Advent, Society members have sponsored "The Giving Tree."

The tree is raised on the church altar with paper decorations listing the Christmas wishes and needs of parishioners and their children.

Donors pick a gift, purchase the request and return it to St. John's office. This year, 65 families were remembered through "The Giving Tree."

"The altar was filled with unopened presents," said Lawless of the collection Sunday.

The wrapped presents, all tagged with code are given to specific families and individuals, along with turkeys, and food baskets.

In the years since Lawless and the Quincy members initiated the idea, other churches have adopted "The Giving Tree" concept.

Now, thousands of families and children throughout the Archdiocese are given what they need and what they wish for at Christmas through Giving Trees.

There are many, many business and private donors, according to Lawless who cited such businesses as Previti's and Rick Ramos.

Forum Topic: 'Cultural Competency And Diversity Factors For Asian American Elders'

The Ethics Of Diversity

By MALKAH FELDMAN

Imagine, for a moment, if all elder service providers on the South Shore had both a multicultural and multilingual staff and client base?

What if cultural differences were respected and viewed with curiosity? What if clients and staff sought to learn about each other holidays, joys and tragedies?

What if we celebrated each day with food from many cultures and exchanged various ways of doing things? What new and innovative services might be offered?

How many new choices would clients have for comfort, exercise and healing?

How different might management styles be if multicultural appreciation made staff want to learn new way of team building and problem-solving?

How might that change the concept of team work? Will this ever come to pass?

For those of us who hold this promise and dream of this possibility, here is an example of how it looked for two short hours on the morning of Nov. 18, at the Fenno House Independent and Assisted Living.

Over 35 agencies serving seniors on the south shore of Boston attended the forum 'Cultural Competency and Diversity Factors for Asian American Elders'. The service providers who attended came from a range of organizations including assisted living centers, hospitals, public health, and rehabilitative and long-term care nursing centers.

The collaborative sponsoring organizations included Quincy Medical Center, Quincy Council on Aging, the South Shore News, Wollaston Senior Center, the Law Offices of Joanne Erickson, and Fenno House Independent and Assisted Living.

Frank Poon, outreach worker from South Shore Elder Services and John Brothers, executive director of the Quincy Asian Resource Center led the presentation and discussion. A power-point slide show gave informative and important background on the growing Chinese community in the south shore.

Discussion included issues of generational differences between adult children who have lived on the south shore for a long time and their recent immigrant elderly parents.

The Chinese are the fastest growing ethnic/racial group in Quincy—144% increase since 1990. Seventy-five percent of Quincy's Asian Americans are immigrants (67% are U.S. citizens).

The Chinese in Quincy have the highest rate for home-ownership (more than any other group). Chinese seniors in Quincy tend to be from Hong Kong or Guangzhou and speak Cantonese and Chinese from Fujian (more recent immigrants) speak Mandarin and Fujianese.

Many elders immigrate after they retire and have face major challenges adapting to a new culture. Most adult children assume responsibility for the care of their parents. These adult children vary greatly in socio-economic status. Many of the adult children are assimilated and open to housing options for their parents that include apartments for the elderly, assisted living and nursing home care.

When Chinese elder residents need services they will not access them unless the agency has a perceived responsiveness to their community. This perceived responsiveness is based on sincere outreach efforts that an agency has done to welcome the Chinese community. A business, organization or company that wants to be inclusive needs to develop a long-term approach that includes the hiring and retaining of Asian personnel, staff and people who have appropriate skills.

Bilingual providers and interpreter services are also needed in the plan. Cultural competency training and awareness, as well as an anti-racism understanding, will need to be on the agenda of the top management of the agency. Untimely, the management must filter down and extend to all other levels of the organization, if inclusion of the Chinese is to be successful.

Feedback from the evaluations of the event included participants asking for more in-depth information, focus and discussion of ways to bridge the gaps of culture and language. The intention of the organizers is to take the feedback and incorporate it into future planning.

The Quincy Asian Resources provides cultural competence trainings and support for south shore organizations wanting to be more inclusive of the Chinese community. South Shore Elder Services also offers support, resources and problem-solving. The Welcome Back Center for Internationally Educated Nurses, a center that helps immigrants get US nursing certification (then provides job placement) gave a short presentation on ways agencies can hire multi-lingual Chinese RN's and LPN's.

The presentation series on ethics and senior providers will continue offering all south shore senior providers with stimulating and relevant forums every other month. Please contact us at 617-773-1590, extension 22, for more information.

The collaborative organizations of these forums includes Lola Tom and Leo Newhouse from Quincy Medical Center, Tom Clasby and Nancy DiPaolo from the Quincy Council on Aging, Joyce Guan from the Wollaston Senior Center, Joanne Erickson from Law Offices of Joanne Erickson, Greg Porell from South Shore Senior News and Malkah Feldman from Fenno House Independent and Assisted Living.

Malkah Feldman, LCSW, is the marketing director at Fenno House Independent and Assisted Living.

GRANITE STREET CAFÉ, located at 378 Granite St. in the Brewers Corner section of Quincy, recently celebrated its grand opening with a ribbon cutting.

Granite Street Café Celebrates Grand Opening

Chef and owner Arben Berberi recently celebrated the grand opening of his restaurant, Granite Street Café, located at 378 Granite St. in the Brewers Corner section of Quincy.

On hand to celebrate were Mayor Thomas P. Koch, City Council President Jay Davis, Quincy 2000 Collaborative Executive Director Dean Rizzo, Discover Quincy Executive Director Mark Carey, among other business owners and family members.

Born in Albania, Chef Berberi was culinary schooled and trained and worked in Varese, Italy for eight years prior to fulfilling his dream of opening his own restaurant. He said he was thrilled to find the perfect location, right near his Quincy home.

The opening of the restaurant has been a family affair. You will often find his wife Mirela, his father Elmas, his daughters Rebecca and Jessica, or another relative working at the restaurant, which has a casual, clean, and friendly family atmosphere.

The menu ranges from scrambled eggs and French toast for breakfast to burgers and linguine with calamari for lunch.

The Granite Street Café also offers catering and function facilities.

Life Safety Concerns During This Winter

Here's a brief focusing on ice rescue if you happen to witness someone trapped on ice or submerged within icy water this winter. As of this writing, we are not quite there yet, but it pays to be prepared for the worse if this winter gets severe.

So what should you do if you witness someone falling through the ice? Act quickly and call 911 for immediate help. This will alert trained and equipped rescue personnel. AVOID going out on the ice yourself. Often time would-be rescuers become victims themselves. Throw them a buoyant object such as a life ring or float tied to a rope. We will often use a lightweight boat to row out to the victim or push it towards them along the ice while being held by the rescuers in immersion suits.

Each situation dictates its own solution. In the fire service, it is essential not to become part of the problem yourself. That is why each rescue is unique, well thought out and performed carefully so as not to complicate what is already difficult.

If you witness a cold water emergency, think and respond properly while not reacting irrationally. Contact those prepared to respond to such an incident and assist as safely as you can if you can do so safely. Think: REACH, THROW or ROW, while not becoming a component of the problem or a victim yourself.

I also want to take this opportunity to remind you of another winter concern.

Exit discharge, that portion of an exit outside a building, MUST be free of snow. This is particularly important as it pertains to assembly occupancies such as restaurants, nightclubs and bars, but this is equally important for mercantile properties as well. Free and unobstructed exit access from the inside is not enough; it is imperative that the exit doors open freely toward the outside so that patrons can exit freely and quickly if need be.

Snow and ice can impede this process and MUST be removed if present. Proper maintenance of life safety considerations depends on it. Effective and immediate evacuation depends on it as well.

And lastly, consider the importance of having two means of unobstructed egress from your own homes, too. In an emergency, it is not enough to have access to one exit only; your evacuation plans should consider alternate ways of existing your home if needed. So consider snow and ice removal from all potential exits so that doors can open freely and paths away from your home are passable and unobstructed.

Thank you for doing so.

tor of emergency management, said no shelters had to be opened, no power was lost, except for isolated incidents, and there was no flooding because the tides were not high enough.

Walker said a water main broke in the sub-freezing cold not far from City Hall but it was repaired within a couple of hours.

The Public Schools were cancelled Monday and the superintendent's office said they would be open yesterday (Tuesday) when the side streets and sidewalks were in better shape.

A wintry mix of rain, sleet and snow was expected today (Wednesday) but temperatures in the 40s and some sunshine were expected to take the tops off the snow drifts during the next week.

One major accident was reported but no one was injured when a car collided with a snowplow on Burgin Parkway near the intersection of Penn Street.

Peter Lewis' Saab, traveling north on Burgin Sunday morning skidded to avoid a second car and crashed into a plow driven by Robert Derbes. The Saab was towed; the plow left under its own power.

Walker said the DPW used 1,100 tons of rock salt and about 200 yards of sand to keep the roads open during and after the storm.

Feb. 1 Deadline For Tax Abatement Applications

Anyone questioning the official assessment of his or her property may file for abatement through the Assessor's office.

The deadline for all abatement applications is Feb. 1. The request must be in the Assessor's office at City Hall or postmarked by Feb. 1.

Applications are available on line or at City Hall.

Real estate taxes are billed on the official assessment of the value of each home, business or commercial property. Every change in the value increases or decreases the tax bill.

As the real estate market levels off and, in some cases, declines, some taxpayers expect their real estate values to dip.

That doesn't always happen because some locations are actually increasing in value or holding their values.

In other cases, the homeowner may have improved his property beyond normal maintenance.

In some cases, an abatement or reduction in the official value is justified and the property value has been incorrectly assessed.

Assessor Marion Fantuccio said all residents with any questions should call or visit her office or website.

Residents may access their own and all of the city's assessments at City Hall or by visiting the website, ci.quincy.ma.us.

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, Oct. 30, 2008, at approximately 1:20 p.m., Officer Daniel Francis was dispatched to Petco Pet Store, located at 169 Parkway for a report of a past larceny.

Upon arrival, the officer met with the store manager who stated that a Sun Conure (bird), valued at $600, was missing and believed to have been stolen the night before. The manager said that he checked the store video surveillance and watched as a male suspect entered the store and stole the bird.

LT. DAN MINTON

The manager said that he believed the suspect had stolen from Petco in the past and even though he wasn't working when the theft of the bird occurred, he felt confident that he could identify the suspect if he saw him again.

Officer Francis viewed the video and saw the suspect milling around the store entrance just prior to closing. The video portrays the suspect as he proceeds to the bird area, where he is seen on surveillance bending the cage door open (the cage doors are pad-locked) and concealing the bird in his jacket. The suspect is then seen on video surveillance exiting the store.

Officer Francis advised Detective Jason MacIsaac about the video surveillance and he obtained a copy for identification and court purposes. He also provided photos of the suspect to Quincy Police Officers and placed a photo of the suspect on Massmostwanted.org.

On Monday, Dec. 15, 2008, at approximately 11:20 a.m., Officer Mike Brandolini was on routine foot patrol in Quincy Square in the area of Petco when he spotted a male that looked like the bird thief. The officer took out the photo and not only did the physical description look similar, the clothing - a black and white running suit, was a match. Officer Brandolini followed the suspect as he contacted the station for assistance.

Detective Sergeant Richard Tapper responded via radio that he would have Detective MacIsaac respond to the scene. Officer Brandolini stopped the suspect at the corner of Ross Way and Granite Street, then showed the suspect the photo and informed him that he was being stopped in regard to the incident.

Officer Steve Cleary and Sergeant Dan Flaherty arrived on scene and confirmed that the suspect matched the photo. Officer Cleary asked the suspect if he could search a duffel bag that he was carrying. The suspect consented to the search and inside the bag there was a small amount of class D marijuana and a pipe.

Detective MacIsaac arrived on scene and asked the suspect to come to the Police station to be interviewed. The suspect complied. During the interview, conducted by Detective MacIsaac and Sergeant Detective Tapper, the suspect confessed. When asked why he stole the bird, the suspect said that he had been drinking and did not know why he stole the bird. He said he felt bad about the incident but did not know how to return the bird without getting into trouble. He said the bird was in good health and in a cage in his home.

The detectives brought the suspect to his home and the bird was recovered. The suspect, a 45-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "Larceny over $250.00 (felony) and Wanton Destruction of Property over $250. The store's birdcage was valued at over $1000.

Smart Tips For Healthy Eating

(ARA) - Food can make you healthier -- if you make good choices. It can seem hard to make healthy food choices, particularly if you are on a budget and short on time. But there are some simple steps you can take to help you and your family eat healthier.

Build a Healthier Plate

Use a grocery list when shopping for food to help you choose more fresh vegetables, fruits, and whole grains. Buy leaner meats (such as chicken, turkey, and lean cuts of pork or beef such as sirloin or chuck roast) and lower fat dairy products like low-fat or non-fat (skim) milk and yogurt. Buy whole grain breads and cereals. Save money by buying less soda, sweets and chips or other snack foods. Remember that special "dietetic" or "diabetic" foods often cost extra money and may not be much healthier than simply following the suggestions given here.

Also, watch the size of your portions. You may find that you are used to eating portions that count as two or more servings. It helps to be able to "eyeball" portion sizes. Here are some guides:

- * Meat, fish, and poultry: 3 ounces, or about the size of the palm of your hand or a deck of cards.
- * Cheese: 1 ounce, or about the size of your thumb.

- * Fresh vegetables, milk and yogurt: 1 cup, or about the size of a tennis ball.
- * Bread: one slice.

Easy Ways to Make Smart Food Choices

There are lots of ways you can make smart choices about your own and your family's eating habits. According to Ann Albright, PhD, RD, president, Health Care and Education of the American Diabetes Association, "One of the most important things you can do to start eating more healthfully is to pick one or two not-so-great items you eat frequently and find a more nutritious substitution for those. If you start with foods you eat more frequently, then the change will pack a bigger punch."

Shop Smart

- * Set aside some time to plan your weekly meals. It may seem like a hassle at first, but having a plan (and writing your grocery list with it in mind) can save you time, stress, and a lot of extra trips to the store.

- * Stock your pantry with plenty of healthy basics, including brown rice, whole grain pasta, crackers and cereals. Remember that fresh fruits and vegetables are usually healthier than canned or frozen, but it is better to have canned or frozen fruits or vegetables than none at all! When you run out, put the items on your grocery list so you'll always have them on hand.

- * Shop only from your grocery list. Avoid aisles that contain foods high in calories but low in vitamins and minerals such as candy, cookies, chips and sodas. Also avoid buying items promoted at the front of the store, on the "end-cap" displays at the end of each aisle, or at the cash register. These foods are usually low in nutrition. Never shop when you are hungry and might be tempted by less healthy food.

Eat Smart

- * Keep fruits and vegetables washed and cut up for easy snacking and steaming.

- * Canned and frozen vegetables and fruits are healthy, quick and convenient. To cut down on the sodium in vegetables, drain and rinse canned vegetables with water before heating them. You can do the same to cut down on the added sugar in canned fruits. Better yet, buy them packed in juice.

- * Learn how to "Create Your Plate." When serving a meal, draw an imaginary line down the middle of your plate and another one across. Fill half of your plate with leafy greens and other vegetables. Fill one quarter with grains, like whole grain bread or pasta or brown rice. Then fill the last quarter with lean protein such as chicken or fish.

- * Start meals with a salad or a broth or tomato-based soup with lots of vegetables. This helps you eat more good-for-you veggies while filling you up before you get to the higher fat and calorie courses.

- * Make healthy snack foods easy to find in your kitchen. For example, when you get home from work or school, put some fresh carrots, grapes, or pretzels out on the counter instead of having bags of chips out.

- * In restaurants, ask if meats can be grilled rather than fried, and request sauces and dressings on the side. Remember to choose fruit, salad, or other vegetables as side items, rather than French fries. Order a salad or soup to start and then share an entré #233;e. Save money, and lots of calories, by skipping dessert.

Hiatal Hernia Turns Traumatic

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Our experience with my husband's hiatal hernia was traumatic. He was 69 and in excellent health. After a day of working in the yard, we sat down to supper and within three minutes he was incapacitated with chest pain. He was taken to the hospital and was given nitroglycerin for the pain. The pain subsided as quickly as it came. It took two months to discover the real problem: His stomach was in his chest cavity and had crowded his heart and lungs. Surgery was scheduled. Before the scheduled date, the pain returned and he had to have emergency surgery. Please let people with a hiatal hernia know about this. —M.H.

ANSWER: People have been led to believe that a hiatal hernia is the same as GERD, gastroesophageal reflux — heartburn; it isn't. They are two different conditions. A hiatal hernia is a bulging of the stomach through a gap in the diaphragm muscle, the muscle that separates the chest cavity from the abdominal cavity. The gap is the hiatus, and through it, the esophagus can pass from the chest into the abdomen to join the stomach.

GERD can happen to people with a hiatal hernia, and it can happen to people without a hiatal hernia. Your husband's problem was a somewhat rare complication of a hiatal hernia. The upward bulge of his stomach, the portion in the chest, twisted and cut off its own blood supply. That's what caused his pain. The first time, the hernia untwisted spontaneously and the pain left. The second time, the twist didn't untwist, and emergency surgery was required.

This process is called strangulation and is a very serious affair. Thankfully, it happens only to a very few. You've provided a chance for people to learn what a hiatal hernia is, what a strangulated hiatal hernia is, and what GERD is. We're all glad that things worked out well for your husband.

The booklet on hiatal hernia, acid reflux and heartburn focuses primarily on the common heartburn problem and its treatment. Readers wanting more information can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 501W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Your Winter Friends: Hand Sanitizer and Soap

Here we are in the midst of December, and no doubt many of us are out in the holiday crowds. Maybe we're going downtown to watch "Santa" arrive or to enjoy the tree lighting. Even if we're avoiding the malls, it seems that there are crowds everywhere. Besides the festive air, there's one other thing the crowds can bring: germs.

Many of us have immune systems that are compromised at least a little. When we get a "bug," we can take much longer to shake it off. Cold weather itself can be enough of a stressor that we can be more susceptible to germs.

Think about all the places germs can be found: grocery cart handles, the change a retail clerk hands you, doorknobs in public places, library books, a borrowed pen.

Here are three tips to keep from getting sick:

- * Invest in a little bottle of alcohol-based hand sanitizer and use it liberally. Scrub until your hands are dry. (I buy one small bottle to carry in my pocket and a larger one to keep at home to refill the smaller one.) If you're going to spend time with grandchildren, buy them their own "special" foamy hand sanitizer.

- * To avoid germs, doctors say it's especially important not to touch your hands to your mouth, nose or eyes.

- * When you get home from being out, wash your hands with warm water and an antibacterial soap.

To get through the rest of the winter without illness, stay warm, get enough rest and make sure your diet is adequate. Ask your doctor whether you should take a daily multiple vitamin. Ask about getting a flu shot too, if you haven't already had one.

EATING YOUR WAY TO BETTER GUMS

If you are looking for a dietary approach to gum disease prevention that augments brushing, flossing, and regular professional checkups/cleanings, researchers may have an answer. According to a recent study, people who ate two ounces of yogurt daily nearly halved their risk of advanced gum disease. This is welcome news for a problem that afflicts one in seven people under the age of 50 and one in three over 50. Advanced gum disease, which begins with gingivitis, or inflammation around the gums, can lead to bone loss and cause pockets to develop between teeth and gums. Yogurt's lactobacilli bacteria feed on sugar and produce lactic acid, which attacks the disease-causing bacteria. Calcium-rich foods, such as cheese, also boost tooth health. Unfortunately, periodontal-related problems are often discovered after they have persisted for an extended period of time. Proper oral hygiene, daily dental care and regular dental check-ups will minimize the risk of gum disease. We deliver a high level of quality dental care. All the members of our staff are dedicated to serving you - we will be happy to answer any questions you may have. Call us at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We have the knowledge, experience, and resources for quality dental care in a warm and friendly environment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesia with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Recent research shows that Vitamin D works with calcium to counter bone loss and inflammation caused by gum disease.

First Season In Patriot League

Learning Curve For NQ Girls' Basketball

By SEAN BRENNAN

This year's North Quincy Red Raiders girls' basketball team may have a difficult time matching the results of last year successful and history-making squad.

The 2007-2008 season saw the program win a second consecutive Atlantic Coast League North Division title, advance to the program's first-ever appearance in the Division I South Sectionals and finished the season with a 15-6 overall record.

The 2008-09 Raiders will not have the opportunity to make it a three-peat in the ACL this season, as the team, along with every other North Quincy team this winter, will be playing in the Patriot League. This change in leagues means that North will have to compete on the court in league play against teams from Hanover, Randolph, Rockland, Middleboro, Scituate, Hingham, Silver Lake, Whitman-Hanson, Duxbury, Pembroke and Quincy. A new slate of challengers for a team that over the last two years dominated the ACL North.

"We are new to the Patriot League this winter and we have not seen most of these teams," said NQ head coach Michael Jorgenson. "Teams like Whitman-Hanson and Quincy are familiar to us but the rest of the league schedule will be a learning curve until we get a hold of these teams' tendencies, players and style of play."

"One positive about the league change is that we no longer have to make those long road trips. I believe that Middleboro (about 40 miles away) is as far as we travel this year."

These Raiders will also have to overcome the loss (to graduation) of several key players off last year's team. Included in this group are the Goreham sisters, Rebecca and Rachel, Mary Kate Stille, Simone Leary, Paige Bonanni, Kasey O'Connell and Kerry Coughlin. These seven were instrumental in the success of the Raiders the last two seasons (31-11 overall), and will be missed, but according to Jorgenson, this year's team, which has nine seniors on the roster, was ready to go when the season tipped off Dec. 16 against Pembroke HS (a win).

"The first game of the year is always interesting," said Jorgenson. "But we were able to get the ball inside and we took control in the second half. We had to deal with some injuries that affected our ball handling ability but we adjusted to that as the game moved along."

"Last year's team had such a great chemistry. I am not saying this year will be a rebuilding season, it will not be, but we need to rebuild our team chemistry between our returning players and new players. Once they get to know each other on the court we should be much improved. I am looking to my senior captains and the more experienced players to step up and fill that role."

Seniors Siobhan Carnell and Kathleen Lynch are team captains.

"Siobhan and Kathleen are both great players and should provide the team with leadership and game experience. The younger and less experienced players will learn a lot from both of them."

Fellow senior Catherine O'Connell (17 points against Pembroke) should also be a major contributor this winter for the Red Raiders.

"Catherine really started to play well late last season for us," said Jorgenson. "She is going to be a big part of success this season."

Other seniors on the roster include Kristina Anderson, Amy Carchedi, Molly Clifford, Brittany Folkins, Jess Howlett and Julie Lynch. Underclassmen who should see playing time include juniors Sammi Bonanni and Cara Murtagh and sophomores Emily Gray, Uyen Vu and Montana McBimney.

The Raiders will be playing in the Patriot League's Fisher Division against teams from Hanover, Middleboro, Rockland, Pembroke and Randolph High Schools and will be challenged early in the schedule with consecutive home games against Hanover and Randolph before the Christmas holiday break.

North was scheduled to host Hanover, weather permitting, Dec. 19 and hosted Randolph on Monday. The Raiders will compete in the Notre Dame Academy Holiday Tournament on Dec. 29-30 before kicking off the New Year with an away game on Jan. 2 versus Rockland HS.

The first of two games against Quincy HS will be on Jan. 9 (NQHS, 5:30 p.m.). The Raiders and Presidents will meet again on Feb. 7.

Quincy Presidents Alumni Hoop Game Dec. 30

The Quincy Presidents varsity boys basketball program will be holding an Alumni Game for all former and current players on Tuesday, Dec. 30 from 6-8 p.m.

at the Quincy High School gymnasium.

The event is open to the public. A $5 donation is requested at the door. All monies raised will go to cover cost for the season for the QHS boys basketball programs.

After the game there will be a social hour at the Granite Rail, 16 Cottage Ave, Quincy Center, from 8:30-10 p.m. At the social hour there will be raffles and other prizes awarded.

For more information, contact QHS head coach David Parry at 781-858-5549.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Careful, Lamb. Don't let your generous nature lead to some serious oversteering as you contemplate your holiday gift-giving. Your social life kicks off into high gear by week's end.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A positive attitude helps you weather annoying but unavoidable changes in holiday plans. Aspects favor new friendships and reinforcement of existing relationships.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Demands on your energy level could be much higher than usual as you prepare for the upcoming holidays. Be sure to pace yourself. Friends and family will be happy to help.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Don't allow a sudden icy relationship from a friend or family member to continue without learning what caused it—and what can be done to restore that once warm and caring relationship.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A relationship seems to be unraveling, mostly from a lack of attention. It might be a good idea to ease up on whatever else you're doing so you can spend more time working to mend it.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) New facts emerge that not only help explain the recent rift with a trusted colleague, but also might provide a chance to wipe the slate clean and make a fresh start in your friendship.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A family member's personal situation is, fortunately, resolved in time for you to get back into your hectic round of holiday preparations. An old friend might bring a new friend into your life.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Pace yourself in meeting holiday pressures and workplace demands to avoid winding up with a frayed temper and a Scorpi-an stinger that lashes out at puzzled kith, kin and colleagues.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A financial matter requires close attention. Also, news from a trusted source provides the means to help sort out a long-standing state of confusion and put it into perspective.

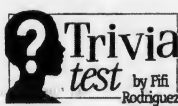

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This is a good time to reinforce family ties. Make it a priority to assess and resolve all outstanding problems. Start the upcoming holiday season with a full measure of love.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't be pressured into a so-called solid-gold investment. Wait until the holiday distractions are over. Then take a harder look at it. You might find that the "gold" is starting to flake off.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A former friend might be trying to heal the breach between you by using a mutual friend as an intermediary. Best advice: Keep an open mind despite any lingering bad feelings.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of saying the right thing at the right time. Your friendships are deep and lasting.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

The season of Christmas is sacred and is observed by Christians all over the world as commemorating the coming of the King. It is then that we devote ourselves to the joys of our friendships and to the contemplation of spiritual things. Our hearts are mellowed, our spirits are lifted, and our good will is broadened. It is the season of giving, giving not only to our loved ones but also to others who are less fortunate than we are.

The message of New Year's Day is, "Think of the passing of time." The message of Easter is, "Think of immortality." The message of Thanksgiving is, "Think of your blessings." But the message of Christmas is, "Think of others."

Generally, at no other time during the year are we so generous towards others as during the Christmas season. Streets are crowded with package-laden shoppers who have been spending their time and money on gifts for others... Yet it is possible to have Christmas all around us and still not share in it with heart and mind.

When God measures a man, He puts the measuring tape around the heart. As we wrap our gifts this year, let us make sure that we put something of ourselves into each one.

Christmas joy springs from the loving and generous heart.

Taxes, Public Safety, Billboard Top Local News Stories

By TOM HENSHAW

It wasn't a good year for the newly minted administration of Mayor Thomas Koch — and the taxpayers of Quincy.

What began as a glorious opening in the grand ballroom of the Marriott Hotel in Quincy descended into a citizenry irate over a hefty tax hike and a perceived extravagance in office.

The residential tax rate for Fiscal 2009 went up 15 percent, more than $500 for the average homeowner, pending state approval, and $60,000 in City Hall renovations, including new office carpeting and a 47-inch TV, had to be rescinded.

Controversy erupted over the public safety chiefs with controversial Police Chief Robert Crowley replaced by Paul Keenan. Keenan, a 25-year department veteran and the mayor's brother-in-law, was selected the city's 17 police chief by an ad hoc committee.

The city's other public safety post — fire chief — was still vacant. One candidate to replace retired Fire Chief Tim Pettinelli was suing the mayor at year's end.

Residents of Ward 4 were upset over an 82-foot neon lighted billboard based on Willard Street that towered above traffic on the Southeast Expressway. They called it a "blight" on their West Quincy neighborhood.

Two members of the School Committee quit for better jobs with the city. Jim Timmins and Kevin Mulvey were replaced by Nick Puleo and Ron Mariano, returning to the board after a two years hiatus.

And John Adams, the second president of the United States, received a boost as a tourist attraction with the showing of the seven-part mini-series "John Adams" starring Paul Giamatti and Laura Linney on HBO.

Here, month by month, is what happened in Quincy in the year 2008:

Mid-Term Address Jan. 5

Koch Sees Opportunities, Challenges In '09

Mayor Thomas Koch will deliver his first Mid-Term Address Monday, Jan. 5 at 10 a.m. with a message that "confronts the challenges ahead, but shows clear optimism" about Quincy's future, he said.

"We undoubtedly face historic challenges as a community, but I believe we also have historic opportunities on the table. We will be talking about both," Koch said, giving a general preview of his speech before the City Council Monday morning.

Koch did not offer many specifics of the address, but said that the "agenda and tone for 2009 will be made very clear" by his talk.

"It will be a very important — and difficult — year, and we will not be sugar-coating anything," Koch said. "But I am confident that by continuing to work hard together with the City Council, the School Committee, and our state delegation, that we are well prepared to make tough decisions and emerge from this period a stronger community."

Koch said his address will be "action-focused," adding he does not expect the address to be a full review of his first year in office. However, he added that he was proud of his 12-month record, briefly ticking off a series of successes:

Cost-savings on the new Quincy High School, reforms in the water and sewer department, working to end the internal strife in the police department, and overhaul of the city's financial operations, a cost-saving new trash contract and the agreement to join the state-run health insurance program that will save taxpayers at least $4 million next year.

"Many people have worked incredibly hard over the last 12 months, and I am proud of their efforts. Make no mistake, we have much work to do, and we will be ready," Koch said.

Timmins' Advisory Finds No Conflict For Councillors As Elks, B.J.'s Members

City Solicitor James Timmins informed city councillors Dec. 15 that neither membership in the Elks nor membership in B.J.'s Wholesale Club creates a conflict of interest for members considering projects affecting either club.

Councillors had received applications for Special Permits from both entities when City Council President Jay Davis asked for a ruling on the membership issue on Dec. 10.

In his advisory, Timmins directed that councillors who are members of the Quincy Lodge of Elks provide oral and written disclosure prior to considering current issues.

As for membership in B.J. Wholesale Club, Inc., Timmins dismissed that as "not a concern" under the state's ethics statute.

Timmins addressed the issue of Elks membership in detail. He noted that council members were considering an application for an expansion of the Elks headquarters on Quarry Street.

Citing decisions from the

JAMES TIMMINS

State Ethics Commission and the law, Timmins concluded that membership in the Elks did not constitute a sufficient "financial interest" as to prohibit involvement by councillors who are Elks members.

"If you serve in any capacity at the Elks beyond your mere membership, then I would advise you to disclose that service and to refrain from participating," Timmins stated in his report.

"If you are merely a member, you are not in a position to derive a 'direct or reasonably foreseeable' financial benefit.... You may, therefore, participate in the permitting process."

In his explanation, Timmins determined that any officer, director, trustee, partner or employee of an organization, such as the Elks, would have a "direct or reasonably foreseeable financial interest." Members do not have such an interest.

Timmins quoted the legal interpretation of the statute that is intended to assure the public that a public employee's official judgments and actions "will not be clouded by potentially competing private (financial) interests."

After Timmins' explanation and a presentation by Elks officers, all nine councillors voted Dec. 15 to approve the Special Permit for the Elks expansion 9,740 sq., ft., addition.

Councillors will consider the B.J.'s application for a Special Permit at a later date.

Councillors Michael McFarland, Doug Gutro (Ward 5) and Brian McNamee (Ward 6) disclosed their Elks membership prior to the discussion and provided signed disclosure statements to that effect.

$2 Million Lost In Tax Shelter, Quirk Claims

Auto dealer Daniel Quirk has filed suit in U. S. District Court in Boston claiming a financial adviser bilked him out of $2 million in an alleged scheme to avoid capital gains taxes.

The suit asserts that Edward Okun, 57, took his clients for as much as $150 million which he spent on, among other things, vacation homes, a 131-foot yacht and a 27-year-old girl friend, Okun is currently living in Virginia where he is in custody following his indictment by a federal grand jury on charges of mail and wire fraud, money laundering and cash smuggling.

The suit says that Okun set up a tax shelter under a law that permits people to avoid the capital gains tax on the sale of real estate by buying property of similar or greater value within 180 days.

While waiting the second sale, the proceeds of the first sale are given up to an account listed to a third party known as the "exchange facilitator," the Okun tax shelter.

Quirk sold his property for $2 million and transferred the proceeds to Okun's company, AEC Exchange of Boston, which placed them in an account at Wachovia Bank and ignored requests for their return.

The suit names the troubled Wachovia Bank as defendant, claiming that the bank failed to adequately protect the money in about 160 accounts while collecting fees for wire transfers in and out of the them.

Wachovia is already the target of a $60 billion law suit filed by Citibank and has been linked to money laundering for Mexican and Colombian drug rings.

The suit seeks restitution of the $150 million, including Dan Quirk's $2 million.

First Night In Quincy Casualty Of Economics

Put down that paper hat, clamp a lid on "Auld Lang Syne," and recork that jero-boam of champagne.

There'll be no First Night in Quincy this year.

Oh, there'll be New Year's Eve house parties galore and your favorite watering hole undoubtedly will have a little something to help you greet 2009.

But the First Nights of the past 16 years, the organized citywide menu of events that once drew 20,000 revelers to Quincy Square, has been done in by a faltering economy.

The evening's entertainment that once cost $100,000 limped along last year on $45,000, with $20,000 coming from a cash-strapped city, the rest from private donations.

In the end, neither could come up with its share and there was no one to bail them out.

COA, Lions Seek Glasses

If you have glasses you no longer need and would like to donate them to a worthy cause, call the COA at 617-376-1506.

Koch Inaugurated Mayor, McCarthy Elected School Vice Chairman

JANUARY

2008 In Review

Tom Koch was inaugurated the 33rd mayor of Quincy, pledging a renewed fight on drug abuse, new taxable development outside the neighborhoods and a "more open, responsive and... efficient" government.

"To all of you," he said, "know my door is always open."

Throughout his inaugural address, he urged the people of Quincy to get involved quoting John F. Kennedy: "Today, every citizen, regardless of his interest in politics, holds office."

"Most importantly," said Koch, "to our citizens, young and old, from so many diverse cultures and backgrounds, please know that City Hall is the people's house and I am only its temporary steward."

About 1,000 people attended the inauguration in the ballroom of the Marriott Hotel, including five former mayors of Quincy and the newly elected mayors of Braintree and Weymouth.

Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis was elected president of the City Council, urging the city to stress its assets in luring the offspring of baby boomers to live and work in Quincy.

"These children of baby boomers desire to be closer to work and recreation," he said. "We need to be proactive with this group, promoting events and encouraging businesses that swerve this demographic. Quincy is a great place to do business."

Dave McCarthy was elected vice chairman of the School Committee, emphasizing small class size as the number on priority along with a dropout prevention program, full day kindergarten, early literacy and advanced placement programs.

Outgoing Mayor William Phelan noted he was leaving office with the city's largest stabilization fund, a free cash reserve of $2.6 million, a bond rating that was increased twice as well as the start of construction of a new Quincy High School and plans for revitalization of downtown Quincy.

"Our success is no accident," he said in his farewell message. "It was the result of prudent financial planning and a discipline of best practices financial management."

The Goliath crane, a landmark on Quincy's skyline for more than 30 years at the Fore River Shipyard was sold to Daewoo Shipbuilding and Marine Engineering of South Korea for use in its shipyard in Romania.

Tom Clasby, who resigned in October over differences with then-Mayor Phelan, was reappointed director of the Council on Aging by Mayor Koch.

City Councillors Daniel Raymondi and Joseph Finn challenged the new real estate values for 1000 Southern Artery where the three buildings housing the elderly increased by $8.2 million or 20 per cent in value over the past three years.

At Large City Councillor Michael McFarland was named superintendent-director of the Norfolk County Agricultural High School in Walpole where he had been business manager for the past six years.

Mayor Koch named a citizens' task force to undertake what he called the most sweeping overhaul of Quincy's zoning and building rules in recent history.

"Everything is on the table," he said. "Targeting large scale development in single-family neighborhoods is certainly part of this but we are going to look much deeper. The goal is to preserve our neighborhoods now and shape the neighborhoods we want 20 years from now."

Civil rights activist Ron Bell, the governor's director of Civic Engagement, was the featured speaker at the 12th annual Martin Luther King Jr. Breakfast Celebration which attracted 350 persons to North Quincy High School.

Ward 5 City Councillor

NEW YEAR, NEW MAYOR - Tom Koch takes his oath from City Clerk Joseph Shea in January as Quincy's 33rd mayor at inaugural ceremonies at the Quincy Marriott ballroom. With him are his wife, Christine, and children Corneilus, Thomas, Jr. and Abigail. Behind them are Councillors Doug Gutro, Brian McNamee and Kevin Coughlin. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble

Doug Gutro filed an ordinance that would give seniors over 65 and low income homeowners a 15 per cent annual discount on water and sewer bills. The Council's Ordinance Committee opposed the plan after learning enterprise accounts were running a multi-million dollar deficit.

The week-old Koch Administration got an A for effort in keeping the main roads open, the neighborhood streets passable and the complaints to a minimum in the wake of a storm that dumped five inches of snow on the city.

Dr. Carmen M. Mariano, assistant superintendent of the Quincy public schools, was officially sworn in as president of Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree in a ceremony presided over by Sean Cardinal O'Malley.

Friends of the Rev. Dr.

Thomas Pang bid farewell to the dynamic priest at St. Chrysostom's Church, Wollaston, as he prepared to leave for a new assignment in China.

Some 120 people braved 33-degree temperatures to show up for the second annual John Hancock Plunge into the frigid waters of Mound Street Beach to raise funds for Interfaith Social Services.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Jan. 2, 1811, Sen. Timothy Pickering of Massachusetts becomes the first senator to be censured by the Senate. Pickering was accused of violating congressional law by publicly revealing secret foreign-policy documents communicated by the president to the Senate.

• On Dec. 29, 1890, the U.S. Army's 7th Cavalry kills 146 Sioux at Wounded Knee in South Dakota. The Cavalry surrounded the Sioux near Wounded Knee Creek and demanded they surrender their weapons. As that was happening, a fight broke out between an Indian and a U.S. soldier and a shot was fired, although it's unclear from which side. The brutal massacre followed.

• On Dec. 30, 1922, in post-revolutionary Russia, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR) is established. Also known as the Soviet Union, it was the first country in the world to be based on Marxist socialism.

• On Jan. 3, 1938, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, an adult victim of polio, founds the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, which he later renamed the March of Dimes Foundation. In response to a fundraising appeal, the public flooded the White House with 2,680,000 dimes and thousands of dollars in donations.

• On Dec. 31, 1947, America's favorite Western couple gets married. Roy Rogers, star of numerous Westerns and television and radio shows, wed his co-star, Dale Evans. Rogers and Evans had performed together for years, but didn't marry until a year after Rogers' wife passed away.

• On Jan. 1, 1962, the Beatles audition for London record company Decca on the same day as Brian Poole and the Tremeloes. Decca signed the Tremeloes, but not the Beatles. The Tremeloes first hit the charts with "Twist and Shout," later also done by the Beatles. The Tremeloes band is still active today.

• On Jan. 4, 1974, President Richard Nixon refuses to hand over tape recordings and documents that had been subpoenaed by the Senate Watergate Committee. Marking the beginning of the end of his presidency, Nixon would resign from office in disgrace eight months later.

What You Won't See In 2009

The so-called experts on just about everything are telling us what to expect in 2009.

I'll leave that to them.

Being no expert on that heavy stuff, I would like to predict a few things I think we won't be seeing next year. Like:

You won't see Mayor Tom Koch looking for a tax rate increase.

You won't see Frank McCauley changing his mind about retirement and returning to the campaign trail. And you won't see Sandra telling him he should. (Frank is content writing his Quincy's Yesterdays column but keeps a sharp eye on City Hall.)

You won't see Dan Raymondi with a loss for words.

You won't see City Clerk Joe Shea saying, "We should go back to paper ballots. It was more fun that way."

You won't see Ron Della Chiesa leading a Rock n' Roll band.

You won't see Leo Kelly, chairman of the city's recycling Evergreen Program, decorating an artificial Christmas tree. (Better not, Leo.)

You won't see former Mayor Arthur Tobin, now Court Magistrate at Quincy District Court, not helping someone in need. (And doing it quietly.)

You won't see Councillor Mike McFarland with a frown. That's a permanent smile.

You won't see Rhonda Merrill, city-purchasing agent, saying: "Always give it to the highest bidder."

You won't see Health Commissioner Drew Scheele saying: "It's okay, you really don't have to wash your hands."

You won't see Fr. Bill McCarthy or John Yazwinski closing the door on anyone at Father Bill's Place.

You won't see Kevin Coughlin leaving a shopping cart on the sidewalk.

You won't see a bar without someone standing outside puffing on a cigarette. Even on a frigid winter day or night.

And one thing for sure. You won't see 2008 again.

A tough year for many who probably would like to say, "good bye, good riddance."

Hopefully, 2009 will be kinder.

Wishing you a Happy, Happy, Healthy New Year.

A CHRISTMAS STORY

Did you find that something special for that someone special this Christmas?

It's not easy especially this year with all that snow and ice fouling up last minute shoppers.

But getting the right gift for the right person isn't easy regardless of the weather. And sometimes the recipient might not understand the meaning of the gift.

Like the story in "Stewardship," a publication distributed with the St. John's Church bulletin.

If you haven't already seen it, I think it will make you smile.

The article, published by Parish Publishing LLC, goes like this:

This is the delightful story of the poor fellow who went to Texas and struck it rich. He became a millionaire.

Wanting to do something for his mother and knowing she loved pets, he walked into the pet store to browse for a gift. He came upon a mynah bird singing in its cage.

The price tag on the cage was $25,000.

"How come that mynah bird costs so much?" he asked the proprietor.

The owner was quick to tell him "That bird costs $25,000 because it can recite the Lord's Prayer, the twenty third Psalm and the Gettysburg Address.

"Not only that, it can sing the Star Spangled Banner."

"Wow, that's a lot of money but nothing is too good for my mother. Pack it up; send it Federal Express and see to it that it arrives the Saturday before Christmas."

When Christmas Day came, the chap was so excited he could hardly wait to call his mother.

"Merry Christmas, Mom."

"Thank you, Son."

"Well, did you get my gift?"

"Yes, Son. Thank you."

"Did you like it, Mom?"

"Yes, Son, it was delicious."

Annual John Hancock Plunge Jan. 24 At Wollaston Beach

Are you ready to take the Plunge for Interfaith Social Services?

The third annual John Hancock Birthday Plunge into the frigid waters off Wollaston Beach will take place Saturday, Jan. 24, at 9:30 a.m. with a goal of $9,000 to benefit the many programs at ISS.

The first two Plunges were sponsored by the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission and held at Mound Street Beach and last year raised more than $5,000.

This year the commission is joined by the Friends of Wollaston Beach and the State Department of Conservation and Recreation and the event moved to Wollaston Beach.

Participants can have their choice of five Plunges in varying degrees of icy challenge --- Full Plunger, Waist Wader, Knee Higher, Dunkin' Toe-nut and, new this year, "I Would If I Could."

No, the latter category was not created for the benefit of Leo Kelly, chairman of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission.

Anyone collecting pledges totaling more than $75 will receive a free Plunge T-shirt. The shirts will also be available for sale at the Plunge

Prizes will be awarded to the individuals who raise the most money and wear the most unusual "get-up," as well as the youngest and the oldest participants.

If you cannot participate in the Plunge itself, you can still join in the "I Would If I Could" category and obtain pledges to be part of the fund-raising effort.

ISS assists residents of Quincy, Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth and everyone is welcome to Plunge in.

For further information, contact Leo Kelly, chairman, at 617-773-1534, or Chickie Abdallah, event coordinator, at 617-479-2142.

Foreign Film At Library

The award-winning Serbian film "The Trap" will be shown on Thursday, Jan. 8 at 7 p.m. in the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

This modern film noir, directed by Srđan Golubovic, tells the story of an ordinary man forced to choose between life and death of his own child.

"The Trap" is about the post-Milosevic's Serbia, in which there is no more war, only moral and existential desert. This is Serbia in transition, in which human life is worth little, and normal life remains almost unreachable.

The film was a winner multiple awards. It was Serbia's entry into the Academy Awards for the Best Foreign-Language Film of 2007.

Although not subject to rating by the Motion Picture Association of America, the film is not recommended for ages under 17 without parental permission.

THIS IS A 1920's postcard view of the Baker Yacht Basin on the Town River in Quincy Point. This well-protected deepwater anchorage was used to store excursion steamboats during the winter. Lorenzo D. Baker, Jr. had an extensive yacht building and repair business there for many years. His father was a sea captain from Wellfleet on Cape Cod and was well known as one of the founders of the United Fruit Company in Boston. Captain Baker had bought the land here in Quincy to build a shipping facility for his fleet of freighters that brought bananas from Central America. He had planned to build a railroad from here across Washington Street to connect with the Fore River Railroad for shipping the fruit throughout the northeast. He died before the facility was built. Interim Sludge Facility At Quincy Shipyard

By FRANK McCAULEY

Mayor Francis X. McCauley announced that the city of Quincy had entered into an agreement with the Mass. Water Resources Authority for an interim sludge facility at the Quincy Shipyard at least through 1995.

"We pressed the court case as far as we could," said McCauley, referring to the city's efforts against the purchase of the shipyard by the M.W.R.A.

The agreement was jointly announced by M.W.R.A. Executive Director Paul Levy, Mayor McCauley, DPW Commissioner Paul Anderson and consultant David Stanley.

McCauley and Levy said the agreement would accelerate the Boston Harbor cleanup, provide the city with tax revenue as well as eliminate planned sludge processing activities at the MWRA Nut Island Pollution Control Facility in Houghs Neck.

READERS FORUM

Thanks Raymondi, Colleagues For Ban On Knives Sales To Minors

I would like to applaud Councillor Dan Raymondi and the rest of the city councillors who supported the ordinance banning the sale of knives to minors.

Knives are the second most dangerous weapon in school violence; second only to guns. I would also like to congratulate the parent for having brought this matter to Councillor Raymondi's attention. I find it unbelievable that a child can buy soda, chips and knives all in the same breath.

It should be remembered that school violence is prevalent today as well as in years past. This year alone we have had several schools in lockdown after finding ammunition in the schools. On November 20 there was an actual stabbing.

In the school massacre at Columbine High School, it was reported by the survivors in the library "that after killing several students with a gun it was heard that Harris and Klebold commented that they no longer found a thrill in shooting their victims." Klebold was quoted to have said maybe "we should start knifing people, that might be more fun." Although no one was stabbed at Columbine the shooters had multiple knives on them.

At Virginia Tech the shooter had multiple knives on his possession. They actually showed him with a knife pointed to his neck.

I know we can't stop all the knives and guns from being sold to minors. This potentially is a good start; let's get the knives out of the hands of our children and help keep the violence out of our schools.

Thank you, Councillor Raymondi.

Flags Missing On World War II Memorial

Military protocol dictates that whenever a flagpole is within the vicinity of a monument or statue, a flag must be raised to the top. Since the World War II Memorial/Statue was moved to Merrymount Park, this has not been done. Why? The Veteran's Services Office has been lax.

Roast Lamb Or Ham Made Easy

Even though Christmas is over, we still have to cook for New Years, at least some of us do. In addition to some kind of pasta at our house, we sometimes have lamb or ham. So today's recipe is a tasty way to prepare either one.

ROAST LAMB WITH ROSEMARY

5 pound or so whole leg of lamb
1 large garlic clove
1 teaspoon dried rosemary, crumbled
1 teaspoon fresh lemon peel salt and freshly ground pepper olive oil

After the lamb is dried with paper towel, rub the garlic over the surface of the lamb. Cut the garlic clove into slivers and make four or five slashes in the meat and insert the garlic slivers. Rub the meat with rosemary, lemon peel, salt and pepper. Place in a roasting pan.

Sprinkle with olive oil and roast in a 325 degree oven for about three hours.

I usually put potatoes and carrots around turning occasionally.

If you don't buy a ham already done, here is my fool proof way of preparing ham.

about a 5 pound ham
1 can pineapple slices sticks of clove maraschino cherries
toothpicks

Place pineapple slices with a cherry in the center and secure them with a toothpick. Fit as many as you can around the ham and then bake covered in a 325 degree oven for about 2 hours.

The side dish that goes best with ham is scalloped potatoes. And when I make them, I always make an ordinary cream sauce and add grated parmesan cheese and then mix this altogether with the cooked diced potatoes. I add a bit more milk and favorite shredded cheese and bake in a 350 degree oven until cheese is melted. Happy New Year!

'Comics For A Cure' To Benefit Youngster With Pediatric Cancer

Five nationally-known area comedians will come together to raise money for a 14-month-old girl who has been diagnosed with pediatric cancer, specifically Neuroblastoma, age the age of two months.

The benefit, called "Comics for a Cure," will be held Friday, Jan. 9 at the Cutler Majestic Theatre in Boston.

The benefit was conceived by Tracy Harding, a 26-year-old Quincy resident and the aunt of the little girl fighting pediatric cancer.

"I can't even begin to understand what the journey is like for all parents of children with pediatric cancer, or for the children, survivors and angels of this disease - I won't pretend that I do," said Harding. "I created this event for them, as well as the amazing nurses, doctors, hospice workers, etc. that made the choice to work with these children.

"My hope," Harding said, "is that 'Comics for a Cure' will raise awareness, much needed funds and be an awesome night of comedy for this very deserving group."

The line-up of comedians includes event host Joe List, Nick DiPaolo, Guy Gulman, Kevin Knox and Kelly MacFarland.

Event proceeds will benefit the Children's Neuroblastoma Cancer Foundation, an organization dedicated to funding research and clinical trials as well as educating and supporting families who have been affected by this deadly disease.

Tickets for "Comics for a Cure" are on sale through www.comicsforcure.org or by calling Telecharge at 800-233-3123.

For more information, as well as details on sponsorships for the evening, e-mail info@comicsforcure.org.

Officer Jamie Cochrane Road Race Committee Donates $2,500 To Toys For Tots Program

TOYS FOR TOTS DONATION – The Officer Jamie Cochrane Road Race Committee recently donated $2,500 dollars to the United States Marine Corps, to aid their local efforts for the Toys for Tots Program. This donation was made in memory of William F. Degan, who served in the United States Marine Corps 1972-1975, and was a Lieutenant Colonel in the USMC Reserves from 1975 until his death. He became a Deputy United States Marshal in 1978. Deputy Degan was killed in the line of duty in 1992. The donation was made in appreciation of the Degan Family and the William F. Degan Road Race Committee. The Degan Committee was instrumental in making the first Officer Jamie Cochrane Road Race a huge success. In addition, in the spring of 2009 the Cochrane Road Race will be awarding several college scholarships to graduating seniors whom are residents of Quincy. The Officer Jamie Cochrane Race Committee thanks everyone for their continued support and wish all a happy and safe holiday season. On hand for the donation were (from left): Boston Police Officer Anthony Perella, Degan's nephew; Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan; Ed and Elaine Cochrane, Officer Cochrane's parents; Officer Dennis Keenan, Det. Sgt. Jennifer Tapper; Ted Hartnett, Cochrane's uncle; Staff Sgt. Gaddi, USMC; Officer Greg Hartnett, Cochrane's cousin; and LCPL Bleiler, USMC.

Council Votes 6-3 To Override Koch's Decision On Zoning

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Councillors voted 6-3 on Dec. 15 to approve high-density zoning for large parcels in Business C districts despite rejection of the same zoning change by Mayor Thomas Koch.

Councillor Michael MacFarland revived the issue at the Dec. 15 meeting with the intention of overriding Koch's negative determination.

This is the second vote on the controversial issue which was initially approved Nov. 10 by the same councillors with the same vote count.

However, City Solicitor James Timmins has said the council can not override the mayor on a zoning issue. Timmins stated that the mayor must sign all zoning revisions into law.

According to City Solicitor James Timmins, Koch must sign all zoning changes. If he does not sign the change, the zoning revision can not become law.

Timmins has asked the state attorney general's office to rule on his interpretation but, as of Monday, he had no decision from the state.

McFarland sought the vote Dec. 15 in order to stay within the statutory time limit for a council override.

McFarland initiated the Business C zoning change in Dec. 2007 and refiled the motion several times in 2008.

Proponents of the change support a "Smart Growth" concept favoring heavy density near public transportation and inner cities while opponents fear high rise development will overrun residential districts where parcels, such as former car dealerships, are now vacant.

In his official decision, Koch cited the current Land Court case involving Marina Bay residents and O'Connell Development Corp.

In that case, Marina Bay residents believe O'Connell's plan to develop a high-rise apartment building on property between Marina Bay and The Moorings will adversely affect the Marina Bay and North Quincy community.

The current zoning would allow 25 units on the 1.5 acre property while the revised zoning would allow 80 units.

In announcing his decision in early December, Koch said he would not interfere in an active court case prior to the judge's decision.

Koch, also, said the matter will be addressed when his zoning committee files its recommendations for zoning improvements throughout the city.

In addition to McFarland, Councillors Joseph Finn, John Keenan, Jay Davis (Ward 4), Leo Kelly (Ward 1), and Kevin Coughlin (Ward 3) supported the change.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee has repeatedly outlined the concerns of residents in his area, particularly, those in Marina Bay.

McNamee, along with Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi have repeatedly opposed the zoning change.

Community Preservation Committee To Hold Public Meeting Jan. 8

The City of Quincy's Preservation Committee (CPC) will be holding a public meeting in the Council Chambers in City Hall on Jan. 8 at 7 p.m.

The purpose of the meeting will be to elicit feedback and suggestions from Quincy residents regarding the Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds. The Massachusetts' state law mandates that CPC's around the state work to encourage dialogue about how this money is spent each year.

The meeting on Jan. 8 will be an opportunity for Quincy residents to weigh in on how CPA money has been spent so far and recommend ways to spend it in the future.

Quincy voters adopted the CPA in November of 2006. Since that time over $6.5 million of taxpayer money has been spent or bonded. This money went to buy over 18 acres of land for open space, help to create or rehabilitate affordable housing units, improve recreational facilities and to restore historic sites.

For example, $3.3 million went to buy 13 acres of land to expand Faxon Park. In North Quincy, $220,000 went to assist in the creation of several affordable rental units. The Church of the Presidents will be getting its belfry rehabilitated.

This year there will likely be about $1.5 million available in new funding for CPA spending. The first $900,000 will pay down the debt on the bond, leaving about $600,000 to allocate towards open space preservation, affordable housing, recreational park expansions, or historic site restoration.

Applications are available at the City Solicitor's office or on the City's website. For consideration this year, the applications are due back at the Solicitor's office no later than Feb. 27, 2009.

Dentistry To Be Topic At Senior Luncheon Jan. 15

Dr. Dan Sweeney will hold a seminar in dentistry for seniors Wednesday, Jan. 14, at 11:30 a.m. at the Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex, One Merrymount Parkway. He will also answer a variety of questions, including a description of a new way of doing impressions. Luncheon will be served. Reservation may be made by calling Ann Bruce at the Council on Aging, 617-376-1506.

Mail, Drop Off Nominations By Wednesday

Dec. 31 Last Day For Sun Citizen Of Year Nominations

Today (Wednesday) is the last day to submit nominations for The Quincy Sun's 25th annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

After nominations close Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from nominations submitted.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Robert and Gloria Noble were honored for their service to worthy community causes for more than a half century. They are the first husband and wife team – and the 24th and 25th recipients – of the award.

The Nobles were selected for the honor by a panel of judges from among 44 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears in this week's issue of The Quincy Sun (to the right on this page).

If you know someone you would like to see recognized with the 2008 award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address by Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for the their nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor, friend or community activist who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Those nominated in the past are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, each nominee has an equal chance of being selected regardless of the number of nominations received. Anyone nominated just once has the same chance of being the award recipient.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, Dec. 22, 2008, at approximately 7:45 p.m., Officer James Flaherty was dispatched to the area of the A.J. Wright store on report of an unwanted person in a motor vehicle.

Upon arrival, the officer interviewed the female caller and her friend, who stated they were lost while looking for the store, so they pulled up to a group of people of similar age in front of the Quincy Center MBTA station to ask for directions.

At this point, the man opened the right rear door and jumped in and said, "I'll take you there."

The victim stated this horrified her and her passenger and that she was "speechless and scared." She drove off following the directions that the mysterious male suspect provided. The suspect then pulled out a bag that held a substance that appeared to be cocaine and said, "I think this is good for a gram, I wish I could smoke this with you."

The victim became increasingly fearful and as they neared the store, she pulled into the first space she could find, parked in a haphazard manner and the victim and her friend both got out immediately. The victim told the suspect to get out of the car and he responded, "I'll wait here."

Both victims walked briskly into the store and called the police. The officer confirmed the victim's car was parked haphazardly, which was a factor showing the victim's fear. Officer Flaherty approached the vehicle and observed a male in the back seat on the passenger side. He had a hood on and was moving around furtively. His hands were out of sight.

The officer opened the door and instructed the suspect to step out of the vehicle and get on the ground. The suspect complied and was then placed in handcuffs.

Officers Ted Simmons and William O'Neill arrived on scene. A search of the suspect by Officer Simmons for the drugs exhibited to the victims revealed four round lumps sewn in the waistband of his exterior jacket. The drugs appeared to be marijuana.

Officer Simmons then walked the suspect back to Officer Flaherty's cruiser. During this walk, the suspect freely told Officer Simmons that the jacket was a friend's, then said he doesn't know who owns the jacket.

Officer Simmons tricked the suspect when he asked him what kind of jacket it was and the suspect said, "Woolrich." Officer Simmons asked where he bought it and the suspect said, "A.J. Wright for $40."

The suspect, a 20-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with entering without breaking in the nighttime of a vehicle (person placed in fear), possession of Class D drug with the intent to distribute and possession of Class D drug.

Tax Info Booklet Available At City Hall

Chief Assessor Marion Fantucchio announced an updated booklet outlining tax information for city taxpayers is available now at her office in City Hall or on the board's website.

Fantucchio and Assessor Stephen J. Roche prepared the booklet which was issued Dec. 17.

Taxpayers have three months to file for property tax exemptions which are limited to persons in eligible categories, such as veterans, handicapped persons, and senior citizens. The deadline this year is March 31.

The 24-page booklet outlines the original and new tax exemptions available for senior citizens 65 years of age and older.

Several tax breaks were enacted just months ago when City Council, unanimously, approved proposals by Ward 5 Councilor Doug Gutro and Ward 3 Councilor Kevin Coughlin.

Gutro recommended lowering the age of certain real estate exemptions to 65 years of age and Coughlin introduced temporary exemptions for qualified military personnel active in the Iraq conflict.

Under previous statutes, seniors had to be 70 years of age while the new law reduces the age to 65.

The new tax exemption for certain military personnel serving in Iraq will not be in effect this tax cycle. Such changes must be approved as a Home Rule petition by the state legislature prior to the mailing of tax bills.

Fantucchio said the earliest the military exemption will be in effect would be next January. However, she, also, noted it will be retroactive.

Coughlin and Gutro plan

a joint information meeting for taxpayers prior to tax payment deadline and the Council on Aging provides tax information services for senior citizens.

Exemptions "reduce property tax obligations for certain qualifying taxpayers: elderly persons, blind persons, disabled veterans, surviving spouse, or orphaned minor child, surviving spouse or orphaned minor of police officer or firefighter killed in line of duty and extreme hardship..."

Very few exceptions allow an exemption to reduce the taxpayer's obligations to less than ten percent of the total bill.

In the revised booklet, Fantucchio included information on the state's "Senior Circuit Breaker Tax Credit" which is available to taxpayers 65 years of age and older who rent or own their domicile and whose adjusted income meets the state's criteria.

Under the "circuit breaker," eligible senior citizens may claim a state income tax credit if their real estate taxes, including water and sewer charges, exceed ten percent of their income. The maximum credit allowed is $930.00.

Applications for exemptions must be filed by March 31 while the state's "circuit breaker" is filed with each individual or couple's state tax returns.

The assessors' booklet offers all real estate owners details on assessments and the abatement process including an explanation of assessments.

Fantucchio explained that the abatement and exemption process is different and have different deadlines.

Any homeowner or business owner may file for an abatement which, basically, challenges the assessment or the city's official value of his or her real estate or personal property.

If an abatement challenge is successful, the assessment or value of one's property is lowered and the tax bill is lower. The deadline for filing for an abatement is Feb. 1. However, the real estate tax bill must be paid when due.

The assessors' revised booklet covers 17 subjects ranging from how the assessors determine real estate value to information on the Community Preservation Act and motor vehicle excise taxes.

Five pages detail exemptions and tax deferral opportunities while a full page lists the important dates affecting the real estate tax process.

In addition, taxpayers who can establish severe financial hardship or extreme poverty may be eligible for a tax deferral which allows them to defer a percentage of real estate taxes for several years.

However, such deferrals include an eight percent interest rate, establish a lien on the property and must be repaid in five equal installments beginning two years after the last day of the tax deferral.

For additional information, visit the website, www.ci.quincy.ma.us, call 617-376-1183 or visit City Hall.

Fire Prevention Resolutions For 2009

Here is a list of the New Year's resolutions I discussed last year. If you practice them again, you'll reduce the possibility of accidental fire within your home. Overall, your efforts last year succeeded in doing so.

So let's take this New Year as an opportunity to recommit to a safer home environment. Thank you for doing so.

The 2009 fire prevention list:

I won't leave cooking unattended and if I must for a moment leave the kitchen, I'll bring along evidence of my efforts, a potholder as a reminder.

I won't casually store or place combustibles on the stove top.

I won't leave candles unattended in a room.

When I smoke, I won't do so lying on a couch or mattress.

I will test my smoke detectors monthly, and change the batteries when I change the clocks.

I will test my CO detector monthly and make certain the batteries are changed as well.

I will clean the lint trap in the clothes dryer before or after each use.

I will not leave the house with the clothes dryer left running.

If an electrical plug, cord or appliance is faulty, I will see this as an indication that the same should be retired or repaired before any further use.

I will maintain a 5-foot clearance between my heating system and stored combustibles.

I will occasionally remind all family members of our home emergency evacuation plan and practice it if need be.

I believe if we consciously acknowledge our commitment to safer behavior and practices, they become second nature and habit for us all. So have another great year, while I plan to be here to continue reminding you to have a safe one as well.

I hope my efforts at coaxing; pestering and educating will help you maintain a safer home environment. You deserve it.

Happy New Year!

Nick Puleo won the vacant School Committee seat by a majority vote of a Joint Convention of the City Council to succeed James Timmins, who resigned when he was named city solicitor by Mayor Tom Koch.

The City Council was told that construction costs of the new Quincy High School were running $1.3 million over budget due to sewer and storm drain problems and a fuel oil tank cleanup. New estimates brought the total to more than $100 million.

MITT ROMNEY

However, Mayor Koch succeeded in trimming at least $1.5 million from the cost when he convinced the State School Building Authority that a 60-foot buffer zone between the old building and the new one was no longer required as part of the project.

Larry Prendeville of Marshfield, a Wollaston native with more than 20 years of management experience with one of the nation's largest construction firms, was named Public Works Commissioner.

Quincy voters gave Hillary Clinton a big win over Barack Obama and the edge to Mitt Romney over John McCain in Super Tuesday's presidential primary election. Forty three per cent of the city's 54,594 registered voters turned out.

City Council President Jay Davis proposed that the mayor's two-year term be extended to four years to provide stability and enable the city government to make long term plans.

Police Chief Crowley Retiring June 30

March

The turmoil that gripped the Police Department for the past three years relaxed a bit with the announcement by beleaguered Chief Robert Crowley that he was taking early retirement June 30.

"I did not seem to be getting the support that I deserved," he said and he added quickly, "I don't mean from the mayor's office."

Officer Bruce Tait, president of the Quincy Police Patrol Officers Association, which at time seemed to be in open rebellion against the chief, declined to comment, saying only, "I will have some after he goes."

A seven part mini-series on President John Adams, based on the book by David McCullough and starring Paul Giamatti in the title role and Laura Linney as Abigail, drew rave reviews on HBO and was expected to give a boost to tourism in Quincy.

Some 500 Quincy enthusiasts kicked off the 2008 tourist season at a benefit celebrating the HBO series and heard Congressman Bill Delahunt predict that "this is going to be a huge economic opportunity for our community."

Workers from the Gilbane Building Company placed a fir tree on a beam four stories high above Woodward Avenue, signifying complete of the framework of the science and technology wing of the new $126 million Quincy High School.

Michael Coffey, business manager for the DPW, promised that city officials will have a comprehensive plan to address flooding problems by mid-summer after residents of the 24 flood zones in the city described the chronic flooding that has destroyed their homes and businesses.

Mayor Tom Koch and the Quincy Public Employees Association signed a four-year contract that included annual pay raises of about three per cent and require employees to pay a 10 per cent higher share of health insurance premiums.

Using seized drug money, the Police Department purchased two German shepherd dogs, Bruno and Shaggi, to form a K-nine unit that can sniff out narcotics for the first time in the department's history.

City Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick told the City Council that city department heads have filled jobs that do not exist and "hired (workers) with absolutely no budget for that individual," adding that the practice is "fiscally out of control."

Fitzpatrick and James Fatseas, the mayor's chief of staff, also described an estimated $3.9 million deficit in the water and sewer enterprise account due largely to lagging collections and billing problems.

Ward 4 City Councillor Jay Davis suggested that the city should shut off the water of ratepayers when water and sewer bills are not paid.

Quincy firefighters gifted State Rep Ron Mariano with an official framed, glass-encased firefighters' axe in recognition of his work in obtaining an unused MWRA tunnel rescue truck for their use as a rescue vehicle.

A memorial to the Women of World War II, put together by the seventh grade girls at Broadmeadows Middle School, opened aboard the USS Massachusetts in Battleship Cove, Fall River.

Rebecca Goreham laid claim to being North Quincy High School's best ever girl basketball player when she

Faxon Field Again In Running As New Track Site

April

Faxon Field resurfaced as a potential site for the city's 400-meter track facility after Kristen Powers, executive director of the Park Department, presented a new and positive report to the City Council, reigniting the siting controversy.

Former Mayor William Phelan had recommended the track at Pageant Field and park commissioners and councillors had approved a design and $1 million funding.

Eager to avoid a possible ethical problem, Mayor Tom Koch named Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti to head a group of law enforcement professionals to recommend a successor to retiring Police Chief Robert Crowley.

The ethical problem for the appointment of a new chief was that one of the three eligible captains, Paul Keenan, was the Mayor's brother-in-law. Others in the running were Alan Gillan and Michael Miller.

Following up on a campaign pledge, Mayor Tom Koch named an 18-member task force, headed by Chairman Brian Buckley, to fight the drug problem in Quincy.

"A lot of people have been working hard on this issue for a long time but we need to bring everyone together at one table to start addressing this problem as a community," said Koch.

Quincy's legislative delegation told the City Council they expect the city's schools to get a $1.9 increase in state aid in Fiscal 2009 but after that they forecast economic hardship and new taxes ahead on all levels of government.

Quincy Republicans organized citywide for the first time in eight years and elected Jennifer McCauley Logue chairman of the GOP City Committee, hopefully injecting new life into what had become an all but moribund party.

Mayor Koch disclosed plans to take back the former Myles Standish School building from the Beechwood Community Life Center at 440 East Squantum St. and place the city's long planned Senior Center on the site.

Directors of the State School Building Authority gave the city the green light to go ahead with the process of locating and designing a new building to replace the 113-year-old Central Middle School.

A GMP (Guaranteed Maximum Price) for the new Quincy High School project was fixed at $98,993,615 by the Gilbane Construction Company but the report contained nearly two dozen potential exclusions that could change the final figure.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi filed a resolution to refurbish the deteriorating Abigail Adams Cairn, the spot where Abigail and her son, John Quincy, watched the Battle of Bunker Hill, to make it ready for the upcoming tourist season.

Mayor Koch announced an aggressive $300,000 plan to have major potholes left in city streets by the winter weather filled and fixed on dozens of city streets with the funds going for increased pothole crews, outside contractors and asphalt.

Mayor Tom Koch told the City Council that taxes will increase significantly next year to meet the $233,926,992 budget he submitted for Fiscal 2009.

"Let me make it perfectly clear that, based on the structural deficit I inherited, taxes will need to be substantially this coming year," he said. "This city has been playing a fiscal shell game and it needs to stop."

Some 25 angry West Quincy residents cheered and booed as the City Council discussed a controversial 60-foot billboard that towered over the Southeast Expressway from its base at Biondi's Garage on Willard Street.

A little more than two weeks into the season, tourism in Quincy was up 200 per cent over the previous year, thanks to the mini-series "John Adams" televised on HBO.

An ad hoc committee selected to pick a new chief for Quincy's embattled Police Department named Capt. Paul Keenan, 49, the mayor's brother-in-law, to the $154,000 a year post, succeeding the current chief, Robert Crowley, who retired June 30.

Keenan was picked, said Sheriff Michael Bellotti, head of the selection committee, because he "was more likely to 'breach the barrier' currently existing between the Patrolmen's Union and management."

Three dozen speakers, ranging in age from a teenager to a 93-year-old lifelong West Quincy resident, urged city officials to have removed the lighted 82-foot billboard erected at 313-315 Willard St. They called it a quality of life issue and spoke of being betrayed by their elected officials.

Opposition to the billboard reached such a fever pitch that Code Enforcement Officer Ken Burke felt called upon to issue a dozen warning notices to residents regarding protest signs they put on "telephone poles, trees and other city property."

Ward 4 City Councillor Jay Davis, under fire in his own ward by his constituents, apologized to anyone he may have offended on the issue, saying few people envisioned the size of the mammoth billboard. He described one incident in which he was "shoved down four stairs" by a protester.

Independent auditors from Powers and Sullivan, a Wakefield firm that specialized in municipal audits, was hired to review the details of the city's water and sewer enterprise funds, which have ignited a war of words between Mayor Koch and his predecessor, Mayor William Phelan.

Chief Timothy Pettinelli, a veteran of some 30 years on the Quincy Fire Department, announced his retirement effective July 15, leaving Mayor Koch with two slots to fill as head of the Quincy Fire and Police Departments.

Thanks to the first phase of a major overhaul of Water and Sewer Department operations, Michael Coffey, business manager of the DPW, said bills to the average taxpayer will increase only about $25 per quarter, effective July 1.

"These rate reflect the first major step toward fixing a broken system," he said.

A review of records at City Hall showed that the city owed nearly $50,000 in interest payments to the architects of the new Quincy High School for bills paid late between 2005 and the beginning of 2008, costing taxpayers total interest charges of $49,878.

City Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick resigned to accept a position with the Norfolk County Agricultural High School, joining his friend. Former City Councillor Michael McFarland, the recently appointed headmaster of the Walpole school.

Tom Galvin, whose collection of Quincy post cards appears weekly in The Quincy Sun, was named the second official historian of Quincy, following in the footsteps of William Churchill Edwards.

Director of Inspectional Services Jay Duca ordered a new hearing into the controversial siting of the 82-foot electronic billboard overhanging the Southeast Expressway from a location on Willard Street, West Quincy.

Duca ruled that Media Visions, Inc., owners of the billboard, did not receive two of the required variances from the building code when the Zoning Board of Appeals approved the placement.

"Therefore, you must cease and desist the use of the billboard forthwith," said Duca.

Paul Keenan, 50, the mayor's brother-in-law, took the oath of office as Quincy's 17th police chief, promising to end the fierce controversy between the department's command staff and the patrolmen's union that marred Deputy Joseph Barron was named acting fire chief as Mayor Tom Koch moved to select a successor to retiring Chief Tim Pettinelli.

Anthony "Tony" Tufo, 60, of Wollaston, an officer at Quincy District Court for 16 years, was lost when he fell off the 34-foot pleasure craft Nina Maria into Boston Harbor.

The Park and Recreation Board reaffirmed its support of building a new track facility at Faxon Field as the design firm of Gale Associates began to develop a formal plan for presentation to the School Committee.

But the School Committee voted four to two with one abstention to take Faxon Field off the table as a site for the track.

"This kills Faxon Park for good," said School Committeeman David McCarthy.

"We are fully committed to acting swiftly with a track plan for Faxon Field," said Mayor Tom Koch, despite the fact that the School Board held title to the property.

B.J.'s Wholesale Club management said it plans to break ground for an outlet on the site of the former Patriot Ledger printing plant in Crown Colony in November and open the following August.

Majors Douglas and Linda Jones, co-commanders of the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps, were giving hands-on experience to Kevin and Helen Johnson, cadets interning for commissions as lieutenants.

Former Quincy resident William "Bill" Tucker, 84, was presented the French Legion of Honor medal for bravery in the liberation of France during World War II.

A troop donation drive at the 99th Squantum Fourth of July Parade, sponsored by Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Bruce Ayers collected a wide variety of items for American servicemen in Iraq and Afghanistan.

"We collected enough donations to fill 63 CARE packages and enough monetary donations to cover shipping costs," said Jim Doherty, commander of the Robert I. Nickerson American Legion Post.

State Rep. Ron Mariano, who served 16 years on the School Committee before his retirement in 2005, was voted back on the board by a joint convention of the City Council and the School Committee to succeed Kevin Mulvey.

The convention had their choice of three candidates but Karl Roos dropped out at the last minute and Ellen Mullen could muster only the vote of Council President Jay Davis as Mariano prevailed 12-1 with two voting present.

Mayor Tom Koch presented the City Council with a proposal to create a Municipal Finance Department to provide better oversight and management of city finances as part of his ongoing restructuring of the government.

Only 13.36 per cent of the city's 53,957 registered voters showed up at the polls.

The City Council moved to fight the increased incidence of graffiti defacing traffic signals, electric boxes, mailboxes, and private property through a cleanup campaign and stepped up criminal prosecution.

But the campaign ran into a snag in the U.S. Postal Service since it is against the law for anyone other than postal officials to paint a mailbox and they didn't have the time or money to do the job.

Mayor Warns Council Tough Economic Times Ahead

October

"We're in decent shape. We're not in great shape," Mayor Tom Koch told the City Council in a State of the City message that warned of tough economic times ahead.

"Our revenues and expenditures are right in line," he said. "But we know the situation is fluid," adding that the financial turmoil that is rocking cities and towns across the nation has not struck Quincy --- not yet.

The owner of the controversial 82-foot billboard in West Quincy filed a law suit against the city blaming Mayor Koch for a Zoning Board of Appeals decision declaring the sign illegal.

The Zoning Board had upheld Building Inspector Jay Duca's cease and desist order and the city itself had filed a separate law suit claiming the Massachusetts Outdoor Advertising Board ignored several guidelines when it issued a permit in 2007.

The City Council unanimously passed an ordinance, possibly the first in eastern Massachusetts, banning the sale or giving of knives to persons under the age of 18.

Quincy became the largest city in the Commonwealth to join the state's health insurance program, known as the GIC, when Mayor Thomas Koch and 14 labor leaders binding on the city and its 4,626 employees and retirees.

Quincy, a member of the first graduating class at North Quincy High School in 1934.

Rosemary Kearns of Quincy, retired administrative assistant in the Quincy Public Schools.

R. Donald Thompson Jr., 72, of Hingham, formerly of Quincy, owner of Poopsie's Restaurant in Pembroke.

James Wilson Hayes Jr., 84, of South Kingstown R.I., formerly of Quincy, retired U. S. Navy captain.

November

Sen. Barack Obama of Illinois swept up a rousing 57.89 percent of the vote in Quincy on his way to election as the 44th and first Afro-American president of the United States.

Obama and his running mate, Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware amassed a whopping 22,775 votes in the city to 15,536 for Sen. John McCain of Arizona and Gov. Sarah Palin of Alaska.

The 70.65 percent of the 56,364 registered voters who went to the polls also rejected repeal of the state income tax, approved the decriminalization of marijuana and cast a futile vote against abolishing dog racing.

In other contested races, Sen. John Kerry easily won a seventh six-year term over Republican Jeffrey K. Beatty of Harwich and Quincy's own John Gillis

Mayor Thomas Koch called for a new Civil Service test for fire chief candidates after three of the four who had agreed to accept the job ultimately decided to turn it down if appointed.

Meanwhile, acting Chief Joseph Barron would remain on the job succeeding the retired Chief Timothy Pettinelli until the new test was held and the subsequent Civil Service list could become active in 2009.

Treasurer-Collector Warren Sproul was sworn in as the director of the newly formed Municipal Finance Department with Deborah Coughlin, a former Gillette Company manager, succeeding him as treasurer-collector.

The new department was to assume some of the duties of the city auditor, an appointee of the City Council, but that job was vacant and the Council didn't have the funds to hire even an interim auditor.

A fire shut down half the pellet plant at the former Fore River Shipyard, forcing the MWRA to truck 350 tons of sludge cake through city streets every week for another month or two until the plant is repaired.

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymond called on the MWRA to review its decision to abandon its two-year-old ban on a backup rail system and take the trucks off Quincy streets.

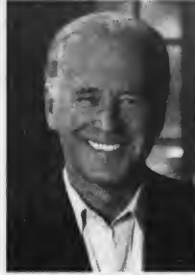

The Massachusetts Outdoor Advertising Board promised to revisit its decision to allow a permit for West Quincy's controversial 82-foot double-sided billboard at a public hearing in December.

The City Council approved increases in fees and fines that could bring an additional $800,000 into the city treasury in Fiscal 2009. New fines included penalties of $35 and $50 for ignoring parking tickets.

Three firefighters were promoted in the Fire Department --- Capt. Paul Griffith to deputy chief, Lt. Joseph Ceurvels to captain and Firefighter George Wirtz to lieutenant.

Navy Lt. Cmdr. Christopher Orlowski, commanding officer of the Navy Reserve Center in Quincy, told the annual Veterans Day observance that the value of reservists too often is lost in the tumult of war.

"The call to mobilize ... often comes with 90 days notice and the individual has to put aside civilian life and do a job that his country needs him to do," he said.

Engineers from Gale Associates unveiled plans for a new regulation sized track on a three-acre site at Faxon Field behind the new Quincy High School. The plan advanced by Mayor Koch, was greeted with some hostility.

The Adams Memorial Society voted to withdraw Peter Boylston Adams' tentative agreement on a plan to build the track at Pageant Field, holding that the area should be "held in perpetuity as open and untouched conservation land."

The annual presidential wreath was laid on the tomb of John Adams in the crypt of United First Parish Church on his 273rd birthday as Albert Ducharme, director of the Historic Interpretive Program, called him the first president committed to education.

State Treasurer Tim Cahill and Michael Verrochi, president of Monadnock Mountain Spring Water, were honored with Good Scout Awards at the Mayor's Boy Scout Breakfast.

Attorney George Burke and the Rev. William McCarthy, founder of Father Bill's Place, were recognized for their service to the community by Bay State Community Services.

Dennis Reidenbach, regional director of the National Park Service, visited the Adams National Historical Park in Quincy and urged the city and the NPS to collaborate in making Quincy a premiere city.

Veteran State Rep. Ron Mariano, recently chosen to fill a vacancy on the School Committee, was honored by the City Democratic Committee with the Dennis Ryan Community Service Award.

The City Council cited Anneli Johnson for her vision and enthusiasm in launching the open air Quincy Farmers' Market a quarter century ago.

Red Sox relief pitcher Manny Delcarmen and Wally the Green Monster were the attractions at the 56th annual Quincy Christmas Festival Parade.

Quincy's Tim Lewis scored three second half touchdowns to lead the Presidents to a 27-17 victory over North Quincy for their 10th consecutive win the annual Thanksgiving Day football game.

Deaths in November included: William Neilson Neil, 85, of Yarmouth, formerly of Quincy, retired executive with Chas. T. Mann, Inc., Engineers for 38 years.

Dr. Daniel Mason Swan, 98, of Quincy, former chief of staff at Quincy City Hospital.

Joseph C. Jackson of Middleborough, formerly of Quincy, retired deputy fire chief.

The City Council unanimously adopted a tax differential of 175 per cent, fixing the residential tax rate for Fiscal 2009 at $12.60 per thousand, up $1.77, and the commercial, industrial and personal property rate at $25.92, up $3.70.

The Council got a wake up call loud and clear as dozens of irate taxpayers packed the council chambers to protest the hike that presented the average homeowner in Quincy, with a home valued at $347,000 with a tax increase of about 15 per cent or $582.

Earlier, Mayor Thomas Koch announced plans to cut $2 million from his budget of $233.9 million, bringing to $5 million the amount

"I heard loud and clear that more cuts ought to be made," said the mayor. "We know people are struggling with this economy. We must make difficult decisions now because all signs point to more difficult decisions in coming months."

Under fire, Mayor Koch said his campaign funds will cover the full cost of his new office carpeting and he will send the new 47-inch flat screen office television set to the new senior center in North Quincy.

The mayor acted in response to critical media reports detailing a total of $60,000 spent on City Hall renovations in the past year while the economy sinks and the average single family homeowner faces an increase of some $500 in real estate taxes this year.

Deputy Fire Chief Gary Smyth filed a complaint with the Civil Service Commission charging that Mayor Koch deliberately violated Civil Service rules when he failed to appoint Smyth to the fire chief's post succeeding Chief Timothy Pettinelli.

Margaret Laforest, a 33-year-old Houghts Neck housewife and events manager, citing the need to "bring young energy to the Council," announced plans to challenge the veteran Leo Kelly for the Ward 1 seat on the City Council.

The City Council voted to abate a portion of real estate taxes for military personnel serving in foreign countries on a basis of need for the period they are deployed overseas.

Mayor Koch formally notified the City Council that he has rejected efforts to increase high-rise density in Business C zones, a blow to developer Thomas O'Connell's plans for a high rise apartment building on Victory Road long opposed by Marina Bay residents.

The City Council approved a plan by Lowe's Home Centers to build and operate a 124,000 square foot home improvement center and a 29,000 square foot garden center off Burgin Parkway in South Quincy.

The Thomas Crane Public Library, designed in Romanesque style by the famed architect H. H. Richardson, won sixth place honors as one of the top ten libraries in the country, according to the Internet's MSN City Guide.

The Rev. Sheldon Bennett, pastor of United First Parish Church, was the featured speaker at a celebration of the 60th anniversary of the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights at the Thomas Crane Library.

The Rev. John Carl Swanson, a Navy veteran chaplain and pastor of the Union Congregational Church of Wollaston, was the guest speaker at a special service commemorating Pearl Harbor Day at the Morrisette Legion Post.

Three-day snow storm dropped up to 18 inches on Quincy but had little effect on well-prepared residents — except if they ran a store that depended on Christmas season shoppers.

"The storm killed business in Quincy Center on an important weekend," said Maralin Manning, director of the Quincy Business Association.

Deaths in December included:

George Page, 87, of Quincy, star basketball player for the Granite Chips team of Quincy.

James D. Gillis, 56, of Milton, formerly of Quincy, first individual with Down Syndrome to become assistant scoutmaster in the Boy Scouts.

Warren E. Houghton, 92, of Squantum, retired chief accountant of the Massachusetts State Lottery Commission.

Helen T. Joseph, 88, of Quincy, beautician and first female masseuse at the Quincy YMCA.

GOUT

Gout is a form of acute arthritis that causes sudden and recurring attacks of severe pain and swelling in the joints. The site most common affected is around the big toe. However, pain can also occur in other joints such as the heel, the ankle, the wrist, and the hand. Attacks of gout usually occur suddenly, without warning, and often during the night. The pain can be so severe that it may not be possible to tolerate putting any weight on the joint or even touching the affected area. The area around the joint may look red and swollen and may feel warm to the touch. Sickness may develop along with a low-grade fever, chills, and a rapid heartbeat. We know it's not easy to ignore the pain of gout and other foot conditions or injuries, especially when every step places weight and pressure on the affected area. Don't wait for the pain and the problem to disappear. It's highly unlikely that they will, and you'll be left with a worse condition than when the problem was still new and relatively minor. Complete foot care is available at our office for everyone in your family, for treatment of a full range of foot concerns. Office hours are available by appointment at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER, as well as at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. PH: 781-986-3668. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals. P.S. The first symptoms of gout may only affect one joint and last for just a few days.

Winter Wake Up For Your Basement

(ARA) - A few years ago you finished your basement. You put in all the hard work to make it a perfect retreat and lounge. But you haven't done a thing with it since. So often, people finish their basements and then forget about any upkeep.

Though the basement is often viewed as a rugged recreational room, it still deserves the same decorative and functional attention as the rest of the home; and the winter months provide the perfect opportunity to tackle some of those projects.

These simple tips will help renew and rejuvenate your basement by making it more usable, durable and inviting for your family and friends. Plus, each project is affordable and won't require excessive work to accomplish. Most can be completed in one weekend, or a few evenings after work.

Paint in the Winter? Yes, You Can

One of the best ways to make your basement look brand new is to repaint. A fresh coat of paint will re-energize the room and provide a whole new feel. And, with newer paints having very low VOC (volatile organic compound) content, it's safe to paint even with the windows closed.

Light It Up, or Down

Basement lighting can be tricky. Trying to balance the volume of light emitted from fixtures ranging from a single pull-chain bulb to fully-integrated recessed canister lights is no easy task. Simple dimmer switches are one of the easiest ways to make sure you can balance a basement lighting scheme at any point in the day.

Dimmer switches allow for a multitude of lighting options, whether you have a windowless basement that is completely lit by artificial lighting, or even if you have a fully finished walk-out basement with large windows and sliding glass doors. Dimmers can be purchased at any hardware store and are quickly and easily installed even by novice electricians and homeowners.

What's Under Foot

Generally, because basement flooring is set on top of concrete slabs, most people opt for heavily padded carpet so they won't feel the rigidity and hardness of the slab. The problem, however, is basement carpeting can become very dirty, worn and outdated rather quickly. The good news is that even if you already have carpet installed, you can update the flooring to a more modern, sophisticated pattern relatively simply and inexpensively.

The Good Kind of Molding

Decorative architectural elements such as baseboards and crown molding can add dramatic effects to a basement, but many homeowners are concerned that using these molding pieces will shrink the appearance of the room. Though it is true that most basements have lower ceilings than the rest of the home, some simple, thin, crown molding creates a very polished look in a basement.

Accenting the crown molding with color-matched baseboards easily turns the basement from a modest recreational area to a coveted destination area for your family and guests.

Each of these basement remodeling options is easily accomplished, no matter how cold it might be outside. The basement is most often a multi-use room, and these simple projects will certainly improve the room's usability, quality and appearance.

Tips To Avoid Home Foreclosure

(NAPS) - There's hopeful news for homeowners who fear they may be facing foreclosure on their home.

That's because there are practical steps they can take — such as a new refinancing program from the federal government — to resolve the problem before it gets to the point where the lender takes over their home for nonpayment.

Here are some tips from the Federal Reserve Board:

- Don't ignore the problem. The further behind you become, the harder it will be to reinstate your loan and the more likely you will lose your home.

If you are unable to make your mortgage payment, contact your lender as soon as you realize you have a problem.

- Open and respond to all mail from your lender.

The first notices you receive will offer good information about foreclosure prevention options that can help you weather financial problems. Later mail may include an important notice of pending legal action. Your failure to open the mail will not be an excuse in foreclosure court.

- You can contact a HUD-approved housing counselor in your area. The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) can connect you with free or very-low-cost housing counseling nationwide. Housing counselors can help you understand the law and your options, organize your finances and help you in negotiations with your lender if you need this assistance.

One option may be to participate in a new program, created by Congress, that is intended to help borrowers at risk of default and foreclosure to refinance into more affordable loans. It's called HOPE for Homeowners, or H4H.

For more information, call (800) 569-4287.

Sleep Apnea and Daytime Fatigue

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have lived with my boyfriend for a year, and we are going to get married soon. One obstacle to marriage for me is his snoring. It's so loud that I cannot sleep with him. He starts out with a soft snore that builds into a sound that rivals a jet engine. He says snoring is a family thing for him.

He is tired all day long. He works hard, comes home, takes a nap, eats and then says he's still tired. He sleeps a lot on weekends, too. Does snoring have anything to do with this? — B.K.

ANSWER: Let me describe sleep apnea, and you judge whether it applies to your fiancé. Typically, it involves snoring that gets louder and louder and then suddenly stops. Silence reigns. After a short while, the snorer makes a grunting sound and the snoring cycle repeats.

The period of silence is the apnea period. "Apnea" means "no breathing." Apnea episodes last 10 or more seconds, and they end when the snorer makes a grunting sound and resumes his snoring. During apnea, blood oxygen content dips, and the dip partially rouses the person to begin breathing.

Sleep apnea is a health menace. The drop in blood oxygen has several important consequences. It affects the heart and can lead to dangerous heart rhythms. People with sleep apnea often develop high blood pressure and all the complications of increased pressure. These people do not get restorative sleep. They feel drugged during the day.

The diagnosis of sleep apnea is made with special studies done in a sleep lab. Portable equipment is available for home testing.

If your fiancé is overweight, weight loss might put an end to snoring and apnea. He should drink no alcohol after 5 p.m. A CPAP (continuous positive airway pressure) machine keeps air flowing past the throat obstruction that blocks its entry into the lungs. Talk your fiancé into discussing these matters with his doctor.

The booklet on chronic fatigue syndrome includes a discussion of sleep apnea. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 304W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32825-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Is eating cereal with added vitamins and minerals as good as taking a vitamin pill each day? — M.L.

ANSWER: Sure it is. A well-balanced diet provides all the needed vitamins and minerals. The catch lies in eating such a diet. Our ancestors survived pretty well without taking vitamin pills.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32825-6475.

Helpful Tips For Preventing, Treating Diabetes

According to the American Diabetes Association (ADA), there are 23.6 million Americans with diabetes, and 5.7 million undiagnosed cases. With a disease that affects so many, it is important to stay aware of the risks and symptoms of diabetes.

What Is Diabetes?

Diabetes, for the most part, comes in two types. Type 1 diabetes, previously known as juvenile diabetes, is most common in children and young adults.

Type 1 diabetes occurs when the body does not produce sufficient insulin. Without enough insulin, the body can not convert glucose, or sugar, and other foods in to energy. As a result, the high levels of glucose in the blood lead to many complications. It is important to be aware of the symptoms of Type 1 diabetes, which can include increased thirst and urination, constant hunger, weight loss, blurred vision and extreme fatigue. These symptoms can develop and progress quickly. If not treated promptly, diabetes can result in a life-threatening diabetic coma.

The second, referred to as Type 2 diabetes, previously called "adult onset", affects more than 90 percent of people with diabetes. Although people with Type 2 diabetes do produce insulin, the body is resistant to its effects. Over time, insulin production decreases. As with Type 1 diabetes, the body becomes more and more unable to use glucose to create energy. The symptoms of this process are similar, but generally more gradual than with Type 1 diabetes.

The disease may present with fatigue, nausea, frequent urination, unusual thirst, weight loss, blurred vision, frequent infections and slow healing of wounds or sores, though some people have no symptoms at all.

How Can I Prevent Diabetes?

Although there are theories, the exact causes of Type 1 diabetes are unknown, making it extremely important to be on the lookout for symptoms, especially in children.

The risk factors for Type 2 diabetes include older age, obesity, a family history of diabetes and physical inactivity; obesity is the most common factor. Along with physical inactivity, obesity is a risk factor that you can control. Talk to your doctor to find out if you are at risk and to learn about healthy eating habits and effective exercise programs.

Type 2 diabetes is increasingly being diagnosed in children and adolescents due to the decreasing levels of physical activity and rising rates of obesity. The Diabetes Prevention Program (DPP), a major federally funded study of 3,234 people at high risk for diabetes, showed that people can delay and possibly prevent the disease by losing a small amount of weight (5 to 7 percent of total body weight) through 30 minutes of physical activity 5 days a week and healthier eating.

How do I treat diabetes?

The most common treatments for Type 1 diabetes are glucose self-monitoring and insulin injections. Talk to your doctor about treatment options.

Treatment for Type 2 diabetes varies and can include both insulin and oral medication options. Speak to your doctor to plan the most effective treatment plan for you.

It is also very important for people with both types of diabetes to control their blood pressure and cholesterol. Routine eye exams, regular foot exams, and monitoring of kidney function are also important to watch for potential complications.

Also, making sure people with diabetes get annual flu shots and have received other vaccinations is important to maintaining health.

Cooped Up, Feeling Down

MADISON, Wis. -- The wind is howling. Temperatures are well below freezing. And you're curled up on the sofa with the cat, a good book and a crackling fire. How could you possibly feel so lousy?

Maybe it's the indoor air that's chock full of allergens or irritants.

"Depending on what you're allergic or sensitive to, winter can be a really awful time of year," says Dr. Robert Bush, allergy and asthma researcher and professor emeritus at the University of Wisconsin School of Medicine and Public Health (SMPH).

Allergens are substances that create an allergic response — material like pet dander, dust mites, mold, mice and cockroaches. Irritants can cause symptoms but not an allergic response. They include dust particles and fine particulates like fuels, gases and odors.

Bush points out one misconception about dust-mite allergies when people are cooped up in winter. He says dust mites can be less of a problem in winter as compared to more moderate times of the year.

"Dust mites thrive in humidity. When you turn on the heating system, the air dries out and dust mites die," says Bush.

Even so, some dust mites can survive and a tidy but closed-up house may provide plenty of troubling allergens.

Recent research shows the average home can have several potential allergy sources. A study in the March, 2008 issue of the Journal of Allergy and Clinical Immunology said 52 percent of American homes have six or more allergens and 46 percent had three or more at high levels.

"If you're having allergy symptoms, it's tough to pinpoint the source unless you get an allergy skin test or blood test," says Bush.

Bush says if you have identified what's bothering you, there are a number of steps to reduce allergy triggers or irritants in your home:

Control Humidity Levels

Bush says ideally, home humidity levels should range between 30 to 40 percent. Providing an environmental balance with humidity is especially important in bedrooms.

Remove or Change Things that Harbor Allergens

The American Academy of Allergy, Asthma and Immunology (AAAAI) says carpet removal can make a big difference. For dust mites, encase pillows and mattresses in anti-allergy pillowcases and covers. Wash rugs and bedding regularly in hot water.

Monitor Heating and Air-Exchange Systems

Replace furnace filters regularly. Have a heating and air-conditioning engineer check your home's air exchange rate.

Watch for and Eliminate Mold Sources

Bush says if there is a mold level in your home during winter, there is an indoor source like a water leak or standing water. The only way to eliminate mold is to remove the moisture that's causing it. A musty or moldy smell alone doesn't necessarily mean your home has a mold problem.

Avoid Allergy Sources

If you're allergic to pet dander, the only effective way to eliminate the allergen is to keep pets out of the house. Bush says it takes six months to clear a home of allergy sources from pets. If removing the pet is not practical, keep it outdoors and out of the bedroom as much as possible.

Take Care When Vacuuming

Bush says there isn't much research on the effectiveness of HEPA-filtered vacuum cleaners. He says this type of vacuum might reduce pet-allergen exposure but not necessarily dust mites. There's evidence that a regular vacuum cleaner with a double-layered bag could help with dust mites. Since vacuuming flings dust and particles into the air, it might be helpful to wear a mask while vacuuming.

GUM DISEASE LINKED WITH RHEUMATOID ARTHRITIS

While few people would readily associate gum disease with rheumatoid arthritis (RA), researchers have recently done just that. Rheumatoid arthritis is an autoimmune disease that is characterized by the body confusing healthy tissues with foreign substances and attacking itself. Those with RA experience pain, stiffness, and swelling in multiple joints and, in some cases, inflammation in other organs. With this in mind, researchers surveyed the oral health of RA patients between the ages of 45 and 84 and found that they experienced gum disease at more than twice the rate seen in the general population. This finding should prompt RA sufferers to pay more attention to their oral health and schedule regular visits to the dentist for examination. Your dentist understands any dental related complications that could occur and wants to help. To schedule an appointment, please call us at 617-479-6220. Rely on us to answer all your questions about dental treatments and procedures. Common sense tells us that regular dental care is more rewarding and less costly than correcting problems if they are left to linger. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we provide complete, high quality dental care, using the most modern procedures. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

Confidence, Learning Basics Keys For Woodward Basketball

By SEAN BRENNAN

The development of a number of underclassmen and the leadership of the more experienced players will define just how good of a season the Woodward School for Girls basketball team will have this winter.

Coming off an impressive 12-5 season in 2007-08, the Wildcats, this season, are going back to the basics. Which means lots of practice of the fundamentals, an understanding that some games may be less about winning and more about improving and, in the end, having fun playing with a defensive tenacity that the Boston Celtics would be proud to call their own.

According to head coach Bob Giordano; his team will lean on senior captains Alanna Melendez and Tatianna Rosado and junior captain Sarah Bender this season. These three will be responsible for providing steady leadership and game experience.

"This is the most inexperienced team we have had at Woodward in many years. We have five seniors but the only basketball player is Alana. But she went down with a knee injury two years ago and hasn't played a game since.

"The other four, Tatianna, Lex (Alexa DeCarr), Malika (Weekes) and Alicia (Jean-Jocelyn) are all-stars in other sports but are not really basketball players. Besides Alana, some of our best players are seventh graders. Ava Small, a seventh grader, will be a starter and if she stays at Woodward throughout high school she may be the best player we have ever had.

"But the kids know what we have here. It will be a year of learning the basics of basketball on offense, but on defense we should be strong."

Woodward, which plays in the highly competitive Independent Girls Conference (IGC), should be able to win games against some lesser opponents, but Giordano does not kid himself when it comes to some of the stronger teams in the IGC.

"The top three or four teams will probably smoke us, but if we get better by learning this season, next year and the season after we will be a very, very good team.

"What I did was hold 15 kids and each practice we break up the team and hold two different types of practices. The younger players are learning how to play the game, but these kids are working hard and will get better. But right now, practice is 90% teaching and 10% coaching."

According to Giordano the plan during games is to mix and match his upperclassmen and underclassmen, with the hope that the upperclassmen's experience and leadership will come into play on the court.

"We are going to let them take their lumps in games but we are not going to hurt our chances moving forward. What I am trying to get out of my seniors is to show the other kids how to play with maturity and confidence. There are kids on the bench who are better than some of the seniors but they cannot perform on the court because they do not have that game experience yet. I am trying to bring them along slowly and not put them in a situation where they can lose a game for us. One by one we will integrate them into games and go from there."

First of Three Scheduled Games

Presidents One Goal Better Than Raiders; Win 4-3

Two weekends ago at the Quincy Youth Arena, the Quincy Presidents and the North Quincy Red Raiders meet for the first of three scheduled meetings this winter; the Presidents came away winners, 4-3.

This game, which did not count towards the league standings in the Patriot League, was held as a benefit game for the Patrick White Foundation.

Quincy, behind the goal-tending of junior Leroy Wallace jumped out to a 4-0 lead, before having to hold on for the 4-3 victory. Junior forward TJ Higgins's pass to Shawn Dowling produced the first goal of the game in the first period and senior Mark Gilbody made it 2-0 with a goal early in the second period off an assist from junior Kevin Keith.

The Presidents continued the scoring barrage later in the second period when Gilbody (off another assist from Keith) scored his second goal of the game to give Quincy a 3-0 lead. Junior forward Seamus McKenna gave Quincy a 4-0 lead with a breakthrough later in the period.

The Raiders, facing a four-goal deficit, finally got on the board late in the second period. Senior forward Brian McLean scored with five minutes to play in the period and after two periods Quincy held a 4-1 advantage.

Jocelyn, Shannon Leary, Malika. Third row: Antoinette Jean-Louis, Mariana Verenis, Joe's Lee Brack, Emma Whatley, Amanda Rowan, Ava Small and head coach Bob Giordano.

SUN SPORTS

For the Melendez, Rosado and Bender, as team captains, it will be their responsibility to keep the team competitive and excited to play even in the worst of times.

"I think we are going to play good defense and hopefully our shooting will get better, but it will be our job to get the best out of the team this season," said Bender.

"I feel over the season we should get better. But we are very inexperienced without a doubt but with more experience we should get better," said Melendez. "I am coming off an injury so I haven't played since my sophomore year. It will be a learning year, but we are going to go out each game and play hard and get better as the season moves along."

"I am looking forward to the competition on the court this year and having fun," added Rosado. "We all get along with each other and we are there to act as role models for the rest of the team. We cannot allow the team to feel bad for about themselves because we need to be in the games and practices together. We just need to go out and play hard and have fun."

QYB Donates $2,600 To NQHS Baseball, Softball

Quincy Youth Baseball and President Sandy Verhault have donated $2,600 to the North Quincy High School baseball and softball programs.

This $2,600 grant will allow the teams to purchase artificial turf hitting mats in the NQHS Gymnasium batting cages. The turf will help to preserve the newly furnished gym floor and will allow the baseball and softball teams to practice and prepare for the upcoming season throughout the winter.

"Our program is very appreciative of Quincy Youth Baseball's generous donation," said NQ head baseball coach John Fidalgo. "Many of our players have come up through Quincy Youth Baseball and even after they move forward in their baseball careers, we can see the benefits of Quincy Youth Baseball to the players."

Close to 100% of the players in the North Quincy baseball program, as well as four members of the coaching staff, grew up playing Quincy Youth Baseball. Beginning at age 6 with the Junior Farm League, players develop the skills that can help make the transition to high school or even college level of play.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

As we go through life what we think and what we do has an effect on the lives of others. We may think we have little or no influences, but we do, and we usually underestimate this. Each day we live we touch the lives of others.

Each life we touch changes because of us. Many of the lives we touch throughout our existence will neither benefit or be harmed because of us. But, again, we have more power than we think we do and most of the time we never know how we influence the lives of others for the better.

DON MCCARTHY
Managing Director

What we do does matter to our family and friends, to our communities and to our county... What our county does influences our region and our state... Our state is one way or another touches the lives of the rest of the people living in the United States... And the people of the United States have, and will in the years to come, have a major impact on all the other people in the world. Get the picture?

Our resolution for 2009 should be to make the world a better place to live. Let's all do our part. Yes, our world can be changed for the better, but only if we, each of us, decide it can...

GO FIGURE!

by Linda Thiele

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be busier than you had expected right now. But between the socializing rounds and the workplace tasks, there are opportunities for special moments with that certain someone.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your creative approach leads to a quicker-than-expected solution to a workplace problem. Now you can devote more time to that proposal you hope to introduce by midmonth.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Technological glitches create problems early on. But by midweek, all runs smoothly once again, and you're well and truly on your way toward meeting all your deadlines.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your energy levels are high, and you feel you can handle everything that comes along. But try to take a break from your hectic pace for some quiet time with someone close to you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Before you pounce on that shiny new opportunity, take more time to check it out to see how much substance actually lies beneath all that glitter. A family member has important news.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A personal situation you thought was resolved resurfaces, thanks to a possibly well-intentioned move that went awry. Deal with it as soon as possible. Accept the help of a trusted friend.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) That goal you set way back when is finally in sight. Maintain your focus on achieving it, and don't allow yourself to be distracted by unimportant demands for your attention.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A temperamental flare-up creates negative feelings that need to be dealt with immediately. But things once again go well after the apologies are made and hurt feelings are soothed.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) An early impulsive act causes confusion. But all is smoothed over once explanations are made. Expect a friend or family member to ask for your kind and always wise advice.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might have to do some juggling of your priorities, as a personal matter appears to require more time and attention. Put your pride aside and accept help from those who offer it.

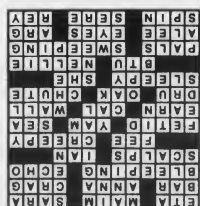

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your creative aspect is strong. Not only does it help you accomplish your goals, but it also inspires others. This could lead to a potentially rewarding collaboration opportunity.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Be careful about making major decisions when you're not really committed to them. And resist any pressure to do otherwise. Better to delay action until all doubts are resolved.

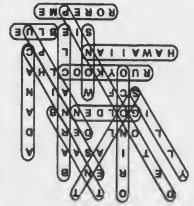

BORN THIS WEEK: You set goals and are rarely distracted by any attempt to move off the path you've chosen to reach them.

Elks Entertain Seniors At Christmas

Some 180 seniors from around the city attended a Christmas dinner and dance given by the Quincy Lodge of Elks at its Quarry Street lodge. The guests were served meals of boneless breast of chicken with glaze and vegetables by members of the Lodge and danced to the music of a disc jockey.
